

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

LEXICON TO ÆSCHYLUS

CONTAINING

PASSAGES IN THE SEVEN TRAGEDIES.

REV. WILLIAM LINWOOD, M.A., M.R.A.S.

STUDENT OF CHRIST CHURCH, OXFORD.

TAYLOR AND WALTON,
UPPER GOWER STREET.

M.DCCC.XLVII.

PRINTED BY JOHN WERTHEIMER AND CO.,
CIRCUS PLACE, FINCHBURY CIRCUS.

PREFACE.

THIS Lexicon was some time ago announced for publication, and the earlier sheets committed to the press, when from unavoidable circumstances the work was suspended, and the MS. laid aside. Several alterations and additions have been made on resuming the correction of the press; and in a very few instances, it may be observed, that the opportunity has been taken of revising or modifying a statement made in the earlier pages of the work, when further consideration had led to the adoption of an opinion different to the one originally proposed.

The object of this work, besides furnishing an interpretation of the words and ordinary phraseology of the author, is to explain the difficulties of the text; meaning, of course, by difficulties, such as would present themselves to students possessed of that previous degree of knowledge without which it is presumed that no one would attempt to read Æschylus. The explanation of matters belonging to History, Geography, and Antiquities has been seldom touched upon, as being a province wholly distinct in its character, and requiring to be separately treated: information sufficient for all general purposes on the latter of these subjects will be found in the Dictionary of Antiquities lately brought out by the publishers of this work: and two similar works on the subjects of Mythology and Geography, if completed with equal ability, will supply, with the former, a desideratum long felt in this department of classical literature.

It will hardly be thought, by those who are competent to form an opinion upon the subject, that a work like the present is a superfluous addition to what has already been written upon Æschylus. Such especially as have undertaken to read this author without assistance, must have felt how often they have been driven upon their own resources, and how much not only of apparent but of real difficulty has been left unexplained. It is not denied, that they who will be at the pains to work out the meaning for themselves by patient investigation, may derive greater benefit by the exercise than they who depend upon the assistance of a commentator: but to do so with certainty requires an amount of scholarship not often met with amongst younger students; and, whilst a few may reap more solid advantage from the very scantiness of the help afforded them, by the majority the Author will either be unread, or, if read at all, be in danger of being continually misunderstood.

It is not pretended that in this Lexicon the student will find a full solution of every difficulty. It may, however, be honestly asserted that no passage has been designedly passed over where any real obscurity exists: in all such, except from unintentional omission, either an explanation has been given, or the nature of the difficulty stated. This, of course, does not apply to those passages so obviously corrupt, that to attempt to explain them in their present state would be a mere waste of time, and an unprofitable exercise of ingenuity.

An Index is given at the end of the volume, in which are noted those passages of which a fuller or more particular explanation was likely to be wanted: by consulting this, the student will be able to use the Lexicon as a running commentary on the text; and this plan will possibly be found the more advantageous of the two, since, from the degree of trouble it involves, it will prevent recourse being had to it except in cases of real difficulty. The references are given to the text of Wellauer, as perhaps on the whole the least objectionable of the complete editions of Æschylus for the use of younger students. References have, however, been given also to five of the plays as edited by Dr. Blomfield *.

In passages evidently corrupt, the most probable conjectural emendations have been recorded, and occasionally recommended for adoption; a list of which will be found at the end of the book. Many passages, however, where the vulgar reading, though not so obviously incorrect, has been nevertheless believed to be corrupt, have been left untouched, from a desire not to encumber with a display of critical ostentation a work principally intended for younger students. A few original emendations have been suggested, chiefly such as have occurred in carrying the work through the press: they are, however, merely offered as conjectures, which every one is at liberty to reject upon the production of better, and which can hardly be chargeable with presumption when not rashly obtruded upon the text.

It may be necessary to claim the indulgence of the reader for many typographical errors, which it is feared may remain uncorrected. The manuscript having been almost entirely recomposed whilst passing through the press, and the correction of the sheets having to be simultaneously performed without any kind of assistance, and frequently under circumstances the most unfavorable, it may be supposed that the weariness attendant on such a task may have led to some occasional oversights. This may be peculiarly the case in the earlier sheets, which were corrected under great indisposition. It is believed, however, that these errors are for the most part only of such a nature as will at once explain themselves to those at all acquainted with the subject; and it has not, therefore, been considered necessary to encumber the volume with a list of errata, which it would have taken much time to prepare, and to which few probably would have been at the trouble to refer.

It remains only to express a hope that this work, imperfect as in many respects it is, may not be without advantage to those who desire an accurate acquaintance with that language whose magnificent remains, though mutilated by the ravages of time, and by the ignorance of still more merciless transcribers, must for ever form the basis of all sound and liberal education: a language which, to whatever theme or subject it be applied—whether breathing from the harp of Sappho, or pealing with the thunder of Demosthenes—stands unrivalled beneath the sun for glory and for beauty, and which contains the record, not only of the most illustrious achievements which the world has ever witnessed, but of the most ennobling sentiments of which the human heart is capable, and the sublimest speculations which human reason has produced.

LONDON, April 1843.

In preparing a second edition of this work for the press, the Lexicon has been throughout revised and corrected by the Author, and a considerable quantity of additional matter introduced. It is hoped that, in its present state, it will be found to contain all which the student can ordinarily require for the elucidation of Æschylus.

The text of Professor Dindorf being now very generally used in the Universities, references have been also given to this text in all the more important passages. These have been arranged in the Index along with the references to Wellauer; the Lexicon may, therefore, now be used with equal facility as a commentary with either of these editions.

September 1847.

P.S. — In a somewhat obscure passage, Ag. 606. (620. Dind.) perhaps for τὰ ψευδῇ καλὰ we should read τὰ ψευδῇ καλά. This will then correspond with κεδνὰ τάληθῇ in the rejoinder of the Chorus v. 608. and the sense will be, Were I to state what is agreeable, I could not state the truth, so as to insure to my friends the continuance of the pleasure. To this the Chorus replies, Would, indeed, that in stating the truth, you might say what is agreeable: for these things, if divided (that is, a pleasant statement but not a true one), cannot long be concealed: vv. 606, 608 and 607, 609, correspond respectively to each other. The inverted order of the words κεδνὰ τάληθῇ in v. 608. by which the stress is laid on κεδνὰ as a predicate of τάληθῇ, seems to favour this conjecture.

For the advantage of younger students, the quantity of the long penultimate has been marked.* In order to save room, the derivations of words have not generally been given, as they will, for the most part, readily suggest themselves to any one moderately acquainted with the language. For the same reason, in the case of some words of continual recurrence, e. g. βροτός, καί, τέ, and the like, the references have occasionally been curtailed, where no disadvantage was likely to arise from their omission.

* Some dissyllable words with long penult. should have had this mark supplied for the sake of uniformity, e. g. ἀγή, ἀμός, ἄτη, δαλός, δύνειν, δριμύς, θύειν, θυμός, ἰός, ἰποῦν, κινεῖν, κλίνειν, κριθᾶν, λιμός, ταγεῖν, etc. Also some proper names, e. g. Ἀσίς, Ἰώ, Λυδός, Μυσός, Μινώς, Πυθώ, etc.

ERRATA.

- Page 9 a. line 34, for “θεμίστως,” corr. “θεμιστῶς.”
 — 18 b. — 12, for “ἐπαλξέων,” corr. “ἐπάλξεων,” and again lines 32 and 35.
 — 62 a. — 23, for “ἄψυχος,” corr. “ἄψυχος.”
 — 81 b. — two lines from bottom, the words “pass. P. 271.” etc. should come after “ἄζεται.”
 — 122 b. — 2, for “ἐκφυσᾶν,” corr. “ἐκφῦσᾶν.”
 — 159 b. — 8, for “ἔμφρον, Aurat.,” corr. “ἔμφρον’ Aurat.”
 — 168 b. under ἡμέτερος add “Dor. S. 527. P. 142. where Blomf. rightly corrects ἡμέτερον.”
 — 183 b. 9, from bottom, “ἱστοτριβής,” corr. “ἱστοτριβής.”
 — 240 b. line 35, for “Νίσος,” corr. “Νῖσος.”
 — 241 a. — 23, for “Butl. conj. ἡλθέτην ὁμοῦ,” corr. “Butl. conj. ὁμοῦ. ἡλθέτην Elmsl.”
 — 245 b. — 13, for “αἰρήσει νέον,” corr. “αἶρεσθαι μέγαν.”
 — 336 b. — 35, for “ὑπερπολύς,” corr. “ὑπέρπολυς.”

LEXICON.

⁸ Αβατος untrodden, pathless, P.V. 2. Blomfield from Phavorinus s. v. ἀβρότη νύξ, reads ἄβροτος. So Schol. Venet. ad. Il. ἔ.78. Eustath. Suid. MS. C.C.C. Oxon. The vulg. is probably correct.

⁹ Αβλάβεια (?) security. In A. 995. ἐπ' ἀβλαβείᾳ is read by Hermann, whom Blomfield and Wellauer follow. See under εὐλάβεια.

¹³ Αβροβάτης walking delicately. P. 1029. an epithet of the Persians.

sufficiently applicable to the lamentations of the youthful brides of the Persians. The reason assigned by Blomfield, that ἀβροχίτωνας follows so soon after, seems little to the purpose, repetitions of the same word being very common in Æschylus.

¹⁵ Αβροδιαίτος softly living, P. 41. an epithet of the Lydians. Cf. Herod. 1. 155.

¹⁶ Αβρότιμος soft and costly, A. 675. Here Salmasius conj. ἀβροπήνων, h. e. rich in texture. So Pors. Blomf.

¹⁷ Αβροχίτων covered with soft clothing, P. 535.

²¹ Αγαθός good. h. e. virtuous, S.c.T. 592. — brave, S.c.T. 577. P. 882. 929. 949. — clever, A. 769. — favourable, auspicious, kind, P. 838. A. 151. 733. 1103. E. 841. 931. 943. 966. S. 621. 944. P. 214. In A. 1240. (1267 D.) the vulg. ἵτ' ἐς φθόρον πεσόντ' ἀγαθὸν δ' ἀμείψομαι is opposed both to the sense and metre. Jacob reads πεσόντα γ'.

ἰδ' ἀμείψομαι, which Blomfield has adopted. Heath, πεισόντ' ἐγὼ δ' ἀμείψομαι, h.e., and I will perish in my turn, which is very harsh. Schütz, ἀγαθὰ δ' ἀμείψομαι, h.e. I will return the benefits received. Wellauer, in defiance of the anapæst, conjectures ἀγάθ' ἰδ' ἀμείψομαι, with the same sense. An anonymous conjecture, adopted by Scholefield, appears more probable than any of these, ἐγὼ δ' ἄμ' ἔψομαι, which accords very well with the general sense of the passage.

Ἀγάλακτος A.700.(718.D.) either, suckled along with others, which is the meaning generally assigned to the word by etymologists, the α being equivalent to ὁμοῦ: so Valck.; or, as some consider it, not suckled with milk: so Passow. The latter appears preferable, the epithet being applied to a lion's cub brought up, not in the usual way by its mother, but with the children of a family, and hence said to be ἀγάλακτος. Blomfield translates, a foster-brother, in accordance with the former meaning. If the latter be correct, the epithet φιλόμαστον will merely denote the tender age of the cub.

Ἀγαλμα an ornament, an embellishment. τέκνον, δόμων ἄγαλμα A.201. ἵππους, ἄγαλμα τῆς ὑπερπλοῦτου χλιδῆς P.V.464. ῥυσίβωμον Ἑλλάνων ἄγαλμα δαιμόνων E.881. ἱκετηρίας, ἀγάλματ' αἰδοίου Διός S.189. ἀκασκαῖον ἄγαλμα πλούτου A.721. said of Helen, the pride of the wealthy Paris. ἄγαλμα τύμβου C.198.(200.D.) an honour to the tomb. Here ἄγαλμα is the accus. referring to συμπενθεῖν ἐμοί. Scholefield rightly translates, quod esset honori. See Matth. Gr. Gr. 431.5. — an image of a deity. S.c.T.240.247. E.55. The meanings of ἄγαλμα are thus traced by Ruhnken on Timæus, s. v. “ἀγάλλειν proprie est nitidum reddere, sic aliquid exornare, ut oculos grata sui specie exhilaret. Vim verbi ἀγάλλειν retinet inde ortum ἄγαλμα, recteque adeo ab antiquis grammaticis exponitur καλλώπισμα πᾶν ἐφ' ᾧ τις ἀγάλλεται καὶ χαίρει. Qua sola notione ab Homero positum esse recte monet Eustathius. Tragici sæpe dicunt liberos parentum ἀγάλματα, delicias, oblectamenta, ut Eurip. Suppl. 367. — Sed quoniam in statu is præcipuum ornamentum est, ἄγαλμα proprie de his usurpari cœpit. — Sæpe veteres scriptores ἀγάλματα a picturis distinguunt. — Neque tamen perpetuum hoc discrimen est. — Imprimis autem frequens hujus vocis usus est de donariis numini alicui consecratis, et de Deorum simulacris.”

Ἀγαμεμνόνιος of Agamemnon. Ἀγαμεμνονίαν ἄλοχον A.1480. the wife of Agamemnon. Ἀγαμεμνονίων οἶκων C.848. the house of Agamemnon. For this use of adjectives derived from proper names, see Matth. Gr. Gr. 446. 10; and on the different forms, Ἀγαμεμνόνειος, -ιος, and -εος, see Lobeck on Soph. Aj. v.108.

In A.1313.(1340D.) ποινὰς θανάτων ἄγαν ἐπικρανεῖ, the vulg. violates both the sense and the metre. Hermann omits ἄγαν (omitted also by Ven. Flor.) and reads ἐπικραίνει. H. Voss ἄταν τε κρανεῖ, which Blomfield adopts. It is possible that ἄγαν may have arisen from the careless repetition of the preceding syllable ατων. Dindorf, rejecting ἄγαν, thinks the penultimate in ἐπικρανεῖ may be long. Cf. Eumen. 885. ed. Linwood. In E.904.(944.D.) for μηλά τ' εὐθενούντ' ἀγαν, Dobree conjectures εὐθενούντα γὰ, which is highly probable.

sciscitetur et inquirat. Blomfield compares the expression οὐδὲν οἶον ἔστ' ἀκοῦσαι Arist. Av.967. Herm. Obs. Critt. p.121. objects to this use of ὡς, and proposes a remedy which is not less objectionable; ὡς αὐτὸς αὐτῶν ἄνδρα πεύθεσθαι παρεῖ, h. e. non usus est nunciis quum ipse adsis, ut hospitem de rebus illis interroges. Schütz's conjecture and explanation seems upon the whole the best. The expression is a general one, ἄνδρα being used as in Soph. Œd. T.315. ἄνδρα δ' ὠφελεῖν ἀφ' ὧν ἔχοι τε καὶ δύναιτο κάλλιστος πόνων. The construction apparently is οὐδὲν σθένος ἀγγέλων (τοιούτὸν ἔστιν) ὡς ἄνδρα αὐτὸν πεύθεσθαι περὶ αὐτῶν. This use of ὡς may perhaps be illustrated by that in Act. Apost. 20. 24, although no great authority in such matters: οὐδὲ ἔχω τὴν ψυχὴν μου τιμᾶν ἐμαυτῷ ὡς τελειῶσαι τὸν δρόμον μου μετὰ χαρᾶς. The passage is usually considered corrupt, and undoubtedly is so; but the vulg. perhaps may mean, I, although extremely noble in respect of my origin, am without a country, h. e. am an exile from my country, referring to the preceding μήποτε πάλιν ἴδοιμι κ.τ.λ. The word ἄγειος is without authority, but may be formed from α and γῆ, as εὐγειος, βαθύγειος, ἐπίγειος, etc. Bothe proposes Ἀργεῖος for ἄγιος. Cf. ἄγιος.

Ἀγείτων without a neighbour, solitary, P.V. 270.

Ἀγέλαστος not to be laughed at.

ἀγέλαστοις ξυμφοραῖς C. 30. — not laughing. ἀγέλαστα πρόσωπα A. 768. On the active or passive force of verbals see under νάρθηκοπλήρωτος.

Ἄγῃ a fragment. ἀγαῖσι κωπῶν P. 417.

Ἄγῃ jealousy. ἄγα θεόθεν A. 130. the jealousy of the gods; restored by Hermann for the vulg. ἄτα which violates the metre. ἄσα Burn. Elmsl. ad Eur. Med. 240. — a mischievous or spiteful act. μηλοφόνοισιν ἀγαισι A. 712. (730.D.) So Hermann for vulg. ἄταισιν, which again violates the metre. Pauw and Schütz read μηλοφόνοις ἄταισι. Butler ἄταις μηλοφόνοισι. Klausen ἀγαῖσιν from ἀγῇ, quoting Gramm. Sang. 336. Bekk. ἀγαί· οἱ τραγικοὶ τὰς τρώσεις οὕτως ἐκάλουν καὶ τὰ τραῦματα· καὶ γὰρ τὸ τραῦμα οἶον κάταγμα γίνε-ται. This is somewhat like the Homeric usage, e.g. Il. E. 161. ὥς δὲ λέων ἐν βουσί θορῶν ἐξ αὐχένα ἄξῃ πόρτιος ἢ βούος. Cf. also frangere in Horace, Od. i. 23. 11. non ego te tigris ut aspera Gætulusve leo frangere persequor. But the first syllable in ἀγῇ is long. A probable conjecture suggested by Prof. Malden is μηλοφόνοισιν ἄσαισι.

Ἀγῆνωρ brave, manly, S.c.T. 117.

Ἄγιος a var. lect. in S. 838. See ἄγειος. Porson on Eur. Orest. 750. observes, that ἄγιος is very seldom used by the Attics, and never by the tragic writers.

Ἀγκάλη the arm. ἐν ἀγκάλαις λαβῶν S. 476. taking in the arms. ἔσκ' ἐν ἀγκάλαις A. 705. was carried in the arms. Metaph. πετραία ἀγκάλη P.V. 1021. a rocky embrace. ποντία ἀγκάλοι C. 580. the bosom of the ocean.

Ἀγκρισις (contr. for ἀνάκρισις) a judicial inquiry: a legal term, strictly meaning the inquiry instituted before the magistrate previous to the regular trial, answering to the Latin Divinatio. μηδ' ἐς ἀγκρισιν ἐλθεῖν sc. Θεούς E. 342. (362. D.) and that they should not engage in any judicial inquiry; by which the chorus expresses its desire that the gods should not take cognisance of those matters which it belonged exclusively to their prerogative to investigate.

Ἄγκυρα an anchor. Met. ὦρα ἐμπόρους μεθιέναι ἀγκυραν ἐν δόμοισι πανδόκοις ξένων C. 651. to put up for the night.

Ἄγκυρουχία the standing of a ship at anchor, S. 747.

Ἀγλαῖσμα an embellishment, a pleasing object. οὐ Σύριον ἀγλαῖσμα δώμασιν A. 1285. no Syrian odour. In C. 194. said of the offering of hair on the tomb of Agamemnon.

Ἀγναμπος inflexible. θέμενος ἀγναμπον νόον P.V. 163. This verse does not correspond with the strophe δέδια γὰρ ἀμφὶ σαῖς τύχαις. Pauw and Hermann conj. τιθέμενος. Arnald θέμενος ἀγναμπον τὸν νόον, which is objectionable, on account of the shortening of the word before γν. See Porson on Hec. 302. Dawes Misc. Crit. p. 196. Porson appears rightly to correct in the strophe δέδια δ'.

Ἀγνεύειν to be pure from guilt, with gen. ὄρνιθος ὄρνις πῶς ἂν ἀγνεύοι φαγών; S. 223. how could a bird be free from guilt as touching another, having devoured it?

Ἀγνισμα an expiatory offering, ματρῶν ἀγνισμα κύριον φόνου E. 315. poetically for ματρῶν ἀγνισμα φόνου. Cf. not. on Eum. 283. ed. Linw.

Ἀγνοια ignorance. ἀγνοία A. 1578. in ignorance, unawares. ἀγνοίας ὕπο S. 494.

Ἀγρονόμος dwelling in the fields, A. 140. For the accent upon this and similar words, see Lobeck on Soph. Aj. p. 230.

Ἀγρότης (?) a commander, P. 963. Toup proposes ἀγρέται from Hesych. ἀγρέταν, ἡγεμόνα, θεόν. Thus we have ἰππαγρέτης. Blomf. conj. ἀρχέται. Rob. has ἀκρόται. So M.

Ἀγρυπνος never sleeping, P. V. 358.

Ἀγυιάτης [ā] A. 1051. 1056. an epithet of Apollo as the guardian deity of streets, to whom an altar called ἀγυιεύς was placed before the street doors at Athens. Hesych. Ἀγυιεύς. ὁ πρὸ τῶν θυρῶν ἐστὼς βωμὸς ἐν σχήματι κίονος. Cf. Arist. Vesp. 875. ὦ δέσποτ' ἀναξ, γείτον Ἀγυιεύ, τοῦ μοῦ προθύρου προκύλαιε. Apollo himself was also called Ἀγυιεύς — Cf. Hor. Od. iv. 6. 26. Lævis Agriæu. Ἀγυιεύ τ' is the common reading in this passage, but τε is unintelligible. ἀγυιά τ' M. whence Herm. rightly conj. ἀγυιᾶτ'.

Ἀγύρτρια a female mendicant, A. 1248. The masc. form is ἀγύρτης from ἀγείρω. This word was peculiarly used of those who collected a contribution from the bystanders at religious shows. Ruhnken, on Tim. s. v. ἀγείρουσαν. ὡς ἱερείαν περιερχομένην, observes, "Plena locutio ἀγείρειν χρήματα, βίον, σιτία, tam nota est, nullis ut opus sit scriptorum testimoniis. Ne absolutum quidem ἀγείρειν pro mendicando colligere valde rarum est. — Scilicet in variis artibus quibus sacrificuli simplicis plebeculæ pecunias ad se derivarent, non postrema hæc erat. Ἀγχίαλος near the sea. P. 861. Upon this epithet as applied to islands, see Lobeck on Soph. Aj. 135.

Ἀγχίπολις near the city. S.c.T. 483. an epithet of Minerva as worshipped at Thebes. She is called πύλαισι γείτων v. 486.

Ἀγχιστος nearest, next in order. τὸ δ' ἄγχιστον Ἀπίας γαίας μονόφρουρον ἔρκος A. 248. (256 D.). Here Schütz, referring the words to Clytæmnestra, as being γαίας μονόφρουρον ἔρκος in the absence of her husband, understands ἄγχιστον to mean near, i. e. approaching. Others apply the expression to the Chorus, upon whom, in the king's absence, it next devolved to guard the city. This is clearly the meaning of ἄγχιστον, whether it be referred to Clytæmnestra, which may be supported by v. 251, or to the Chorus. δύναται Διὸς ἄγχιστα S. 1018. next after Jupiter.

'Αδελφεός a brother, S.c.T. 959. This form is unknown to the tragic senarius. Hence in the corrupt passage in S.c.T. 558. where καὶ τὸν σὸν αὐθις πρόσμορον ἀδελφεὸν appears as the vulgar reading, ἀδελφεὸν is probably spurious. See under πρόσμορον.

Well. from Schneider's emendation.
In P.V. 939. (937 D.) θῶπτε τὸν κρα-τοῦντ' ἀεὶ, Butler translates τὸν κρα-τοῦντ' ἀεὶ unumquemque regnantem,
i. e. the reigning sovereign, whoever is in power. Perhaps, however, it is better, on account of the position of the article, to join ἀεὶ with θῶπτε, ἀεὶ in the other case being usually inserted between the article and the attributive, e.g. Thuc.
i. 3. τὰς ἀεὶ πληρουμένας. i. 2. τῶν ἀεὶ πλειόνων ii. 11. τῶν ἀεὶ προεσ-τώτων. τὸν κρατοῦντ' ἀεὶ in this sense would be equally incorrect with such a phrase as ἡ πόλις ἄνω for the upper city. In such a passage as Soph.
Ced. T. 1037. ἡ τοῦ τυράννου τῆσδε γῆς πάλαι ποτέ; the construction is not τοῦ πάλαι ποτέ τυράννου, but τυράννου is equivalent to τυραννεύ-σαντος. See αἰεὶ, αἰέν in their order.

and Ald. Turn. have Αἰγυπτιογενής. Wellauer rightly observes that the vulg. is contrary to analogy. Pauw, Porson, and Schütz adopt Αἰγυπτιογενής. Brunck defends the vulg. supposing that Αἰγυπτιογενής is of five syllables, ω coalescing into one. Butler objects to this, because the crasis of ω would form a long syllable. This reasoning appears scarcely correct, the ι in such cases being probably equivalent to our y, and the quantity of the syllable depending on the second member of the crasis, as in Αἰγυπτίας Il. I. 382. etc. πόλιος in B. 811. has the last long by the arsis. About the correctness of the reading Αἰγυπτιογενής there can, however, hardly be any doubt.

σπείδω σπένδω, αἰεὶ αἰέν. The same writer observes that Homer recognises only three forms, sc. αἰεὶ, αἰεὶ, αἰέν. So likewise Æschylus. Twelve dialectic varieties are, however, recorded by Etym. Reg. Par. MS.

Αἰεὶ is found even in Attic prose writers. See Dorv. Charit. p. 280.
but scarcely ever without αἰεὶ being in some MS. Porson, Pref. to Hec.
p. iv. decides that αἰεὶ always is to be written, considering the penultima common. So Pierson on Mœris

p. 231. q. v. Hermann denies this, and thinks that the Attics wrote αἰεὶ or αἰεὶ as the metre required. Apollo-

S.c.T. 1006.* Herm. also joins πολλῶν ἐσθλῶν with αἰρεῖσθαι, and not with ὄνησιν, in the sense, I should prefer this enjoyment to many blessings: it is, however, better to consider πολλῶν as an opposition to διχορρόπως in the preceding verse, Clytæmnestra's hope being for happiness, not under partial, but many blessings.—to take upon oneself. δωμάτων γὰρ εἰλόμαν ἀνατροπᾶς E. 334. τὰς ἐβδόμας—Ἀπόλλων εἴλετο S.c.T. 783. θάνατον εἴλετ' ἐν πόλει 1000. βλοσυρὸν αἰρούμενον ἄγος ἔχειν E. 161. but here Heath rightly corrects ἀράμενον for αἰρούμενον, which violates the metre. Abresch, better still, ἀρόμενον. See αἰρεσθαι. πόλεμον αἰρήσει νέον. S. 928. (950. D.). In this passage, which is obviously corrupt, Porson, according to Blomf. in *Edinb. Here Canter, because Lerna was a valley, and not a hill, proposes Λέρνης τε κρήνην, which Blomf. adopts. Butler, however, properly observes, that the very idea of a valley implies surrounding hills, and quotes Paus. ii. 36. κατιόντων δὲ ἐς Λέρναν. κατ' ἄκρας πορθούμεθα C. 680. from top to bottom, h.e. utterly. This phrase occurs first in Hom. Il. O. 557. κατ' ἄκρης Ἴλιον αἰπεινὴν ἐλέειν. Cf. Thucyd. iv. 112. κατ' ἄκρας καὶ βεβαίως ἐλεῖν τὴν πόλιν. Virg. Æn. ii. 290. ruit alto a culmine Troja.

Lat. nox intempesta. τοὺς δ' ἄκραντος ἔχει νύξ C. 63. (65. D.) some are surprised in the dead of night. The Schol. and Stanl. less correctly explain ἄκραντος νύξ as eternal night, h.e. death. The passage does not appear to indicate duration, but different points of time, at which vengeance may overtake the guilty; some, namely, it visits ἐν φάει in the prime of life, others ἐν μεταιχμίῳ σκότου in their declining years, and with others again it is deferred till ἄκραντος νύξ, h.e. the night or time of death.

Blomf. denies that this can be the meaning of ἀκρόβολος, and joins ἀκροβόλων λιθὰς, i.e. lapidum imber velitibus jactus, which is certainly extremely harsh. Wellauer takes ἀκροβόλος actively, desuper tela jacens and translates a propugnaculis desuper jacentibus lapidum imber descendit, but the words more naturally refer to an attack made upon the city from without, than to one upon the enemy from within. Schütz's interpretation, given above, appears upon the whole the best. For the passive sense of ἀκρόβολος cf. ἀμφιβόλοισι πολίταις in v. 280. and for the use of the genitive ἐπαλξέων after ἔρχεται see Matth. Gr. Gr. 350. If this construction be thought too harsh, we may join λιθὰς ἐπαλξέων h.e. a shower of stones aimed at the battlements. For the accent of the word ἀκρόβολος or ἀκροβόλος see further Lobeck on Soph. Ἄκρωνία the mutilation of the extremities, E. 179. The Schol. explains it an accumulation; but the word is very doubtful. See not. ad loc. ed. Linw. and cf. χλοῦνις.

Ἀκταίνειν to lift up. ἀκταίνειν βάσιν E. 36. to lift up the foot, to spring. This passage is referred to by Phrynichus and the Etym. M. under ἀκταινῶσαι and ἀκταίνω. See Ruhnken's note upon Timæus, s. ἀκταίνειν γανυριᾶν καὶ ἀτάκτως πηδᾶν.

This and the preceding word appear to be derived from the Homeric form λέλασμαι, from λανθάνω. So Passow. Blomf. in his Glossary derives it from ἄλη, h. e. mentis error, delirium, whence ἀλάζω decipio, and from this ἀλαζών ὁ ἀπατεῶν καὶ κομπαστής Etym. M. ἀλάστωρ qui in errorem perniciosum trahit, ἄλαστος, qui in errorem perniciosum inducitur, whence, according to him, "error ipse, et deinceps omnis calamitas, ἄλαστος dicebatur."

Ἀλατεία wandering. Ἦρας ἀλατείαις πόνων P.V. 902. painful wanderings inflicted by Juno. Here πόνων is omitted by Turn. and one MS. whence Schütz and Porson omit γάμων in the strophe.

Ἀλγεῖν to feel pain. ἤλγησ' ἀκούσας P. 830. With gen. τὸν ζῶντα ἀλγεῖν χρὴ τύχης παλιγκότου A. 557. to grieve for reverse of fortune. With dat. ἀλγηῶν ἦπαρ ἐνδίκους ὀνειδέσιν E. 130. Ἄλις enough. ἄλις ἦσθ' ἀνάρσιος A. 497. ὥς ἄλις λελεγμένων E. 645. ἄνδρας Ἀργεῖοισι Καδμείους ἄλις (sc. ἐστὶ,) ἐς χεῖρας ἐλθεῖν S.c.T. 681. πημονῆς ἄλις γ' ὑπάρχει A. 1641. there is enough of woe already. εἰ δέ τοι μόχθων γένοιτο τῶνδ' ἄλις γ' ἐχόιμεθ' ἂν A. 1644. (1659. D.) This passage is very obscure. Perhaps upon the whole it may be best to place the comma after ἄλις γ', and translate and if there should be indeed enough of these evils, we would grasp at or welcome it, stricken as we have been, etc. The word ἄλις will then be used emphatically with reference to v. 1641. if really enough, h. e. so that there arise no more. Cf. ἔχειν sub fin.

Ἀλίσκειν to take. pass. 2 aor. subj. ἄνδρες ὦν ἀλῶ πόλις S.c.T. 239. part. ἀλούς A. 460, ἀλούσα 792. S.c.T. 568. ἀλούσης A. 330. S.c.T. 199. ἀλόντων A. 315. ἀλούσας E. 67. perf. m. ἔάλωκε A. 30. is taken.

Ἀλιτρεῖν (?) a doubtful form in E. 306. where the vulg. is ὅστις δ' ἀλιτρῶν ὥσπερ ὅδ' ἀνήρ. Wellauer proposes ἀλιτρῶν from ἀλιτραίνω as ἀλιτῶν from ἀλιταίνω. Hermann after Stanley reads ἀλιτῶν. The conjecture of Auratus ἀλιτῶν has been followed ed. Linw.

Ἀλίτυπος struck or beaten by the sea. λαοπαθῇ ἀλίτυπα βάρη P. 907. (945. D.) the sufferings incurred in the persons of those whose bodies were tossed upon the sea. The epithet ἀλίτυπα, which properly refers to the persons themselves, is here improperly applied to their sufferings: for instances of this see Lobeck on Soph. Aj. v. 7. Heath and Schütz incorrectly understand λαοπαθῇ and ἀλίτυπα to refer to two sorts of calamities, the one incurred by land, the other by sea: an error which may perhaps have arisen from the particles τε—τε, which have been ejected by Pass. Lachm. and Well. The passage probably is corrupt.

Ἀλκή strength or power. ἐν ἄτστοις τελέθοντος οὔτις ἄλκά A. 454. there is no strength in one who is dead. ζυγὸν ἄλκᾱς B. 586. the yoke of authority. αἱ αἱ κεδνᾱς ἄλκᾱς 892. military force. ἄλκῃ πεποιθώς C. 235. καταπνείει—ἄλκᾱν σύμφυτος αἰών A. 107. Alluding to this latter passage, Timæus observes, βαθεῖαν αὐλοκα. ὅπερ ἐστὶ σχιστῆς γῆς ὑπὸ ἀρότρου μεταφορικῶς ἀπὸ τούτου βαθείας φρένας καὶ κεκρυμμένας σημαίνει. D.) where σὺν ταῖσδε (emend. by Heath for the vulg. σὺν τοῖς δέ) refers to ἀρβύλαις, understood from ἀρβύλας v. 918. As the genitive of ἄλουργίς is ἄλουργίδος, it is probable that ἄλουργέσιν comes from a form τὰ ἄλουργῇ, not from ἄλουργίς.

Buttman (Lexil. in voc.) observes that this word is applied only to mournful objects, and is not used in the meaning of immense, as is the case with ἀφθονος, from φθονέω.

'Αμείβειν to change. χροιάς ἀμείψεις ἄνθος P. V. 23. With dat. ἀμείβων χρωῖτα πορφυρέα βαφῇ P. 309. — to give in exchange, or by way of return. χάριν τροφᾶς ἀμείβων A. 711. ἐπεὶ μιν μέγαν ἄρας, δίδυμα καὶ τριπλᾶ παλίμποйна θέλων ἀμείψει C. 780. 782. (791. 793. D.) where ἀμείψει is the third person active referring to Orestes, not the second person middle, as Pauw and Bresch suppose. This is sufficiently proved by the participle θέλων: ἄρας will, therefore, be the nominative absolute for σοῦ μιν ἄραντος. For this use of the nom. abs. see Matth. Gr. Gr. 562. 1. Bernhardt, Synt. Gr. c. xiv. 15. Valck. on Eur. Phœn. 292. See also under ἀποπτύειν. — From the sense of exchanging is derived the meaning of exchanging place, h. e. passing from one place to another; either as referring to the place from which the exchange is made, in which sense the active is more common, or that to which it is made, where the middle is generally used. πορθμὸν ἀμείψας Ἀθαμαντίδος Ἑλλης P. 69. having passed the Hellespont. εἰ δ' οὖν ἀμείψω βαλὸν ἔρκειον πυλῶν C. 564. if I pass the threshold. T. 286. what better land than this will ye occupy in exchange? χρόνος ἀμείψεται πρόθυρα δωμάτων C. 1014. time will cross or enter the doors of the house. Hence to pass through generally, as implying the exchange of one point of locality for another. οὔτις ἀσινῇ βλοτον ἀμείψεται C. 1014. no one will pass through life exempt from harm. Wunderlich, Obs. Critt. P. 182. compares the use of mutare in Latin, as in Hor. Od. i. 17. 1. Il. 16. 18. Carm. Sec. 39. The passage in S. c. T. 838 (856. D.) πίτυλον δς αἰὲν δι' Ἀχέροντ' ἀμείβεται τὰν — θεωρίδα — εἰς ἀφανῇ χέρσον, is somewhat obscure. Schütz translates ἀμείβεται by sequitur, which Wunderlich justly disapproving conjectures πέμπεται. Blomfield translates it deduco, which is probably correct, though ἀμείβειν does not occur elsewhere in the sense of causing to pass over. For the somewhat unusual usage of the middle for the active, see Matth. Gr. Gr. 496. 7. This is clearly the idea intended by the word: Wellauer's explication, intrat cymbam (πίτυλος?) et cum ea per Acherontem in locum inferorum se confert, is absurd. — It is also used in the middle in the sense of exchanging words, or answering. ἔπος ἀμείβου πρὸς ἔπος E. 556. πρὸς ταῦτ' ἀμείβου S. 246. τούτοις ἀμείβου πᾶσιν εὐμαθὲς τί μοι E. 420. with double acc. ἔπη ξένους ἀμείβεσθ', ὥς ἐπήλυδας πρέπει S. 192. Ἀμείνων better, P. V. 1037. ἄμεινόν ἐστι it is better, S. 185. With ἐστὶν omitted, S. 711. With infin. πολλῶ γ' ἀμείνων τοὺς πέλας φρενοῦν ἔφυς ἢ σαυτόν P. V. 335. Cf. P. 676. ἀπὸ στρατείας γάρ νιν ἡμποληκότα τὰ πλεῖστ' ἀμείνον' εὐφροσιν δεδεγμένη Δροίτη, περῶντι λουτρὰ καπὶ τέρματι Φᾶρος παρεσκήνωσε E. 601. seqq. (631. D.) This passage is very obscure, and undoubtedly corrupt. Bothe's conjecture ἢ φράσαι for εὐφροσιν, which Butler approves, appears upon the whole among the best proposed. Butl. translates, ab expeditione igitur bellica eum redeuntem, ubi plurima melius quam dici potest, administrasset, balneis excipiens. It may perhaps be better to place the comma after πλεῖστα, and join ἄμεινον (ἄμεινον, not ἀμείνον'. So Herm.) ἢ φράσαι δεδεγμένη as referring to Clytæmnestra. The whole passage may be translated, receiving him with a bath, more courteously than can be expressed, upon his return from the expedition, where he had gained the utmost honours — as he was passing through the water and had reached the end (of the vessel, or, when he had ended his ablutions), she threw over him a cloak, etc. [See, however, not. ad loc. ed. Linw. where another mode of emendation and interpretation is proposed.]

Sallier, however, quotes against Mœris the present passage, and Eur. Iph. A.1158. to which Pierson adds ἀμεμπτος φίλος from Xen. Cyr. v. 10.

(1036.D.) Since Jupiter has graciously caused you to share with our house in the lustral waters. The epithet may either refer to Cassandra, whom Jupiter had so far favoured as to make her the slave ἀρχαιοπλούτων δεσποτῶν, or to Clytæmnestra, as expressing her sense of the favour of Jupiter to herself in granting the capture of Troy. So Wunderl. Obs. Critt. p.151. The former sense, however, appears the best suited to the general meaning of the passage, nor is it necessary with Schütz to adopt the conj. of Auratus, ἀμηνίτοις.

Ἀμίαντος unpolluted. ἡ ἀμίαντος sc. θάλασσα P.570. (578. D.) the sea. Schol. δηλαδὴ θαλάσσης, οὐ γὰρ μιαίνεται πώποτε, καὶ πολλῶν μολυσμάτων ἐπιχυθέντων αὐτῇ. This usage of descriptive epithets instead of the names of persons or things is illustrated by Götting, Pref. to Hesiod p. xv. He refers it to the didactic school of poetry cultivated by Hesiod and his followers, and adopted in the oracular style at Delphi. As examples of this, he quotes from Plutarch de Pyth. Orac. 24. πυρικάοι denoting the Delphians, ὀφιβόροι the Spartans, ὀρεᾶνες men, ὀρεμπόται rivers. In Hesiod are found φερέοικος a tortoise, ἀνόστεος the polyrus, πέντοζος the hand, χλωρόν and αἶον the nail and its paring, ἴδρις an ant, ἡμερόκοιτος ἀνὴρ a thief. In epic poetry this usage is scarcely found. Homer once only calls ships ἀλὸς ἵπποι. Æschylus has some few instances of it, thus ἡ ἀνθεμουργός. P.604. the bee, and in this passage ἡ ἀμίαντος the sea. Perhaps πτερωτός S.505. is thus used. Götting wrongly, however, refers χαλκοῦ βαφαί A.591. to this head.

Ἀμικτος not mingled, distinct, A.312.

Ἀμῖς. ἐπ' ἀμίδα S.822.827. (842.847.D.) It is generally translated a ship. For this signification of the word, see Butl. not. Philolog. in loc. It appears, however, to be corrupt.

'Αμόμφητος (?) blameless. καὶ μὴν ἀμεμφῇ τόνδ' ἔτεινάτην λόγον τίμημα τύμβου τῆς ἀνοιμώκτου τύχης C. 503. (510.D.) Here the vulg. is ἀμόμφητον δέ τινα τὸν λόγον. Hermann. Obs. Critt. p. 97, considers this verse to be spurious. So Porson (Præf. ad Hec. p. xl.), Butler and Well. It is omitted by Ald. and Turn. In Rob. it is placed after v. 504. Canter assigns it to the Chorus. Erfurdt also assigns it to the Chorus, and reads ἀμεμφῇ τόνδε τιμήσει λόγον. Tyrwhitt ἀμόμφητόν γε τεῖναι, whence Wellauer δ' ἔτεινα. Seidler conj. καὶ μὴν ἀμεμφῇ τόνδ' ἔτεινα τὸν λόγον. Herm. de Vers. Spur. ap. Æsch. p. v. assigns it to the Chorus with the three following verses, and reads καὶ μὴν ἀμεμφῇ τόνδ' ἔτεινατον λόγον. So Blomf. substituting only ἔτεινάτην for ἔτεινατον. This appears correct. For the explanation of the next verse, see under τίμημα.

'Αμορφος blameless. Ἐπὶ ὑμῶν ἀμορφος E. 648. blameless in your sight. ἀμορφον πόλει ib. 453. one against whom the city has no complaint. Cf. δυσπῆμαντος. — having nought to complain of E. 391. Here ἀμορφον is the vulg. for which Rob. rightly has ἀμομφον. These words are confused again in v. 648. where Ald. has ἀμορφος.

'Αμός a Doric form of ἡμέτερος, our, S. 99. 318. S.c.T. 399. 636. mine, as ἡμεῖς is sometimes put for ἐγώ, E. 418. C. 422. 431. Brunck on Andr. 1172. says "ἀμός Doricum est pro ἡμέτερος, ἀμός Atticum pro ἐμός," but this distinction is probably incorrect. See Matth. Gr. Gr. 149. Blomf. Gloss. S.c.T. 413. The aspirated form is used by the Dorians, and the soft by the Æolic, epic, and tragic writers.

'Αμοχθεῖ or ἀμοχθί without labour, P.V. 208. Upon the probable formation of adverbs in εἰ and ι, see Blomf. Gloss. in loc. who decides that when derived from the dative of nouns in α or η, gen. ης, they ought to be written with εἰ, this being the ancient form of the dative; but that when derived from nouns in ος, they should be written with ι, the ο being omitted to distinguish them from the nom. plur. It is, however, a question of great uncertainty, owing to the continual variation of the MSS. See Matth. Gr. Gr. 257. Herm. and Lobeck on Soph. Aj. 1206. (ed. Herm.). The quantity of ι in the last syllable, as Blomf. shews in opposition to Apoll. de Adv. p. 571. is common, except in the case of gentile adverbs in τι, which have the ι short.

'Αμπλακεῖν to err. 2 aor. ὥς τάδ' ἤμπλακον A. 1185. when I had thus offended. pass. τί δ' ἤμπλάκηται S. 894. what offence has been committed? Monk on Hipp. 145. is of opinion that ἀπλακεῖν, ἀπλακία, ἀπλάκημα, without μ, is the proper orthography in the tragic writers, there being many passages which require this. This is undoubtedly true so far, but neither does there appear sufficient reason for rejecting the other form ἀμπλακεῖν, κ.τ.λ. which (except in S. 227) is the form constantly preserved in the MSS. and Edd. throughout Æschylus. Both forms probably were in use by the tragic writers, μ being inserted for the sake of euphony, as in ἀμφασία, ἀμβροτος, κ.τ.λ. See Herm. on Soph. Œd. T. 472. Trach. 120. and de Em. Rat. Gr. Gr. p. 19. The derivation of the word appears correctly given by Blomf. Gloss. P.V. 112. ed. Bl. "videtur formatum esse a πλάζω errare facio, a præfixo πλεοναστικῶς vel κατ' ἐπίτασιν, ut στάχυς ἄσταχυς, βληχρὸς ἄβληχρὸς, μέλγω ἄμέλγω, et similia.

Ἀμπλάκημα an offence, P.V. 112. 386. 623. S. 227. In E. 894. the shorter form ἀπλακήματα must be read with Pauw for ἀμπλακήματα.

Ἀμφιάρως Attic for Ἀμφίαρῶς proper name of a man, S.c.T. 551.

Ἀμφιβαίνειν to stand about, as a protection, S.c.T. 158. An Homeric usage; cf. Il. A. 37. Od. A. 198, etc.

Ἀμφιβάλλειν to place upon. ζυγὸν ἀμφιβαλεῖν P. 50. 72. to place a yoke upon.

Ἀμφίβληστρον anything thrown about the person, as chains or a net. κώλοισιν ἀμφίβληστρον ἔχει P. V. 81. ἀμφίβληστρον ὥσπερ ἰχθύων A. 1355. C. 485.

Ἀμφίβολος struck on all sides, S.c.T. 280. See ἀκρόβολος.

Ἀμφιβόλως doubtfully, undecidedly, οὐκ ἀμφιβόλως S.c.T. 845. In P. 871. ἀμφιβόλως is adopted by Blomf. and others from a few MSS. and Ald. Rob. Schol. for the vulg. ἀμφιβόλως.

Ἀμφίβουλος hesitating, undecided in purpose. With inf. ἀμφίβουλος οὔσα θυμοῦσθαι πόλει E. 703.

Ἀμφίζευκτος fastened at both ends. τὸν ἀμφίζευκτον ἄλιον πρῶνα P. 128. See πρῶν, and cf. vv. 50. 708. 722.

Ἄμφιθαλής flourishing or abounding on all sides. Met. ἀμφιθαλῇ κακοῖς βίον A. 1115. a life abounding on all sides with ills. The word is peculiarly applied to children whose father and mother are both living; and also to the gods who live in perfect happiness. See Ruhnken's note on Timæus, s. v. ἀμφιθαλεῖς. In C. 388. καὶ πότε ἂν ἀμφιθαλὴς Ζεὺς ἐπὶ χεῖρα βάλοι; it seems rather to have an active signification, causing both of us to flourish. Schol. ὁ ποιήσων ἄμφω ἡμᾶς θάλλειν.

Ἄμφιλαφής lit. laying hold upon all sides, h. e. ample, extensive. πολλὰ δόσις ἐκ Διὸς ἀμφιλαφής A. 986. γόος ἀμφιλαφὴς παραχθείς C. 328. lamentation extensively excited, a universal wailing, where, as Butler observes, the adjective has the force of an adverb. Upon the meanings of this word, see Ruhnken's note on Timæus, s. v. ἀμφιλαφές. πολὺ καὶ ἄφθονον. It is derived, according to Hemsterhuys, from λάφω, an old form of λαφύω, λαφύσσω. The old grammarians derive it from λαβεῖν, quasi ἀμφιλαβής.

Ἄμφιλόγως doubtfully. οὐκ ἀμφιλόγως P. 871. without doubt. See ἀμφιβόλως.

Ἄμφινεικὴς made a subject of contention, A. 672.

Ἄμφιπτολις involving the whole state, C. 73.

Ἄμφισβαινα a sort of snake, capable of moving backwards as well as forwards, whence its name, A. 1206.

Ἄμφιστρέυς prop. name of a man, P. 312.

Ἄμφιταρβής encompassed with terror, C. 540. ἀμφιταρβής Turn. Steph. Here ἀμφὶ τάρβει is read by Porson and Schütz. Cf. ἀμφί. Blomfield reads ἀμφιταρβεῖ, understanding it actively.

Ἄμφιτειχῆς encompassing the walls. γείτονες καρδίας μέριμναι ζωπυροῦσι τάρβος τὸν ἀμφιτειχῇ λεών S. c. T. 272. (290. D.) For an explanation of the usage of the accusative here, see under κλύειν.

Ἄμφιτόμος cutting both ways, A. 1475.

Ἄμφιχάσκειν to open the mouth about. μαστὸν ἀμφέχασκ' ἐμόν C. 538. sucked at my breast.

Ἀμφίων [ῖ] prop. name of a man, S. c. T. 510.

Ἀμφοτέρος both. ἀμφοτέρας κοινὸν αἵας P. 129. h. e. the two continents of Europe and Asia. ἀμφοτέρους ὁμαίμων τὰδ' ἐπισκοπεῖ Ζεὺς S. 397. regards both parties in this matter. ἀμφοτέρα γὰρ ἦν τὰδε P. 483. ἀμφοτέρα sc. πεζός τε καὶ ναύτης P. 706. On E. 458. ἀμφοτέρα μένειν πέμπειν δέ, see δυσπήμαντος.

Ἄμφω both, C. 252. 556. ἀμφοῖν S. c. T. 794. A. 1632.

Ἄμωμος faultless. κάλλει ἀμώμω P. 181.

Ἄν a particle, joined with the past tenses of the indicative, with the optative, subjunctive and infinitive moods of verbs, and in certain cases with participles. It is used in Æschylus—I. in the apodosis of a sentence with the past tenses of the indicative, preceded by a protasis with εἰ, expressing a condition which was not fulfilled, e. g. εἰ ὑπ' Ἰλίου—κατηναρίσθης, πολύχωστον ἂν εἶχες τάφον C. 341-346. if thou hadst been slain under Troy (which thou wast not) thou wouldst have been possessing, etc. So in S. c. T. 645. A. 844. 1000. 1369.—With the aorist, denoting a completed action, εἰ τοξοτενχεῖς ἦτε, κάρτ' ἂν ἤκασα S. 285. A participle may stand in the protasis for a finite verb with εἰ, as in πολλῶν πατησμένων εἰμάτων ἂν εὐξάμην, δόμοισι προυνεχθέντος ἐν χρηστηρίοις A. 397. where προυνεχθέντος is equivalent to εἰ προηγήθη. Sometimes this protasis is omitted, but may easily be supplied, e. g. αὕτη γὰρ ἦν ἂν πημάτων ἀπαλλαγὴ P.V. 756. sub. εἰ θανεῖν ἦν πεπρωμένον. Ib. 985. σὲ γὰρ προσηύδων οὐκ ἂν, ὄνθ' ὑπηρέτην sub. εἰ σωφρονεῖν ἠπιστάμην. So in C. 630. εἰ δυνατόν ἦν, in P.V. 244. εἰ παρῆν μὴ εἰσιδεῖν, or similar protases may be understood.—With the aorist, ἄλλος ὁμοίως ἦλθεν ἂν τὰδ' ἀγγελῶν C. 698. sub. εἰ σὺ μὴ ἦλθες. So in S. 581.—II. With the optative, preceded by a protasis with εἰ and the indicative, expressing a present condition, e. g. ἐγὼ γὰρ οὐκ εἰ δυστυχῶ τοῦδ' οὐνεκα θέλοιμ' ἂν ὥς πλείστοισι πημονὰς τυχεῖν P.V. 346. if I am unhappy, I should not therefore wish, etc. So P. V. 980. P. 624. S. 384. C. 202. E. 847. 848. A relative may stand in the apodosis for εἰ, e. g. πῶς οὐκ ἂν (sc. ἡδοίμην) ἦτις ἐκ Διὸς πάσχω κακῶς P.V. 761. τί δ' ἂν φοβοίμην, ᾧ θανεῖν οὐ μύριμον; ib. 935.—With the optative, preceded by a protasis with εἰ, expressing a future condition, e. g. εἴης φορητὸς οὐκ ἂν, εἰ πράσσοις καλῶς P.V. 981. you would not be to be borne, if you should be prosperous. So S.c.T. 6. 387. 534. P. 422. A. 1644. E. 398. S. 734. 903. 919. ἐπειδὴν—κτάνωσιν in S.c.T. 716. forms the protasis to τίς ἂν πόροι, κ. τ. λ. in v. 720. In this construction, as above, a participle may supply the place of εἰ with the finite verb in the protasis, e. g. χροιάν τίνα ἔχοντ' ἂν εἴη δαίμοσιν πρὸς ἡδονήν h. e. εἰ χροιάν τίνα ἔχοι P.V. 492. ὅξος τ' ἀλειφά τ' ἐκχέας ταυτῷ κύτει, διχοστατοῦντ' ἂν οὐ φίλως προσεννέποις A. 314. h. e. εἰ ἐκχέαις. The same is the case in P. V. 760. 987. S.c.T. 177. 652. P. 208. A. 314. C. 257. S. 223. 225. 286. 583. Hence the optative with ἂν very frequently has the force of a softened future, and may in this case be preceded by a protasis containing a future indicative. εἰ ᾧδε τραχεῖς καὶ τεθηγμένους λόγους ῥίψεις, τὰχ' ἂν σοῦ—κλύοι Ζεὺς P.V. 312. ἄγοιμ' ἂν, εἴ τις τάσδε μὴ ἔξαιρήσεται S. 902. This future in the protasis may also be expressed by a genitive absolute, e. g. θεῶν θελόντων ἂν ἀληθεύσαιμ' ἐγὼ S.c.T. 544. if it be the will of the gods, my words will come true. So θεῶν διδόντων, οὐκ ἂν ἐκφύγοι κακά ib. 701. h. e. εἰ θεοὶ δώσουσι. In C. 336. ἔτ' ἂν ἐκ τῶνδε θεὸς χρήζων θείῃ κελάδους εὐφρογγοτέρους, the ἂν of θείῃ refers equally to κομίσειεν in v. 340. τοιόνδε τοι ταρβοῦντες ἐνδίκως σέβας—ἔχοιτ' ἂν E. 672. h. e. εἰ ταρβήσετε. Cf. 7. 76. In S. 760. the wish μέλας γενοίμαν καπνός—ὀλοίμαν forms the protasis to the words ἄφυκτον οὐκίτ' ἂν πέλαι κέαρ v. 765. So likewise, in many passages where the protasis is not expressed, ἂν gives the verb a future sense, e. g. οὐδ' ἦσσαν ἂν γένοιο δώμασιν φίλος C. 697. which is equivalent to the preceding future οὔτοι κυρήσεις. So E. 521. οὐκ ἀναλβός ἔσται, πανώλεθρος δ' οὐποτ' ἂν γένοιτο, where the protasis is δίκαιος ὢν. For instances of this future signification, see P.V. 518. 619. 935. S.c.T. 357. 384. 454. 550. 689. 896. P. 259. A. 870. 1019. 1101. 1423. 1560. C. 388. 403. 559. 1046. E. 94. 290. 407. 412. 980. S. 325. 363. From its having this sense, we find εἰ joined (if the reading is correct) with πράσσοιμ' ἂν A. 904. πράσσοιμ' ἂν A. 904. (930. D.), πράσσοιμ' ἂν being equivalent to πράξω, and ἂν strictly limited to πράσσοιμι. [πράσσοιμεν Dind. see his note.] Wellauer wrongly refers to this and to A. 336. as cases of ἂν being joined with εἰ, which is not so. In the latter passage ἂν refers to γένοιτο, unless ἀναμπλάκητος (q. v.) be the true reading. In A. 1320. (1347. D.) where the vulg. κοινωνώμεθ' ἂν is obviously corrupt, Pors. and Blomf. read κοινοῦσάιμεθ' ἂν (the latter needlessly making the sentence interrogative), which may be explained as equivalent to the future.—It is also used with the optative as a milder form of imperative, εἰ βούλοιο, or something similar being understood. Thus γένος τ' ἂν ἐξεύχοιο καὶ λέγοις πρόσω S. 269. you may tell us, etc. λέγοις ἂν S.c.T. 243. C. 103. 106. 165. S. 451.906. λέγοιτ' ἂν S.c.T. 695. C. 657. ἔρδοις ἂν C. 506. κλύοιτ' ἂν E. 651. στείχοιτ' ἂν S.495. μύζοιτ' ἂν E. 117. εὔδοιτ' ἂν ib. 94. is better read interrogatively. The protasis is sometimes expressed e.g. χαίροιτ' ἂν, εἰ χαίροιτε A. 1367. πείθοι' ἂν, εἰ πείθοιο A. 1019. may be also thus explained.—It is likewise very commonly used with the optative to express the meanings could, would, should, might, e.g. οὐκ οὖν ἂν ἐκφύγοι γε τὴν πεπρωμένην P. V. 516. he could not escape fate. Cf. ib. 63. 500. 907.908. 916. S.c.T. 451. 720. P. 239. 430. A. 992. 1171. 1301. 1314. 1546. C. 511. 834. E. 615. 633. 686. 819. S. 223. 225. 324. 440. 442. 504. 585. 773.—ἄσμενος δὲ τῶν σταθμοῖς ἐν οἰκέλοισι κάμψειεν γόνυ P.V. 395. he would gladly rest himself Cf. ib. 754. 969. A. 1650. C. 260. 476. 766. 829. 995. 997. E. 219. 274. 554. S. 212. 332. 483. In P. 230. πᾶσα γὰρ γένοιτ' ἂν Ἑλλὰς βασιλέως ὑπήκοος, the protasis is to be understood from the preceding verse, sc. εἰ θηράσεται. So E. 203. οὐκ ἂν γένοιθ' ὄμαιμος αὐθέντης φόνος, sc. τὸ γυναιῖκα ἄνδρα νοσφίσαι. The use is elliptical in S. 699. (718. D.) ἄγαν καλῶς κλύουσά γ' ὥς ἂν οὐ φίλη, sc. κλύοι. Cf. Dem. Mid. 6. καὶ γὰρ εἰδύναισιν ἂν ὑμῖν λέγοιμι P.V. 439. I should be telling it to you who know it already. Cf. S.c.T. 379. 686. P. 772. S. 205, 768.—πατρόθεν δὲ συλλήπτωρ γένοιτ' ἂν ἀλάστωρ A. 1489. your father's avenging spirit might have lent its assistance. Cf. C. 994. E. 488. 499. S. 182. 278. 481. The usage in ὅπως ἂν μήτε πρὸ καιροῦ μήθ' ὑπὲρ ἄστρον βέλος ἡλίθιον σκήψειεν A. 355. (364.D.) belongs to this; ὅπως not denoting the purpose (in which case ἂν would not have been used) but the manner of the action, sc. in such a manner, that the arrow might or would strike, etc. See Matth. Gr. Gr. 520. Obs. 2. ἂν sometimes seems to be omitted, as in S. 708. ἴσως γὰρ ἡ κῆρύξ τις ἡ πρέσβυς μόλοι. Here, however, Burgess proposes ἴσως γὰρ ἂν. A. 1349. πημονὴν ἀρκύστατον φράζειεν. Here likewise Elmsley corrects πημονῆς ἀρκύστατ' ἂν, which has been generally received by scholars.—III. With the subjunctive with ὅπως or ὥς to denote a purpose present or to come, e.g. ὅπως δ' ἂν εἰδῇ μὴ μάτην κλύουσά μου,—φράσω P.V. 826. So C. 573. E. 543. 984. S. 230. ὥς ἂν διδαχθῇ τὴν Διὸς τυραννίδα στέργειν P.V. 10. So 657. 708. A. 885. C. 20. 981. S. 488. 513. 908. In this construction ἂν may either be added or omitted.—With relatives and similar words to express an indefinite notion, e.g. with ὅς. μήτ' ἔπος μήτ' ἔργον, ὧν ἂν δύναμις ἡγεῖσθαι θέλῃ P. 170. in whatsoever things I may have ability to do. ὥς. μαντεύομαι ὥς ἂν ἡγῆται θεός. E. 33. just as the god may direct me. ὅστε. οὐτ' ἂν ἐκ χειρῶν θεοὶ θυσίαν δέχωνται S.c.T. 682. from the hands of whomsoever, etc. ὅστις. ἅπας δὲ τραχύς, ὅστις ἂν νέον κρατῇ P.V. 35. whosoever is recently in power. ὅσπερ. μέλοι δέ τοι σοὶ τῶν περ ἂν μέλλῃς τελεῖν A. 948. whatever you may be about to do. Cf. C. 769. ὁπότερος. ὁπότερ' ἂν κτίσης S. 429. whicheversoever you may do.—With particles of time, to express an indefinite period, present or future. ἔστ' ἂν until. ἔστ' ἂν Διὸς φρόνημα λωφήσῃ χόλου P.V. 376, ἐπισχές ἔστ' ἂν καὶ τὰ λοιπὰ προσμάθῃς 699. ἔστ' ἂν ἐξίκη πρὸς Γοργόνεια πέδια 795. ἔστ' ἂν — σφαγαὶ καθαιμάξωσι E. 427. εὐτ' ἂν whenever, as soon as. εὐτ' ἂν εἰς οἴκους μόλωμεν P. 226. A. 12. C. 732. 6. Cf. P. 356. where the construction depends on προφωνεῖ which is the historical present. In A. 411. εὐτ' ἂν ἐσθλά τις δοκῶν ὄρᾱν, there is an ellipsis of ἡ, if the reading be correct. See under εὐτε. ἔως ἂν so long as. ἔως ἂν αἶθη πῦρ ἐφ' ἐστίας ἐμῆς Ἀιγισθος A. 1610.—until. ἔως ἂν ἐξίκη καταβασμόν P.V. 812.—ὅφρα ἂν until. ὅφρ' ἂν γὰν ὑπέλθῃ E. 323.—πρὶν ἂν before that, until, with a negative preceding. οὐδὲ λήξει πρὶν ἂν κορέσῃ κέαρ P.V. 165. Cf. 175.

721.758.772.993.1029. — IV. With the infinitive, either to express past time, as ἐν ποικίλοις ἂν κάρτα μοι βῆναι δοκεῖ A. 907. methinks he would have walked, etc. πλήθους μὲν ἂν σάφ' ἴσθ' ἑκατι βαρβάρους ναυσὶν κρατῆσαι P. 329. know that they would have been superior, etc.; or future, as εὐξω θεοῖς δείσας ἂν ὦδ' ἔρδειν τάδε; A. 907. was it through fear that you vowed to the gods that you would do thus? To the former case belongs the elliptical passage τί δ' ἂν δοκεῖ σοι Πρίαμος (sc. ποιῆσαι), εἰ τὰδ' ἤνυσεν; A. 909. ἂν is also to be taken with the inf. in C. 989. (995. D.) the construction being ἔχιδν' ἔφν (ὥστε) σήπειν ἂν, θιγοῦσα. Wellauer incorrectly joins ἂν with θιγοῦσα, which by itself without ἂν is equivalent to εἰ θίγοι. See seqq.—The passage in E. 76. ἐλῶσι γάρ σε καὶ δι' ἡπείρου μακρᾶς, βεβῶτ' ἂν αἰεὶ (so vulg.) τὴν πλανοστιβῆ χθόνα, is one of considerable difficulty, owing to ἂν, which neither from its position can be referred to ἐλῶσι (it being, moreover, extremely doubtful whether ἂν is ever joined in pure Attic with the indicative future); nor can it, without great awkwardness, be taken for the preposition ἀνὰ separated by tmesis from its case. [This, however, has been, on consideration, adopted in the late ed. of the Eum. coll. Plat. Legg. viii. p. 832, c. ab Hermanno cit. Vid. not. ad loc. ed Linwood.] Recent editors have adopted the reading ἀνατεῖ from Turn. Steph. which they explain as referring to ἐλῶσι, without impediment, h. e. incessantly. So Butler; but this is certainly very harsh; neither shall we perhaps be disposed to set greater value on Müller's conjecture ἀλατεῖ. The best MSS., it must be acknowledged have ἂν αἰεὶ, but the variation between ANATEI and ANAIEI is so slight, that we may perhaps be justified, as far as such authority is concerned, in adopting the correction. We may, in that case, refer ἀνατεῖ to βεβῶτα, and understand it to imply a gracious promise on the part of Apollo to Orestes, that notwithstanding all his hardships, he should remain essentially unharmed, which seems to accord very well with the general meaning of the passage.—That ἂν with a participle can exert a conditional force, appears to be extremely questionable. Hermann, indeed, on Viger, 483. and Matth. Gr. Gr. 598. maintain the contrary, and attempt to explain many passages where ἂν is repeated, by referring the former ἂν to a participle, in the sense of si forte, and the latter to the finite verb. Thus in Soph. CEd. T. 339. τίς γὰρ τοιαῦτ' ἂν οὐκ ἂν ὀργίζοιτ' ἔπη κλύων; Hermann joins τοιαῦτ' ἂν κλύων in the sense of si forte talia audierit? That this explanation is doubtful, appears from two reasons:—1. We find no instance where ἂν is joined with a participle expressing a condition, without finding a finite verb in the sentence also. 2. There are numerous instances where, without any participle, a double ἂν occurs with a finite verb, and where, notwithstanding Hermann's refined explanations, we can hardly doubt that they both refer to the same, e.g. ἀνθρώπεια δ' ἂν τοι πῆματ' ἂν τύχοι βροτοῖς P. 692. κακῶν δὲ πλῆθος οὐδ' ἂν, εἰ δέκ' ἤματα στοιχηγοροίην, οὐκ ἂν ἐκπλήσαιμί σοι P. 421. οὕτω γένοιτ' ἂν οὐδ' ἂν ἐκβασίς στρατοῦ S. 752. Hence we conclude that in such passages as τί δ' ἂν εἰπόντες τύχοιμεν ἂν; C. 412. πῶς δ' ἂν γαμῶν—ἀγνὸς γένοιτ' ἂν S. 224. ἔχουσ' ἂν ἤδη—ἂν ἐξεύχοιο ib. 269. οὐκ ἂν γ' ἐλόντες αὐθις αὐθάνοιεν ἂν A. 331. ἐντὸς δ' ἂν οὔσα—πείθοι' ἂν ib. 1018. the participle exercises its independent power of expressing condition, cause, etc. and that the ἂν in both cases refers to the finite verb. Possibly the usage may originally have been adopted in those passages where, owing to a parenthesis intervening, the force of ἂν would otherwise have been lost to its verb, and may subsequently have been employed to give additional force in others where the same necessity did not exist. — On the quantity of ἄν, which Dindorf, Præf. ad Poet. Scen. Græc. p. vii. seqq. affirms to be occasionally lengthened in the tragic writers, see Hermann, Opusc. iv. p. 373, who maintains that it is always short. The question appears doubtful; some of the passages quoted by Dindorf certainly seem to favour his position (Cf. under γε sub. fin.), others are susceptible of probable emendation. Upon the whole, it may be questioned whether, if such a licence had been allowable in the Attic tragic writers, we should not find more frequent and indisputable evidences of it in their remaining writings.

Ἀνά through, on, over, P.V. 573. S.c.T. 327. P. 576. S. 823. 833. ἀμπεδιήρεις for ἀνὰ πεδιήρεις P. 558. With dat. ἄμ πέτριάς for ἀνὰ πέτραις S. 346. Used for the imperative ἀνάστητε C. 957. (963.D.) ἄνα γε μὰν δόμοι, up! arise! where ἀναγε μὰν is the vulg. corrected by Blomfield, who compares Il. Σ. 179. Soph. Aj. 194. On E. 76. vid. prec. p. 32.

Ἀναβάλλειν to throw up. ἀνὰ κίνδυνον βαλῶ S.c.T. 1019. I will run the risk. So κίνδυνον ἀναρρίπτειν. Blomf. denies that ἀναβάλλειν κίνδυνον can have this sense, and proposes κάμὲ κινδύνῳ βαλῶ. Herod., however, as Well. observes, has the expression μάχας ἀναβάλλεσθαι v. 49. where see Schweighæuser.

Ἀναγγέλλειν to report, P.V. 664.

Ἀναγκαῖος forced, painful, A. 876. This verse is thought by some to be spurious. So Blomf. Butler, however, retains it, and observes that it contains the reason why so many epithets are used, and translates “est enim jucundum necessitatem omnem effugisse, idcirco illum hisce dignor salutationibus.”

Ἀναγκαίως of necessity. ἔστ’ ἀναγκαίως ἔχον C. 237. it is a matter of necessity.

Ἀναΐσσειν to spring up. τίς ὁ κραιπνῷ ποδὶ πηδήματος εὐπετέος ἀνᾶσσω; P. 96. (95.D.) This is the reading of Turn. and Steph. (only by the former written ἀναίσσων, by the latter ἀναΐσσω) for the vulg. ἀνάσσω. So Brunck, Pors. Schütz, Blomf. Wellauer retains the vulg. explaining it in his Lexicon, potestatem habere, to avoid the awkward enallage supposed by Brunck and Blomf. of κραιπνῷ ποδὶ πηδήματος εὐπετέος for κραιπνοῦ ποδὸς πηδήματι εὐπετεῖ. His explanation, however, seems harsher than the enallage. There is probably no enallage at all, the words πηδήματος εὐπετέος being an attributive of ποδί, and equivalent to τῷ ἐνπετῶς πηδῶντι. For this usage see Matth. Gr. Gr. 316. f. Bernhardy, Synt. Gr. c. iii. 45. Wordsworth, however, in Philol. Mus. vol. i. p. 219, defends ἀνάσσω, comparing ἐφόδων ἀνάσσεις Eur. Ion. 1049. Æsch. Ag. 529. But these passages are hardly parallel. On A. 77. see ἀνάσσειν.

Ἀναμένειν to await. ἀναμένω τέλος δίκης E. 234. Here Abresch and Stanley read ἀναμενῶ, but Butler justly prefers the present as the stronger form of expression.

Ἀναμπλάκητος not straying from the path, A. 336. (345. D.) In this passage the vulg. is θεοῖς δ' ἀναμπλάκητος εἰ μὲν στρατός, for which Stanley conjectured θεοῖσι δ' ἀμπλάκητος. Pauw merely separated the word into ἂν ἀμπλάκητος. So Porson, except that he inserts the comma after ἂν, and writes ἀπλάκητος, without the μ. In this orthography he is followed by Blomfield. See Monk on Eur. Hipp. 145. quoted under ἀμπλακεῖν. As regards the meaning of the word, Blomf. on P. V. 112. appears properly to derive it from ἀ and πλάζω, errare facio, the ἀ being intensive. Hence ἀπλακεῖν or ἀμπλακεῖν signifies to miss or lose anything, and metaphorically, to err or commit a crime. Thus there appears equal reason for interpreting ἀναμπλάκητος in the original sense of not led astray, not missing the way, as for translating ἀπλάκητος (which no where else occurs) in the secondary one of having committed an offence. Blomf. retains the vulg. and explains it to mean nullis erroribus actus, which is probably correct, although Wellauer calls it “sensus satis ineptus.” The word occurs in Soph. Œd. T. 472. Trach. 120. in both cases apparently with reference to this sense. See Hermann's notes. We may, therefore, reasonably prefer the vulg. in the present passage, the meaning of which will be as follows: — Clytæmnestra expresses a hope that the army at Troy may not offend the gods by an abuse of victory; “for” (she says) “it is not enough for them to have taken the city, it remains for them to effect a safe return; and this the gods, if offended, may prevent. Nay more, even though the army should return without any check on the part of the gods (θεοῖς ἀναμπλάκητος) yet still the crime incurred by any acts of destruction, would (eventually) not fail to rise against them, even though no fresh mischances should (immediately) befall them.” The words τὸ πῆμα τῶν ὀλωλότων do not refer to those slain in battle, but to any mischief committed by the army after their victory. θεοῖς may either be joined with ἐγρηγορὸς γένοιτ' ἂν (so Porson), h. e. will be kept alive in the minds of the gods, or with ἀναμπλάκητος, as explained above; cf. χειμῶνα οὐκ ἀμήνιτον θεοῖς A. 635.

He is wrong, however, in altering the vulg. ἀνανδρον into the reading of Rob. ἀναρχον. The vulg. has precisely the same meaning, nor is there occasion for understanding it,

Here some make ἀνάξομεν to be the future of ἀνάγειν and join it in construction with φίλον τ' Ὀρέστην, removing the stop after Ὀρέστην. But the dative after ἀνάγειν seems objectionable. The Schol. explains ἀνάξομεν by βασιλεύσομεν. μυελὸς στέρνων ἐντὸς ἀνάσσω A.77. Here ἀνάσσω is read by Schütz, Blomf. Well. from an emendation by Hermann. The vulg. is probably correct. Klausen not inaptly remarks, "quid est medulla saliens?" There does not appear much force in Wellauer's observation that "infantium medulla nondum ἀνάσσει sed ἀνάσσει," the epithet being a general one of μυελός, which, in the degree in which it exists, may even in infancy be said στέρνων ἀνάσσειν. 'Ανδρακάς separately, each man by himself. ἀνδρακάς, ἀντὶ τοῦ καθ' ἑαυτόν Gl. Farn. The passage A. 1577. (1595. D.) ἔθρυπτ' ἄνωθεν ἀνδρακάς καθήμενος, is usually considered corrupt. Hermann thinks that something is wanting, a conjecture which is certainly plausible, from the change of the subject in v. 1578. This does not appear, however, in itself a sufficient reason for supposing an omission; ἔσθαι may be referred to πατήρ as understood from πατρί v. 1573. The meaning is, Atreus, sitting by himself at the head of the table, broke into small pieces (sc. to prevent their being recognised) the extremities of the feet and hands, and (my father) taking (some) of the pieces (thus) disguised, etc. Dindorf's emendation, καθήμενος ἄσημ' ὁ δ' αὐτῶν is highly probable, and removes the objection arising from the change of subject at ἔσθαι. The particle μέν in τὰ μέν ποδῆρη does not answer to δὲ in ἄσημα δ' αὐτῶν, but is put by itself without an apodosis, to distinguish these parts from the others which did not require, and therefore did not receive, such treatment.

Here the words ἀτιμαστῆρα τῶς σ' ἀνδρηλάτην are to be strictly joined and referred to Eteocles, or, in case you live, (opp. to κτανῶν θανεῖν πέλας in v. 621.) that he will punish you by banishing you in like manner, you, who have thus dishonoured him by expelling him (from his country). It must be acknowledged, however, that this construction is singularly harsh. Blomfield's conjecture ἀνδρηλατῶν appears probable. We might suggest, as a further correction, ἀτιμαστῆρ' ὅπως for ἀτιμαστῆρα τῶς, the particle τῶς being very awkwardly separated from its context, referring as it does, of course, as the passage now stands, to the words in the following line.

E. 73. In P. 639. (648. D.) Ἡ φίλος ἀνὴρ, φίλος ὄχθος, Burney, whom Blomf. follows, reads ἀνῆρ. This is shewn to be incorrect by the absence of the article with ὄχθος, whence we may safely infer with Well. that the penult. of ἀνῆρ is here long. This may be justified as occurring in a lyrical passage. Well. refers to E. 727. (757. D.) Ἀργεῖος ἀνὴρ (so vulg.) αὐθις ἔν τε χρήμασιν οἰκεῖ πατρώοις, where Porson rightly reads ἀνὴρ. Well. is wrong in his remark upon the latter emendation. Ἀργεῖος ἀνὴρ would not be ὁ ἀνὴρ Ἀργεῖος Argivus ille vir, which would of course be incorrect, but means the man is an Argive, h. e. no longer an exile, but in all respects again an Argive. It is extremely improbable that ἀνὴρ with a long penultimate would have been admitted into the tragic senarius.

The reading ἡ ἄνοια (ἡ ἄνοια MSS.) has been suspected because of the lengthening of the last syllable in ἡ ἄνοια. Hence Blomf. conj. ἐννοία or ὑπονοία. Wellauer, however, (observing that it should be written without elision ἡ ἄνοια), quotes Eur. Andr. 520. τόνδ' Ἑρμιόνη· καὶ γὰρ ἄνοια, where it clearly lengthens the α. He also refers to Soph. Trach. 350. Phil. 129. Hence the vulg. reading may be retained. ἡ ἄνοια is recorded as a MS. reading by Burton, whence Dindorf corrects ἡ ἄνοια.

Ἀνολοῦζειν to raise a cry, A. 573. ὀλοῦζειν and ὀλολυγμός are said of women, παιανίζειν or ἀναλαλάζειν of men: thus Xen. Anab. iv. p. 324. quoted by Blomf. Gloss. on S. c. T. 254. ἐπαιάνιζον πάντες οἱ στρατιῶται καὶ ἀνηλάλαζον· ξυνωλόλυζον δὲ καὶ αἱ γυναῖκες ἅπασαι. This verb is used by the ancient authors only in speaking of joyful occasions.

Ἀνόμοιος unlike. τά τε νῦν ἐπιδείξω πιστὰ τεκμήρια, τά τ' ἀνόμοια, οἷδ', ἀελπτά περ ὄντα φανεῖται S. 53. I will both point out some testimonies which may be immediately credited, and some which are (at first) unlike (h. e. incredible), will, I am sure, though unexpected, be clear at last. Cf. v. 55. This is, however, only suggested as a possible way of explaining the passage as it stands, which is obviously very corrupt.

Ἀνταῖος hostile, C. 581. In P. 596. (604. D.) ἐμοὶ γὰρ ἤδη πάντα μὲν φόβον πλέα, ἐν ὄμμασιν τὰνταῖα φαίνεται θεῶν, the meaning is obscure. Ald. Rob. have ἐν ὄμμασι τ' ἀνταῖα, whence Stanl. conj. ἐν ὄμμασιν τ' ἀνταῖα which later editors have adopted. This reading, unless τὰ θεῶν were read, is unintelligible. The meaning of ἀνταῖος given by Hesychius, sc. ἰκέσιος is, as Well. observes, probably the one intended here, and with this the vulg. may be satisfactorily explained. θεῶν is the gen. after πάντα τὰ ἀνταῖα, and the meaning is, every act of supplication to the gods has an aspect of terror to me, h. e. instead of obtaining comfort from it, I only increase my alarm. There should, if this explanation be right, be no comma after πλέα.

Phoen. 506. as spurious. So Pors. Schütz, Butler, Blomf. and Dind. Be this as it may, the words seem to mean ἀστέρων τῶν μὲν τὰς φθίσεις, τῶν δὲ τὰς ἀντολὰς, h. e. the risings of some and the settings of others. Scholefield not unaptly remarks "κάτοιδα ἀστέρας ὅταν φθίνωσιν idem est quod ἀστέρων φθίσιν." In v. 4 the watchman speaks of the assemblage of stars generally. He then proceeds to state his observation of those stars more particularly conspicuous, by whose rising and setting the change of seasons is discerned. Schütz and Butler refer λαμπροὺς δυνάστας to the sun and moon; but the words refer probably to the more remarkable stars, such as the Pleiades, Sirius, etc. Cf. P.V. 452. ἦν δ' οὐδὲν αὐτοῖς οὔτε χείματος τέκμαρ, οὔτ' ἀνθεμῶδους ἥρος, οὔτε καρπίμου θέρους βέβαιον — ἔστε δὴ σφιν ἀντολὰς ἐγὼ ἄστρον ἔδειξα τὰς τε δυσκρίτους δύσεις.

A.909. mid. v. ἀνύεσθαι to obtain for oneself, P.V.702. πῶς ἴσον εἰποῦσ' ἀνύσμαι C. 845. (858.D.) Here Heath makes εἰποῦσ' ἀνύσμαι equivalent to ἀνύσμαι ὥστε εἰπεῖν, how can I succeed in saying what is just? But it may mean, How, having said what is suitable, can I succeed thereby in my object? This suits better the force of the middle voice of the verb. On the accent of the verb ἀνύειν or ἀνύειν see Soph. Œd. Col. 432. ed. Linw. not.

Ἀπαράμυθος inexorable, P.V. 185.

Ἀπαρκεῖν to suffice, P. 466. In A. 369. ὥστε κάπαρκεῖν may either be from ἐπαρκεῖν or ἀπαρκεῖν. Blomf. observes that ἀπαρκεῖν is said of things, ἐπαρκεῖν of persons, and therefore prefers to derive it from ἐπαρκεῖν.

Ἀπαρνος refusing, denying. ᾧ τ' οὐδὲν ἄπαρνον τελέθει Πειθοῖ S.1024. whom nothing can refuse, or this may be pass. sc. to whom nothing can be denied.

Ἀπαρτίζειν S.c.T. 358. (374. D.) The meaning of this word appears to be to complete, to make perfect. Compare ἀπαρτί. Mœris gives for its Attic synonym the word ἀποτελεῖν. Salier on Mœris translates this passage, sed illius festinatio non sinit gradum absolvere. Blomf. adopts the reading of Guelph. οὐ καταρτίζει, in the sense of "does not suffer it to rest." This, however, as Well. observes, is hardly the meaning of καταρτίζειν, but rather restituere, conciliare. Herm. proposes οὐ καταργίζει, which Erf. on Soph. Ant. 439. Schütz, and Wellauer approve, but which Blomf. very properly rejects. Pauw translates οὐκ ἀπαρτίζει facit ut pes sibi non sit æqualis, h.e. haste prevents him from making equal steps, and this is perhaps nearly the true meaning. The particle καὶ refers to the spy alluded to in the preceding speech of the Chorus. Butler quotes Hesych. ἀπαρτίζει· τελειοῖ.

Ἄπαρχος (?) a leader, P. 319. But here ἔπαρχος is undoubtedly to be preferred. So N. and v. l. in B. Cf. ἔπαρχος.

Ἀπία a name of the Peloponnese. S.257.758. A.248. Schol. Venet. in Il. A.22. (ἡ Πελοπόννησος) Ἀπία ἐκλήθη ἀπὸ Ἀπιδος τοῦ Φορωνέως τοῦ Διός. Ἀπίαν βούνιν S.110, where Burgess thinks there is an allusion to the Egyptian Apis. This word is entirely different from the ἀπὶ γαῖα of the Iliad and Odyssey, in which ἄπιος is nothing but an adjective formed from ἀπό, as ἀντίος from ἀντί, and signifies distant. Moreover, the α of ἀπὶ in Homer is always short, whereas in ἀπία derived from Ἀπιδος the α, like that of Ἀπιδος, is long. See Buttm. Lexil. in ἀπὶ γαῖα.

S.c.T. 8. — With gen. ἀπότροπον κακῶν C. 42. The passage C. 152. (155. D.) ἴετε δάκρυ — πρὸς ἔρυμα τόδε κακῶν κεδνῶν τ' ἀπότροπον ἄγος ἀπείχετον κεχυμένων χοᾶν, is very obscure. Herm. on Soph. Ant. 841. reads ἔρμα. Schütz, Seidler, Herm. Blomf. transpose the words κακῶν κεδνῶν τ'. Blomf. appears to be correct in translating ἔρυμα κακῶν κεδνῶν, praesidium quo confugiunt pariter mali ac boni, and also in assigning to ἀπότροπον a transitive force. By ἔρυμα is understood the pouring of libations, a means by which both good and bad seek to appease the dead, and to do this being, in Clytæmnestra's case, ἄγος ἀπείχετον, the Chorus exhort each other to shed a propitiatory tear, to obviate the effect of (πρὸς) this ἔρυμα κακῶν κεδνῶν τε, and to avert (ἀπότροπον) the ἄγος ἀπείχετον incurred by the pouring out of these impious libations.

Ἀποχρήματος without money. ἀποχρήματοι ζημίαι C. 273. (275. D.) Soph. ap. Rob. reads ἀχρημάτοις. Schütz understands it to mean the loss of his paternal property inflicted by Ægisthus and Clytæmnestra. This is probably correct. Others suppose ἀποχρήματοι or ἀχρήματοι ζημίαι to mean penalties, but not of money, h.e. of blood, as referring to the punishment to be inflicted on Hector by Apollo, if he failed to execute his commands.

Ἀποψιλοῦν to make bare of, C. 684.

Ἀπριγδα firmly grasping. ἀπριγδ' ἀπριγδα μάλα γόεδνα P. 1014. 1020. This adverb is the same with ἀπρίξ, and is derived from α intensive and πρίειν to set the teeth firmly together, to gnash. It is less correctly explained by Hesych. Suid. Schol. on Soph. Aj. 310. ὁ οὐχ οἶόν τε πρίσαι διὰ τὴν σύμφυσιν. So Helladius, Phot. p.

869. Timæus, ἀπρίξ, ἐμπεφυκότης, where see Ruhnken's note. Schütz rightly observes, "ἀπριγδα vox est pilos sibi præ dolore tenaciter et cum impetu vehementi evellentium." The word is well illustrated by Lobeck on Soph. Aj. 1030. where πρισθεὶς ἰππικῶν ἐξ ἀντύγων is equivalent to δεθεὶς, h. e. firmly bound. "Proprie πρίειν dicuntur τὰ ὠδοντωμένα, unde πρίων ὀδόντων Crinag. D.) ταῦτ' ἐν μέσῳ τίθημι τῆς κακῆς ἀρᾶς, κείνοις λέγουσα τήνδε τὴν κακὴν ἀράν, is obscure. Schütz for κακῆς conjectures καλῆς, which agrees with the sense. In the beginning Electra prays for blessings on herself and Orestes, and likewise at the close of her speech: but in the middle of it, for destruction on her enemies. The chief objection to this is the meaning of ἀρά. which very seldom occurs in a good sense. The usage appears, however, defended by the analogy of ἀρᾶσθαι, which occurs as well in the sense of praying for good things as of cursing, (cf. Eur. Orest. 1138.) and also by the epithet καλῆς being added to define it. Wellauer considers the words as corrupted from the following verse. Schütz's conjecture is approved by Butler and adopted by Blomfield.

Cf. S.c.T.473. P. 464.580. 897. A.528. Also in interrogations where the interrogation refers only to a part of the enunciation, e. g. τίς ἄρα ῥύσεται; S.c.T.90. where the inquiry is not whether any would deliver them, which would require ἀρά τις ῥύσεται; but who, under such circumstances, should be that deliverer. Cf. P.V. 515. 597. P. 140. and see Herm. Præf. ad. Soph. Œd. Col. p. x. seqq.—II. In interrogations, referring to the whole enunciation, where an assent is demanded in consequence of something already stated or understood. In this case, the penultimate is lengthened. ἄρ' ὑμῖν δοκεῖ βίαιος εἶναι; P.V. 737. does he not, therefore, seem to you to be violent, Cf. C. 295. 488. 489. In these instances ἄρα has the force of ἄρ' οὐ; Cf. Soph. Œd. T.815. ἄρ' ἔφυν κακός; ἀρ' οὐχὶ πᾶς ἀναγνος; — Without a negative force. 'Ορέσσης ἄρά που βλέπει φάος; A. 1630. What then, is Orestes perchance living? Cf. E.181. 715.943. It is sometimes placed in the middle of the sentence. ἐμοί τε καὶ σοί γ' ἄρ' (So Pors. γ' ἄρ' vulg.), ἐπεύξομαι τάδε; C.110. Cf. to have been generally observed by the Attics. Sometimes, however, ἄρα appears to have been used to express a strong asseveration without interrogation, as in C. 219. αὐτὸς καθ' αὐτοῦ γ' ἄρα μηχανορραφῶ. So Pors. Here, however, the interrogative might be inserted. Moreover, the reading is doubtful. Elmsley prefers τᾶρα, which is supported by MSS. πατρὸς ἀτίμωσιν ἄρα τίσει C. 429. (So Heath). she shall surely pay for, etc. Here Butler proposes to read ἀντιτίσει. For further information concerning this particle, see Valck. on Phœn. 569. Herm. Soph. D.) οἴκτειρε θῆλυν ἄρσενός θ' ὁμοῦ γόνον, the expression ἄρσενος γόνον for the male offspring, is extremely harsh, but no satisfactory correction has been proposed, unless it be γόνον, as conjectured by Bamberger. Klausen refers to an old opinion, that the male had most to do with the procreation of the male offspring, and the female with that of the female, whence Orestes is called ἄρσενος γόνος, the expression being used to conciliate the favour of Agamemnon to Orestes, as the peculiar issue of his own body. It is, however, scarcely probable that Æschylus would have alluded to this. The expression θεῖον γένος οὐδ' ἀνθρώπων, Il. Z. 180. which Abresch compares with ἄρσενος γόνος, is irrelevant.

'Αρτιτρόφοις, proposed by Schneider, appears much better. The sense of the whole passage seems to be, it is a mournful thing for virgins just matured to pass from their homes on a melancholy journey before receiving those rites which gather the flower of their virginity, i. e. before they are married. a ruling body, a magistracy, S.480.681. — a leader, abstr. for concr. πομπους ἀρχάς A.123. So in P.321. τοιῶνδ' γ' ἀρχῶν νῦν ὑπεμνήσθην περί, where if this reading of Canter (which is adopted by Well. and Blomf.) be correct, ἀρχῶν is not from ἀρχός, as Blomf. supposes, but from ἀρχή. See the passages which Blomf. himself quotes on A.123. where ἀρχή is thus used. In the present place, however, τοιῶνδ' ἀρχόντων νῦν is the reading of the majority of MSS. M. has τοιῶνδ' γ' ἀρχόντων νῦν. So Rob. Steph. Porson adopts this, with the omission of νῦν. This is rather violent, as νῦν is omitted in scarcely any MSS. The change of ων into οντων may, perhaps, have arisen from the similarity of παρόντων below it in the following verse. Some consider ἀρχόντων spurious. The construction of C.77 (78. D.) ἐμοὶ δέ — δίκαια καὶ μὴ δίκαια πρέποντ' ἀρχαῖς βίου βίᾳ φερομένων αἰνέσαι, seems to be this, δίκαια καὶ μὴ δίκαια πρέποντ' (ἐστίν, h.e. πρέπει) ἀρχαῖς βίου βίᾳ φερομένων αἰνέσαι, h.e. as for me, things just or unjust, are alike suited to the control exercised over my life by my tyrannical masters, so that I must acquiesce in them. πρέποντα thus governs both the dative ἀρχαῖς and the infin. αἰνέσαι, two constructions being united. Also φερομένων depends on ἀρχαῖς βίου, which together form but one idea, on which the second genitive depends. It can scarcely, however, be doubted that the words are corrupt.

Ἄσσαντος not to be flattered. ἄσαντος ἐκ ματρὸς ἐστὶ θυμός C.416. (422. D.) Schütz translates this, Implacabilis est ira nostra, matris injuria et crimine concepta. But it may be questioned whether the words ἐκ ματρὸς will bear this sense. Butler (ap. Peile) translates, animus enim noster, lupi crudelis instar, a matre nullo modo placari queat. But thus the addition ἐκ ματρὸς is weak and hardly necessary. Scholefield joins ἐκ ματρὸς θυμός, h.e. matris animus; so Stanley, but neither will this do: nor, as Blomfield proposes, ex eo tempore quo natus est. The Schol. refers θυμός to Agamemnon, but the context certainly shews that it belongs to Orestes. It may be suggested to translate: " 'tis of no use to soothe me, for, like a ferocious wolf (inheriting the fury of its race) I derive from my mother an implacable spirit; that is, as she has shewn herself ruthless in the murder of Agamemnon, so shall I, her son, display an equally unrelenting spirit in the destruction of herself.

'Ασφαλίας † παντὶ δὲ σθένουσι διωγμοῖσι δ' | ἀσφαλίας ἀδμήτας ἀδμήτα | ῥύσιος γενέσθω. S.139.(147. D.) This is obviously corrupt. Butl. conj. παντὶ δὲ σθένει 'ν δι- | ωγμοῖς ἀσμένως | ἀδμήτος ἀδμήτα | ῥύσιος γενέσθω. Lachm. de Chor. Syst. p.59. πάντα δὲ σθένουσ' ἰνυμοῖς ἀσφαλῆς ἀδμήτος ἀδμήτα. The latter is plausible; but, in so corrupt a passage, nothing can safely be decided upon.

But here Voss's conjecture κρατός for κράτους is highly probable. This depends, however, upon the true reading of the antistrophe, where for Μοῦσαι θεαί τ' ἀοιδοὶ Ahrens corrects Μοῦσαν θεῖεν ἀοιδοί. — not giving enjoyment, sad, P.V.31. and probably S.668.

scure, and the words most probably corrupt. Butler conj. ἃ τίετ' ἀνὰ δ' ἀτίται A.72. Here ἀτίτα Rob.

Steph. as from ἀτιτος.— unpunished, Dor. ἀτίτας E.247. (257. D.) Klausen, on the former passage, observes that the true form of this word is ἀτιτος, not ἀτίτης. ἀτίτης, if it existed, he says, would have an active signification, not avenging, as τίτας in C.65. means avenging. In E. 247. ἀτίτας, according to Klausen, is not the nom. case agreeing with ματροφόνος, but the acc. plural referring to the Furies, "lest the matricide should escape us (thereby) dishonoured or unavenged." This observation is true in general, but not always, the termination in τής having occasionally a passive force. See Lobeck on Soph. Aj.
241. In the present case, ἀτίτας rather appears to be the nominative, not the accusative of ἀτιτος. In the former passage, the reading ἀτίτα seems equally good in sense with ἀτίται.

derstand it to mean too daring, a being intensive. Blomf. joins ἀτολμήrum.* Both ways are sufficiently harsh, but nothing better has been proposed. Perhaps we should read ἀτολμήτως, h.e. impiously. On the reading and construction of the preceding words, see under φαίνειν,

(254. D.) the readings differ. M. Rob. have σύνορθον. Guelph. Ald. Turn. σὺν ὀρθὸν division. σύνορθον Steph. Pors. Herm. Schütz, Blomf. which they explain agreeing with. Wellauer, comparing both these readings, proposes σύνορθον, which is in all probability correct. For αὐγαῖς M. Farn. Steph. have αὐταῖς. So Stanl. Glasg. sc. vocibus vatum. Guelph. Ald. Rob. Turn. αὐταῖς. So Blomf. who refers it to τέχνηαι Κάλχαντος. Schütz conj. ἄταις. Elms. αὐτᾶ sc. δίκᾳ.

Hermann, by the slight change of T into Γ conj. αὐγαῖς, which agrees admirably with Wellauer's conjecture σύνορθον, and this is probably the genuine reading. αὐταῖς, as referred by Blomf. to the acts of Calchas in v. 240. is certainly very doubtful, after the intervening observations in vv. 241—244. The meaning is, the event will come distinct, dawning with the morning rays, a metaphorical expression denoting, that like as objects which are obscure in the night become visible when the day breaks, so also the future, though now obscure, will break upon us when the time for its development arrives. The connexion of the whole passage from τὰ δ' ἔνθεν in v. 239. seems to be this: — the Chorus has been describing the course of events to the time of the sacrifice of Iphigenia: the actual sacrifice he forbears to relate, but doubts not that the prophecies of Calchas referring to that event (see 144. seqq.) will come to pass. Nevertheless, with respect to inquiring into the future, since the righteous providence of God brings, by experience, to each the knowledge of his fate, let that suffice: — as for listening for it beforehand, since it must come, away with it; that would be as bad as groaning before we feel pain: for in the course of time it will be clearly developed, and then it will be early enough to concern ourselves with it. With respect to v. 243. see under ἡλυσίς.

The negative is here joined with αὐχεῖν in the same way as in the expression οὐ φημι sc. so as to throw the force of the negative upon the verb which follows φημι or αὐχῶ in the sentence. It has the same force in P. V. 691. A. 492.

Ἀφιεροῦν to purify from guilt by religious rites. ταῦτ' ἀφιέρωμεθα E. 429. I have been thus purified.

Ἀφιέναι to dismiss, P. V. 315. — to lose, P. 536. — to relinquish, S.c.T. 288. — to emit, E. 769. — the second aorist middle of this verb appears to occur in the corrupt passage, A. 400. (412. D.) πάρεστι σιγαῶς ἄτιμος, ἀλοίδορος, ἄδιστος ἀφεμένων ἰδεῖν. Schütz conjectures σιγ' ἄτιμος. He then before ἀλοίδορος inserts ἀλλὰ, which might easily have been omitted, from its similarity to the following syllable. For ἄδιστος Hermann conjectures ἄπιστος. For ἀφεμένων Schütz reads ὀφεμέναν, and refers it to Helen, who had left her husband. He also alters ἰδεῖν into ἰδών, which is hardly necessary, as the infinitive may be governed by ἄπιστος. Adopting the former conjectures, which are certainly very plausible, we may read (as Scholefield does) πάρεστι σιγ' ἄτιμος, ἀλλ' ἀλοίδορος | ἄπιστος ἀφεμέναν ἰδεῖν. he, i. e. Menelaus, stands by in silence, dishonoured, yet not reproaching, hardly believing that he sees that she is gone from him. The lines are an iambic trimeter acatalectic, and an iambic dimeter acatalectic, to which in the antistrophe correspond τὸ πᾶν δ' ἀφ' Ἑλλάδος αἴας συνορμένοις | πένθεια τλησικάρδιος, in the former of which Butler transposes ἀπ' αἴας Ἑλλάδος, in order to make it correspond to the diiambus of the strophe. Wellauer's objection to the sentence being referred to Menelaus because he has not yet been mentioned, would be of no great weight even if he were not sufficiently introduced in the epithet φιλάνορες preceding.

Ἀφικνεῖσθαι to arrive, P. V. 303. A. 425. C. 878. P. 485. Without a preposition, P. 15. A. 299. 490. P. V. 711. In S. 20. τίνα γοῦν χώραν εὐφρονα μᾶλλον τῇσδ' ἀφικοίμεθα; the meaning is, according to Matth. Gr. Gr. 513, what country could we wish to arrive at? If this be correct, the passage is not one of those where ἄν, as sometimes is the case, is omitted. See ἄν. It should be observed, however, that τίνα γοῦν is doubtful. Some read τίν' ἄν οὖν.

D.) μέριμν' ἀφραστος is objected to by Well. because it is described in the following verses. He therefore conj. μέριμνα φρακτός. So Reisig. This is being hypercritical. He might as well have objected to Virgil's Infandum, regina, jubes renovare dolorem. Porson, Suppl. Præf. ad Hec. p. 48. transposes this verse thus, ταῦτά μοι μέριμν' ἀφραστός ἐστιν ἐν φρεσὶν διπλῇ, in order to preserve the cæsura. Dindorf quotes as a similar instance Soph. 'Αφροδίτας εὐνάτωρ βροτολοιγός 'Αρης κέρσειεν ἄωτον S.652. referring to the charms of female beauty. The masculine form ἄωτος used by Pindar, and, for aught we know, by Homer, is the older: the neuter ἄωτον occurs only in Apollonius and the later poets. Buttmann (Lexil. in voc.) in opposition to the common notion, that the original meaning of ἄωτος is flower, or blossom, and thence applied, like ἄνθος, to that which is most beautiful in anything, contends, from an examination of the passages in Homer where this word occurs (always in the meaning of wool or flax), that the first signification of ἄωτος was the light downy locks of the sheep, or flax plant, and hence transferred to anything singularly delicate or beautiful. He derives the word from ἄημι to blow, with which he compares the Latin floccus, from flo.

Rhes. 404. Orest. 1507. Med. 255. In the Hecuba, however, the Trojans are distinguished from the barbarians, but this is an exception. The usage of the word by the Latin poets is strictly similar, cf. Virg. Æn. ii. 504. xi. 768. Hor. Ep. i. 2. Od. v. 9. quoted by Stanley. Butler observes, that not only does Plautus, when translating from the Greek, apply the epithet barbarian to the Romans, but even of himself calls his countryman Nævius barbarus (Mil. Glor. ii. 2. 56.), nothing contemptuous, however, being implied in the expression.

Stanley aptly compares the use of latrare in Latin. Hor. Serm. ii. 2. Latrantem stomachum bene leniet. Lucretius ii. 4. Nonne videtis nil aliud sibi Naturam latrare. He is, however, wrong in referring νέον δ' ἄνδρα to the whole Persian youth. Yet such is the explanation of Schol. A. and B. So

Butler. ἔὼν δ' ἄνδρα is a reading mentioned by Schol. A. and approved by Pauw, and Valck. on Phoen. 1489. who also proposes to read ἤχῳκε νέον Πέρσις δ' ἔὼν ἄνδρα βαύζει. Brunck incorrectly supposes Ἀσία to be understood from Ἀσιατογενῆς the subject to βαύζει. So Schol. A. This could only be right if the subject referred to were virtually the same in both cases. cf. Pind. Nem. vii. 10. viii. 20. (ed. Diss.) whereas in the present case the persons referred to in the first clause are those who were gone, in the second, the Chorus and others who remained behind. Pauw rightly refers βαύζει to θυμός. So Blomf. The latter, however, is wrong in considering the words πᾶσα γὰρ—ἤχῳκε as parenthetical; the two clauses πᾶσα γὰρ—ἤχῳκε and νέον δ' ἄνδρα βαύζει answer to each other, and the meaning is, my foreboding heart is agitated within me, on the one hand, because all the strength of Asia is gone, on the other, because it yearns for the youthful hero. The two clauses correspond respectively, though in an inverted order, to νόστῳ τῷ βασιλείῳ and πολυχρύσου στρατιᾶς in vv. 8.9.

Stanley less correctly makes it transitive, celebrantes. The form γαναέναι from γανάειν is certainly very doubtful: we should at least expect γάνημι, as in νίκημι from νικάω, ὄρημι from ὀράω, etc. It may be better to consider it as an adjective γανάεις, though this form with the short α is likewise suspicious.

Γάνος anything bright, cheering, or refreshing, often applied to clear liquids, P. 475.607. διοσδότῳ γάνει A.1365. (1391.D.) the rain. But Porson's emendation is decidedly to be preferred. λάφυρα . . ἀρχαῖον γάνος A.

Γάρ for, generally placed second in the sentence, e. g. ἐγὼ γὰρ οὐκ εἶδυστυχῶ κ. τ. λ. P.V. 345.—sometimes third. e. g. ὁ λωφῆσων γὰρ οὐ πέφυκέ πω P.V.27.—very rarely fourth, e. g. τὸ μὴ φρονοῦν γὰρ κ. τ. λ. C.742. So E.764. C.632. But here μὴ φρονοῦν, μὴ θέμις, form, as it were, but one idea, and in E.764, the position of γὰρ depends on the elliptical use of ἀλλά. On γὰρ removed to a distance from the beginning of a sentence, see Hermann on Soph. Phil. 1451. Schäf. Mel. Crit. p. 76. The passage in C.1018. 1019. is obviously corrupt. See under ἡνιοστροφῶ. It is used chiefly to assign the reason for the statement conveyed in the preceding sentence, P.V. 85. ψευδωνύμως σε δαίμονες Προμηθεά | καλοῦσιν· αὐτὸν γὰρ σε δεῖ προμηθείως. It is sometimes placed parenthetically in the sentence of which it assigns the reason. e. g. ἐγὼ δ', ἐποικτεῖρω γὰρ, οὐ θυμώσομαι A.1039. ἐμοὶ δ', ἀνάγκαν γὰρ ἀμφίπτολιν θεοὶ | προσήνεγκαν, ἐκ γὰρ οἴκων | πατρῶων δούλιον ἐσᾶγον αἶσαν, δίκαια καὶ μὴ δίκαια κ. τ. λ., C.73-75. λέξω, κελεύεις γὰρ, τὸν ἐκ φρενὸς λόγον ἰδ. 105. ἐγὼ δ', ἄγει γὰρ αἷμα μητρῶον, δίκας μέτειμι τόνδε φῶτα κακκυνηγέτις E.521. Thus more obscurely in A.774. σὺ δέ μοι τότε μὲν . . οὐ γὰρ σ' ἐπικεύσω, κάρτ' ἀπομούσως ἦσθα γεγραμμένος, and in C. 685. καὶ νῦν Ὀρέστης, ἣν γὰρ εὐβόλως ἔχων . . παροῦσαν ἐγγράφει. It is also sometimes put twice in two succeeding clauses, so that the latter γὰρ assigns the reason of the statement in which the former γάρ is placed. So P.V.333. πάντως γάρ οὐ πείσεις νιν· οὐ γάρ εὐπιθής. Cf. P.V. 182.184.294.296. S.c.T.318.320. P.164.165.656.657.880.890. A.518.520. 806.808. 973.975. C.73.74.497.498.742. 744.983.984. S.694.695. It is also repeated in a somewhat different manner in A.545.546.(559.560.D.)736.739.(758.761.D.) S.480.481.(485.486.D.) Wellauer is wrong in saying that each γάρ is in these places referred to the same sentence. In A.735. δέχα δ' ἄλλων μονόφρων εἰμι. τὸ δυσσεβὲς γάρ ἔργον μέτα μὲν πλείονα τίκτει, σφετέρῃ δ' εἰκότα γέννα. οἴκων γάρ εὐθυδίκων καλλίπαις πότμος αἰεί, the second γάρ is referred to the sentence containing the first γάρ, the meaning being, "one impiety begets another; I say impiety, for righteous houses are ever favoured in their offspring." γάρ is here used where δὲ would rather have been expected. See Hermann's explanation of this passage, quoted under δέ. The same seems to be the construction of the passage in S.479. μηδ' ἀπορριφθῇ λόγος ἐμοῦ· κατ' ἀρχῆς γάρ φιλαίτιος λεώς. καὶ γάρ τάχ' ἂν τις οἴκτος εἰσίδων τάδε, ὕβριν μὲν ἐχθήρειεν ἄρσεως στόλον, ὑμῖν δ' ἂν εἴη δῆμος εὐμενέστερος· τοῖς ἡσσοσιν γάρ πᾶς τις εὐνοίας φέρει, by which the king is to be understood as telling them not to disregard his advice, for that the people were fond of anything by which they could call authority in question, whereas, if they were left to their own feelings, they might possibly be induced to regard them with kindness. In A. 544. τὰ δ' αὖτε χέρσῳ καὶ προσῆν, πλεον στύγος· εὐναὶ γάρ ἦσαν δητίων πρὸς τείχεσιν· ἐξ οὐρανοῦ γάρ κάπὸ γῆς λειμωνίαι δρόσοι κατεψέκαζον κ. τ. λ. the first γάρ refers to the former clause in v.544. and shews why they were on the land at all; the second explains the second clause, πλεον στύγος. We had also other annoyances by land, encamped as we were close under the walls of the enemy; and more odious too, for etc. Instead of the second γάρ, when two instances occur, of which the latter explains the former, δὲ is often used: see Hermann's note quoted under δέ, on δὲ in the sense of γάρ. e. g. πολλοὺς ὀδυρμούς καὶ γόους ἀνωφελεῖς φθέγγει· Διὸς γάρ δυσπαράιτητοι φρένες· ἅπας δὲ τραχύς, ὅστις ἂν νέον κρατῇ P.V.33. It is also often used elliptically in replies where something is implied, e. g. P.V.387. σαφῶς μ' ἐς οἶκον σὸς λόγος στέλλει πάλιν. Prometheus replies, μὴ γάρ σε θρήνος οὐμὸς εἰς ἔχθραν βάλη. (True;) for I fear lest your grief for me should bring you into odium. So 985. καὶ μὴν σύγ' οὐπω σωφρονεῖν ἐπίστασαι; to which the reply is, σὲ γάρ προσηύδων οὐκ ἂν ὄνθ' ὑπηρέτην. Thus frequently; in all which cases the ellipsis may readily be supplied. It is thus used in questions referring to what has preceded. e. g. in C.895. ἐγὼ σ' ἔθρεψα, νῦν δὲ γηράναι θέλω, Orestes replies, πατροκτονοῦσα γάρ ξυνοικήσεις ἐμοί; (to what purpose is that?) for will you, etc. But in A. 1078. ἰὼ τάλαινα. τάδε γάρ τελεῖς, κ. τ. λ. the γάρ explains the τάλαινα preceding. So with the interrogative ἦ prefixed, as P.V.759. ἦ γάρ ποτ' ἐστὶν ἐκπεσεῖν ἀρχῆς Δία; referring to 758. Cf.747. referring to 759; 976. where ἦ κάμὲ γάρ is referred to καὶ σὲ δ' ἐν τούτοις λέγω in 975. In A.1339. ἦ γάρ refers not to what has immediately preceded, but to the general expression of wonder by the Chorus that they do not investigate the real state of the case. Thus οὐ γάρ P.V.989. But in P.784. οὐ γάρ refers to πῶς εἶπας, which is here expressed. Ποῦ γάρ E.405. πῶς γάρ E.577. So τί γάρ P.V. 517. πῶς γάρ τις . . πημονῆς ἀρκύστατ' ἂν φράξειεν κ.τ.λ. "for how else, i. e. than by saying such things as were fitted for the occasion, and concealing my real purpose, could," etc. Upon E. 622. (652.D.) πῶς γάρ τὸ φεύγειν τοῦδ' ὑπερδικεῖς δρα,

Butler properly observes, "aliquid obscuritatis, h. l. attulit particula γάρ quæ hic, ut sæpe, ad suppressam sententiam refertur. Subintelligendum est, ἀδικεῖς Ἀπολλων, vel tale aliquid." The ellipsis is less distinctly marked though equally implied in the interrogative form πότερα γάρ P. 235. A. 616. in πῶς γάρ A. 620. τί γάρ A. 203. E. 202. 648. Cf. Herm. on Viger. 493. "In omni interrogatione locus est particulæ γάρ, quia intelligitur semper nescio, vel dic mihi, vel simile quid. Unde et Latini quisnam, vel nam quis, et Germani denn dicunt." πῶς γάρ οὐ; C. 743. in parenthesis. For how can it be otherwise? τί γάρ; is used elliptically in the end of sentences for τί γάρ ἄλλο; is it not so? thus A. 1110. οὐδέν ποτ' εἰ μὴ ξυνθανομένην, τί γάρ; 1212. καὶ τῶνδ' ὁμοιον εἴ τι μὴ πείθω· τί γάρ; C. 877. οὐχ ὥς δ' ἀρῆξαι διαπεπραγμένῳ· τί γάρ; The construction is different where τί γάρ begins the sentence. See above. γάρ is sometimes so used preceded by ἀλλά that the force of γάρ depends on some succeeding proposition to which ἀλλά refers. Thus in Herod. ix. 27. ἀλλ' οὐ γάρ ἐν τῷ τοιῷδε τάξιος εἶνεκα στασιάζειν πρέπει, ἄρτιοί εἰμεν πείθεσθαι ὑμῖν, ὧ Λακεδαιμόνιοι, where the ἀλλά refers to the clause ἄρτιοί εἰμεν κ. τ. λ. and the parenthetical γάρ is equivalent to ἐπεὶ. Sometimes ἀλλά γάρ are thus placed without the intervention of another word, so that γάρ cannot in construction be considered as parenthetical. Eur. Phœn. 1318. ἀλλὰ γάρ Κρέοντα λεύσω τύνδε δεῦρο συννεφῇ πρὸς δόμους στείχοντα παύσω τοὺς παρεστῶτας γόους, where ἀλλὰ refers in sense to παύσω κ. τ. λ. and γάρ to λεύσω. See Elmsley's note on Heracl. 481. Sometimes the proposition to which ἀλλά, strictly speaking, refers, is omitted; thus P. V. 943. ἀλλ' εἰσορῶ γάρ τόνδε τὸν Διὸς τρόχιν, sub. ἀλλὰ εἴαν χρή ταῦτα. εἰσορῶ γάρ κ. τ. λ. So in C. 369. ἀλλὰ διπλῆς γάρ τῆσδε μαράγνης δοῦπος ἰκνεῖται. sub. ἀλλὰ ταῦτα τί χρή λέγειν; E. 764. ἀλλ' ἐκ Διὸς γάρ λαμπρὰ μαρτύρια παρῆν. sub. ἀλλ' οὐκ ἀτιμίαν ἔχετε.—With εἰ expressing a wish and referring to what precedes. εἰ γάρ ὑπ' Ἰλίου κατηναρίσθης—πολύχωστον ἂν εἶχες τάφον C. 341. where γάρ carries on the sense from Electra's former speech. εἰ γάρ μ' ὑπὸ γῆν—ἦκε—νῦν δέ κ. τ. λ. where γάρ refers to 140. seqq. and the apodosis is omitted. Elliptically εἰ γάρ τύχοιεν ὧν φρονοῦσι πρὸς θεῶν S. c. T. 532. (550. D.) where the reference is to ἃ μὴ κραίνοι. "Nay, say not so altogether; for if they themselves should but experience these things, they would surely perish," etc. εἴθε γάρ S. c. T. 548. εἴθε γάρ θεοὶ τοῦσδ' ὀλέσαιεν ἐν γῇ, where γάρ refers to the expressions just used and justifies them. For I would that (so does their impiety deserve) the gods might utterly destroy them. Cf. S. 847. Preceded by καὶ, expressing an additional argument, confirmation, or wish, P. V. 439. S. c. T. 1061. P. 330. S. 481. 847. 909.

Γαστήρ the belly. γαστρός ἀνάγκαις A. 707. the cravings of hunger.

Γε a restrictive particle, used chiefly to limit the force of a proposition to a certain part of it, upon which a peculiar emphasis is thus placed in contradistinction to the rest, e. g. ὥς οὐπιτιμητῆς γε τῶν ἔργων βαρύνς P. V. 77. since the censor at least (whatever you may be) is severe. ἔστι γάρ πλοῦτός γ' ἀμεμφής P. 164. we have abundant wealth indeed, but, etc. κακός γε μάντις ἂν γνολῇ τάδε C. 766. none but a bad prophet, etc. τὴν πρίν γε χρεῖαν ἠνύσασθε P. So also according to one reading in P.V.950. οὐστίνας κομπεῖς γάμονς, πρὸς ᾧν γ' ἐκεῖνος ἐκπίπτει κράτους. Here πρὸς ᾧν τ' is commonly read. Elmsley omits the particle altogether.—To qualify assertions already made, shewing that a statement must be taken with some limitation. e. g. οὐ μὴν ἀτιμοί γ' ἐκ θεῶν τεθνήξομεν, A.1252. Be that as it may, we shall at least not die dishonoured, etc. οὐ μὴν ἀκόμπαστός γ' ἐφίσταται πύλαις S.c.T.520. οὐ μὴν τι ποινᾶς γ' ῥόμην τοιαῖσί με κατισχνανεῖσθαι P.V.268. γε μὴν, γε μέντοι however, e. g. σκορᾶς γε μὴν ἐκ τῆσδε φύσεται θρασὺς τόξοισι κλεινός P.V.873. ἐπεὶ γε μέντοι λευκόπῳλος ἡμέρα πᾶσαν κατέσχε γαῖαν P.378. When οὐ μὴν precedes γε it is always separated from it by the intervention of some other word or words. — In affirmations or commands, introducing something which gives additional force to the previous statement, and to which attention is thereby particularly drawn. In this case, it is generally joined with καὶ or καὶ μὴν, separated, as in the preceding instance, by some other word, e. g. ἢ μὴν κελεύσω, κάπιθωῦξω γε πρὸς P.V.73. I will order, and, what is more, I will also, etc. ὁρῶ, καὶ παραινέσαι γέ σοι θέλω τὰ λῶστα ib.307. καὶ σθένος γ' ἐκολούσθη P.992. καὶ μὴν παρών γε κού λόγους ἄλλων κλύων φράσαιμ' ἂν P.258. (340.D.) οὐκ ἂν γ' ἐλόντες αὖθις ἀνθαλοῖεν ἂν, γε appears to have but little meaning. Dindorf. Præf. ad Poet. Scen. Græc. quotes this as one of the passages where the copyists have inserted this “particulam παμφάρμακον,” from being ignorant that ἂν is either long or short. On this point see under ἂν sub. fin. οὐ τᾶν in this passage seems an obvious correction. Cf. Soph. Ant. 747. where for οὐκ ἂν γ' Elmsley reads οὐ τᾶν. Sometimes it precedes δέ in a following clause, ναῶν γε ταγοὶ... στρατὸς δ' ὁ λοιπός P.472. Cf. ib. 164. 206. S.c.T.1054.

D.) the meaning here of γεραροῖσι as explained by Pauw, is "senibus venerandis, in quorum gratiam copia ista suppeteret, ut digne sacra facerent:" γεμόντων will then be taken absolutely, "let them be filled with gifts." Abresch quotes some instances of verbs of fulness with a dative, and thus Schütz translates, "ministeriis frequentibus affluant." If, however, γεραρά can mean sacrifices or offerings, and the reading of the following words is correct, the dative may be governed by φλεγόντων, the other verb γεμόντων being put διὰ μέσου. For γεμόντων Bothe proposes γερόντων, which would require a further correction in the succeeding words. The other explanation, however, appears the best; and for the venerable priests, let the altars, etc.

is explained by the Schol. τὸ τῶν γόων in grief. ἀνθεμίζομαι (qu.v.) may, however, perhaps better be referred to παρειάν, and γόεδνα be under-

Γόης (?) γοήτων νόμον C.809.
(819. D.) Blomf. alters this to γοητῶν with Ald. Rob. as from γοητής (?)
from γοάω, h.e. a song of mourners.
γοήτων from γόης a juggler, is, according to him, unsuited to the sense of the passage. That γόης may mean the same, as some suppose, sc. a mourner, appears very doubtful. The whole passage καὶ τότε δὴ πλοῦτον δωμάτων λυτήριον θῆλυν οὐριοστάταν ὁμοῦ κρεκτὸν γοήτων νόμον μεθήσομεν πόλει, is so obscure and probably corrupt, that it is difficult to decide anything upon it. By πλοῦτον δωμάτων λυτήριον Abresch understands the riches of the house, which now would be freely dispersed for the good of the people; Heath more correctly, divitias ædium in expiationem, sc. that by liberality they might in some measure atone for their crime. These explanations, however, are nugatory, from the obvious corruption of the words. Blomf. conjectures καὶ τότε ἤδη πολύν. From the expression λυτήριον we may possibly infer that γοήτων νόμον h.e. a song of enchanters, is correct. And then (sc. when Mercury shall lend his aid) we will utter for the sake of the city a loud female strain of enchantment, auspiciously performed to the sound of timbrels, to release the house (from the curse).

Γόμος a cargo. ἄτης γε μείζω καὶ μεγ' ἐμπλήσας γόμον S.439. (444. D.)
This is unintelligible. Butler conj.
καὶ μέγ' ἐμπλήσαι γόμον sc. ὥστε.

This affords a tolerable meaning:
μείζω referring to ἄλλα, sc. other possessions, even larger than the loss, so as fully to make up the cargo. The construction would be rather better if the verses 439.440. were transposed. There can be little doubt, however, that the whole passage is an interpolation, and that γεμίζω (a reading noted by Steph.) is to be read for γε μείζω.

This is very harsh. Probably εἰς may have the same sense as ἐν, γράφειν εἰς τι being equally good with γράφειν ἐν τινι. The words will then be equivalent to θηρία εἰσγεγραμμένα. Δᾱ O earth, P.V.567. A.1042.1046. E. 805.836. It is a Doric form of γῆ, upon which the Etymologicon, quoted by Stanley, observes, οἱ Δωριεῖς τὴν γῆν δᾱν λέγουσι, καὶ Δίαν, ὡς καὶ τὸν γνόφον, δνόφον· φεῦ δᾱ οὔν, φεῦ γῆ. The form occurs in Aristoph. Lys. 198.

This passage is corrupt, the verse in the antistrophe δυσπαραβούλοισι φρεσίν requiring the penult. of ἄποινον to be short. Hence the reading and explanation of Heath, Schütz, and Pearson are nugatory. Pauw conj. τὰν ἄπονον, but gives an absurd explanation. Wellauer proposes as an emendation, πᾶν ἄπονον δαιμονίων. The sense will then be, yet he exerts no violence: every act of divine persons being done without labour.

Δάιος 1. hostile. 2. wretched. Herm. on Soph. Aj.771. observes, that δάιος in the sense of wretched has the Doric form even in iambics, but that where it denotes an enemy, the common form δῆιος is employed. In lyric passages, he remarks that the Doric form is used for both meanings. This observation appears not quite correct. δάιος occurs in the sense of enemy in iambics in S.c.T. 260. λάφυρα δάων, which is the reading of all MSS. and Edd. Here Blomf. against all these reads δῆων. On the other hand, in C.619. δῆοισιν occurs in a chorus, where the MSS. and Edd. all have δητίοις. Here Herm. and Schütz read δάοισι. In P.V. 352. either sense may be given to the word. It seems then, that nothing can be with certainty decided with respect to the usage of the two words. From δήιος an enemy, we have the verb δηϊόω, and the adjectives ἄδρος Soph. Œd. C. 1533. and δρᾶλωτος. Again, from δάιος wretched, comes δαιόφρων S.c.T. 901. Δάιος in the sense of hostile, occurs in P.V. 421. S.c.T. 112. 132. 204. P. 252. C. 423. E. 154. S. 1050. in the sense of wretched, in P. 274. 273. 947. All these are lyric passages. Once (see above) in iambics S.c.T. 260. δάων the enemy, but in A. 545. δητίων. See Lobeck on Soph. Aj. 784.

Δαιόφρων exciting mournful feelings, S.c.T. 901. from δάιος (q. v.) wretched. The vulg. here is δαίφρων, which the metre, as well as the sense, shews to be wrong; δαίφρων means either warlike or prudent (see Buttm Lexil.), neither of which are applicable here.

So Blomf. but the reading is uncertain. Schütz considers δεδηγμένῳ to have an active signification, which is very improbable. Wellauer proposes δόμῳ for φόνῳ, it not being the φόνος but δόμος which was ἐλκαίνων and δεδηγμένος. He also observes, that it would hardly be consistent in Ægisthus to make allusion to the former murder. Klausen, however, appears right in referring the participles ἐλκαίνοντι and δεδηγ-μένῳ to Ægisthus, in which case φόνῳ τῷ πρόσθεν must be taken as explaining their meaning, sc. chafed and irritated by the former murder. The dative δόμοις may then be considered as put ἐκ παραλλήλου, and more particularly explained in what follows with reference to Ægisthus.

Δακρύνειν [ῡ] to weep, A. 70. C. 79. With acc. to weep for, A. 1468. 1495. mid. v. S.c.T. 796. The penult. of this verb is long. See Pors. on Med. 1218. who considers C. 79. corrupt. This verse, however, may be written not as an iambic trimeter, but as a dochmiac, sc. στύγος κρατούσῃ | δακρύνω δ' ὑφ' εἰμάτων ματαίοις. So Blomf. Dindorf suggests a different arrangement.

Δέ a conjunction, generally placed second in a sentence, e.g. φιλανθρώπου δὲ παύεσθαι τρόπου P.V. 11. sometimes third, e.g. τὴν πεπρωμένην δὲ χρὴ αἶσαν φέρειν ὥς ῥᾶστα P.V. 103. more rarely fourth, e.g. ἐν τῷ προθυμεῖσθαι δὲ καὶ τολμᾶν τινα ὁρᾶς ἐνοῦσαν ζημίαν; P.V. 381. It signifies: 1. as opposed to μὲν preceding, but, e.g. ἀλγείνᾳ μὲν μοι καὶ λέγειν ἐστὶν τάδε, ἄλγος δὲ σιγᾶν P.V. 197. these things are, indeed, painful to speak of, but it is painful also to keep silence. 2. Without μὲν expressed, but, nevertheless, to express something opposed to what has preceded, e.g. σύμφημ', ἀνηκουστεῖν δὲ τῶν πατρὸς λόγων οἷόν τε πῶς; P.V. 40. I assent: nevertheless, how is it possible to disobey the commands of Jupiter? 3. To carry on the subject, almost equivalent to καί, e.g. ὥς ἂν διδαχθῇ τὴν Διὸς τυραννίδα στέργειν, φιλανθρώπου δὲ παύεσθαι τρόπου P.V. 11. that he may be taught to acquiesce in the sovereignty of Jupiter, and to cease from his good-will to men. 4. With a negative in the clause preceding, it has the force of ἀλλά, but, on the contrary, e.g. οὐ κατ' ἰσχὺν οὐδὲ πρὸς τὸ καρτερόν, δόλῳ δέ P.V. 211. not by strength nor by violence, but by cunning. μή τοι χλιδῇ δοκεῖτε μὴδ' αὐθαδία σιγᾶν με, συννοία δὲ δάπτομαι κέαρ ib. 434. think not it is from pride that I am silent; on the contrary, my heart is rent with care, etc. 5. In interrogations it is used, 1. to express transition, e.g. ποίου χρόνου δὲ καὶ πέπρωθηται πόλις; A. 269. But how long since has the city been laid waste? 2. In the first part of an interrogation, referring to something preceding, e.g. κλύεις φθέγμα τᾶς βούκερω παρθένου; πῶς δ' οὐ κλύω τῆς οἰστροδινήτου κόρης; P.V. 590. Do you hear the voice of the virgin? Why, how can I help hearing her? In

P. 326. (which Hermann explains thus, though δὲ is preceded by ἀτάρ, and thus made unnecessary) πόσον τι the reading of Turn. is now adopted. In this construction its usage is very similar to that of γάρ. 6. It is frequently used also without interrogation, to assign a reason, e. g. ἐπαναδίπλαζε καὶ σαφῶς ἐκμάνθανε, σχολή δὲ πλείων ἢ θέλω πάρεστί μοι P.V. 820. Repeat the question, etc. FOR I have more leisure than I wish. Thus P.V. 824. 953. S.c.T. 76. 231. P. 139. 692. etc. Upon this meaning of δέ, Hermann on Viger p. 675. has this observation, "Proprie non magis δὲ pro γάρ, quam apud Latinos autem pro enim dicitur; sed ubi quid in reddenda ratione sic affertur, ut id partem aliquam rei, de qua sermo est, constituat, plane ut in quavis narratione, ubi novum præcedentibus prædicatum accedit, δὲ et autem locum habent, quippe ob id ipsum, quod novum quid accedit, oppositionem quandam fieri indicantes. Hom. Il. ξ. 416. de arbore fulmine icta, τὸν δ' οὐπερ ἔχει θράσος, ὅς κεν ἴδῃται, ἐγγὺς ἐών· χαλεπὸς δὲ Διὸς μέγαλοιο κεραυνός· timet, qui prope videt fulmen immitti: grave autem fulmen Jovis est." The remarks of the same critic upon the contrary use of γάρ where δὲ might be expected, are also worth quoting. "Observa, non raro γάρ dici, ubi δὲ expectasses. Cujusmodi loci sæpe fraudem fecerunt criticis, ut ad emendationem confugerent: v.c. apud Æsch. A. 767. (739. ed. Well.) τὸ γὰρ δυσσεβὲς ἔργον μέτα μὲν πλείονα τίκτει, σφετέρῃ δ' εἰκότα γέννη. οἰκῶν γὰρ εὐθυδίκων καλλίπαις πότμος αἰεὶ. Hic pro secundo γάρ fuerunt qui, quod prorsus alienum est, præsertim in tragico, δ' ἄρ' scriberent. Recte vero poeta γάρ posuit, etsi poterat δέ; sed alia, prouti hac aut altera particula utare, conformatio sententiæ est. Si δέ, opposita duo simpliciter commemorantur: ex impiis factis mala, ex justitia autem felicitas nas- citur. Sin γάρ, prior sententia primaria est, altera autem quasi obiter, ut quæ per se vera sit, prioris confirmandæ causa adjicitur: ex impiis factis mala nascuntur: nam justitia semper bonos fructus habet. Et sic ubique, ubi γάρ pro δὲ positum videri potest. 7. In answering, or remarking on something preceding, e. g. γένοιτο δ' οὕτως C. 545. well, may it be thus. So E. 217. 975. S. 219. For the use of δὲ in replies, with an adversative sense, see Erfurdt on Soph. Œd. Tyr. 380. 8. To express mere apposition, e. g. ἡ κτανούσα, ἐμὴ δὲ μήτηρ C. 188. she who slew him, and who is my mother. Cf. Elmsl. on Med. 940. So C. 828. (841. D.) where Stanley reads γ'. 9. Where the same word is repeated, to give force to the expression, e. g. δεινὰ λέξαι, δεινὰ δ' ὀφθαλμοῖς δρακεῖν E. 34. παροίχεται πόνος, παροίχεται δὲ κ τ.λ. A. 553. In this case μὲν very commonly precedes δέ. e. g. βαρεῖα μὲν κῆρ τὸ μὴ πιθέσθαι, βαρεῖα δ' εἰ τέκνον δαίξω A. 200. 10. Preceded by καὶ with some other word intervening, e. g. καὶ σὲ δ' ἐν τούτοις λέγω, and I reckon you also among these. P.V. 975. So P. 149. 538. 765. C. 866. E. 65. 384. S. 791. Porson on Orest. 614. denies that these particles are ever used by the tragic writers in this collocation; but this remark has been refuted by Schäfer ad Long. p. 350. Herm. on Vig. 677. Cf. ad Eum. v. 65. ed. Linw. 11. It is sometimes used in the apodosis of a sentence, especially (as Herm. observes) when the former member is rather long, to distinguish it more clearly from the protasis. Thus in P. 407. (415. D.) according to Wellauer, the protasis is ὥς δὲ παρῆν, and the apodosis is αὐτοὶ δὲ παίωντο κ.τ.λ. when the mass of ships became crowded together, and they had no means of aiding each other, then they were struck, etc. Butler here conj. αὐτοὶ θ', which Blomf. follows. The apodosis may, however, more simply be referred to ἔθραυον πάντα κωπήρη στόλον, the protasis terminating at παίοντο. Thus, in the apodosis after εἰ. εἰ δ' ἀξυνήμων οὔσα μὴ δέχει λόγον, σὺ δ' ἀντὶ φωνῆς φράζε καρβάνῳ χερί A.1031. if through ignorance you do not understand me, do you THEN make a sign with your hand. So in E. 845. εἰ μὲν ἀγνόν ἐστί σοι πειθοῦς σέβας, γλώσσης ἐμῆς μείλιγμα καὶ θελκτήριον, σὺ δ' οὖν μένοισ ἄν' εἰ δὲ μὴ θέλεις μένειν κ.τ.λ. where the latter δὲ answers to μέν, the former δὲ being in the apodosis of the first clause. There is a curious instance of δὲ inserted after εὔτε in a long sentence (cf. Herm. on Vig. 676.) in S.c.T. 732. (750. D.) Ἀπόλλωνος εὔτε Λαίιος βίβη, τρεῖς εἰπόντος ἐν μεσομφάλοις Πυθικοῖς χρηστηρίοις, θνήσκοντα γέννας ἄτερ σώζειν πόλιν, κρατηθεὶς δ' ἐκ φίλων ἀβουλῆαις ἐγένετο μὲν μόρον αὐτῷ, where Well. wrongly places a full stop after πόλιν. The whole sentence is in apposition with παραιβασίαν ὠκύποινον in v. 725. In the passage C. 615. many conjectures have been proposed, all of them very unsatisfactory. Wellauer conceives that δὲ is used in the apodosis after ἐπεὶ, and that δυσφιλὲς γάμηλευμα and the other accusatives are governed by τίω, to be understood from v. 620. where it is repeated. The sense would then be, "Since I have mentioned atrocious crimes, so I celebrate, though unseasonably, a hateful marriage," etc. But see under τίειν. Thus after a parenthesis, when the sense has been interrupted, δὲ is introduced, A.12-16. εὔτ' ἂν δὲ νυκτίπλαγκτον ἔνδροσον τ' ἔχω εὐνήν ὀνείροις οὐκ ἐπισκοπούμενην (φόβος γὰρ . . ὕπνῳ) ὅταν δ' αἰεῖδεν ἢ μινύρεσθαι δοκῶ κ.τ.λ. whenever I occupy my couch unvisited by dreams (for—etc.) whenever, I say, I think to prevent sleep by song, etc. So in C. 687. (698. D.) καὶ νῦν Ὀρέστης, (ἦν γὰρ . . πύδα) νῦν δ' ἤπερ κ.τ.λ. Compare Soph. El. 776. where δὲ is similarly used after a long parenthesis. — It is also used in addressing. ὦ Περσέφασσα, δὸς δέ γ' εὖμορφον κράτος. C. 483. Upon this construction see Porson on Eur. Orest. 614.

Δειμαίνειν to fear. P.V. 41. S. 70. P. 592. (600. D.) Here τις is understood from βροτοῖς. — to terrify, E. 494. (517. D.) The construction of this latter passage is, according to Müller, ἔσθ' ὅπου τὸ δεινὸν εὔ καὶ φρενῶν ἐπίσκοπον καθήμενον δειμανεῖ, i.e. there are cases in which the terrible, sitting in the right place and controlling the soul, will put it in fear. But it may be better to make εὔ καὶ φρενῶν ἐπίσκοπον the accusative governed by δειμανεῖ, will terrify a man though he be very circumspect or cunning. Cf. ἐπίσκοπος. On the active force assigned to δειμανεῖ cf. not. ad loc. ed. Linw.

The biblical student may compare the expression תִּיבִלְתָּ לְנָא Gen. xxxvii. 19. In P. 655. (665. D.) the construction, as Blomf. observes, is Δέσποτα, φάνηθι, ὅπως κλύης . . . ἄχῃ δεσπότην, the former referring to Darius, the latter to Xerxes. Wellauer wrongly compares it with ὦ πιστὰ πιστῶν v. 667. — In plural, signifying only one person, A. 32. C. 52. 80.

Upon this phrase, Porson on Orest. 1679. observes, "Hæc vox δεῦρο, quæ plerumque locum significat, hic de tempore ponitur. Mixta quodammodo notione sumitur, in Heracl. 850. τὰ πὸ τοῦδ' ἤδη κλύων λέγοιμ' ἂν ἄλλον, δεῦρο δ' αὐτὸς εἰσιδών." He then cites many instances of the same construction, q. v. ποῖ δὴ με δεῦρο ἤγαγες; A. 1109. what is this place whither you have brought me? πρὸς δῶμα δεῦρ' ἀστοῖσι κηρύσσειν βοήν A. 1322. to call to the citizens to come hither to the house to the rescue.

D.) means, to receive an oath on the part of the accuser that oneself is guilty, opposed to ὄρκον δοῦναι. Butler's note on this passage is worth quoting: "Hic et in seqq. multa sunt ex re forensi petita. ὄρκον διδόναι non ad Minervam spectat, quæ jusjurandum in quod juret Orestes, concipiat, ut nos Anglice dicimus, to give him the oath, to administer the oath to him, quod est apud Græcos ἐξάρχειν ὄρκον, sed ad Orestem, qui jurejurando suo se purgat, et sic offert jusjurandum innocentiae suæ accusatoribus, et contra ab illis jusjurandum reatus, ut ita dicam, accipit. Quod hic δέξασθαι ὄρκον, id alibi λαβεῖν ὄρκον. "Ὁρκον διδόναι est igitur ejus qui jurat, non ejus qui jusjurandum imponit. Eur. Supp. v. 1231. ὄρκια δῶμεν τῷδ' ἀνδρὶ πόλει τ'. Chorus scilicet promittunt seque et Adrastum juraturos ut nunquam bellum inferant Atheniensibus. Theseus autem ὄρκον λαμβάνει. Cf. v. 1186. ἀλλ' ἀντὶ τῶν σῶν καὶ πόλεως μοχθημάτων Πρῶτον λάβ' ὄρκον· τόνδε δ' ὀμνύναι χρεὼν Ἀδραστον· οὗτος κύριος, τύραννος ὢν, πάσης ὑπὲρ γῆς Δαναίδων ὀρκωμοτεῖ. Hic patet τὸν δόντα ὄρκον Adrastum esse, τὸν λα-βόντα vel δεξάμενον, Thesea. Sic Iph. Taur. v. 735. ὄρκον δότω μοι τάσδε πορθμεύσειν γραφάς. Hic ὄρκον δίδωσιν is qui jurat, Orestes, non quæ jusjurandum exigit, Iphigenia." See also under διδόναι.

Δή a conjunction, often bearing much the same signification with ἤδη. With this is connected its use with the imperative in exhortations, for, as Zeunius on Vig. viii. 5. xv. (qu. v.) observes, "qui hortatur, is suadet, ne quid differatur." e.g. εἶα δὴ φίλοι λοχίται A. 1634. ib. 1636. ἄγε δὴ A. 767. ἄκουε δὴ P.V. 633. πρὸ δὲ δὴ χθρῶν, ὦ Ζεῦ, θές C. 779. subj. παντάλαν' ἄχῃ διαβοάσω P.630.

Διάγειν to pass through. βίοντον εὐαίωνα διήγαγες P.697. to conduct. πόλιν ὀρθοδίκαιον πρέψετε διάγοντες E.949. (995. D.) ye will gain distinction by conducting the state on right principles of justice. Abresch compares the constr. πρέψετε διάγοντες with ἀγγέλλων πρέπει A.34. and πρέπουσ' ἔχοντες 1195. Here, however, Hermann is probably correct in reading καὶ γῇ καὶ πόλιν ὀρθοδίκαιοι πρέψετε πάντες διάγοντες. In P.661. (675. D.) τί τὰδε, δυνάτα, δυνάτα, περὶ τᾷ σᾷ δίδυμα διάγοιεν ἁμάρτια πάσα γᾷ σᾷ; the reading is corrupt, and various conjectures have been proposed. Turn. whom Pauw, Heath, Brunck, and others follow, reads διάνοιεν. Blomfield proposes δι' ἄνοιαν, but alters the whole passage. If we adopt this emendation (δι' ἄνοιαν) and suppose δυνάτα to be equivalent to δυνάστα, the passage may, perhaps, be explained thus: What, O prince, is this double penalty for error arising from folly, concerning (or affecting) thy land, even the whole of thy land? ἁμάρτιον (cf. A.523.) is the penalty of error. The error lay in Xerxes' undertaking the expedition δι' ἄνοιαν cf. 736. πῶς τὰδ' οὐ νόσος φρενῶν εἶχε παῖδ' ἐμόν; and the double penalty was the destruction both of the fleet and army, cf. 714. ναυτικὸς στρατὸς κακῶθεις πεζὸν ὤλεσε στρατόν. Only one of these calamities, viz. that of the ships, is alluded to in the passage, because, as Pauw observes, the spirit of Darius presents itself, and prevents any more being said.

the misfortune. In this passage some defend the anapæst in the second place, as in a lyrical passage, others suppose a synizesis of ιαί. Dindorf thinks the ε of the former word may have been dropped by apocope (Præf.

opinion is the more probable, cf.

ἐκεῖνο both answer disjunctively to τὸ διαμφίδιον μέλος. The words ἐκεῖνό θ' ὅτ', as is commonly read with Brunck, are corrected from the corrupt readings of MSS.

Διαπάλλειν to assign by casting of lots. χθόνα ναίειν διαπήλας S.c.T. 713. having assigned them by lot land to occupy.

Διαπερᾶν to cross over. σὺ τοίνυν οἶσθα διαπερῶν S.c.T. 978. (990. D.) Schütz refers διαπερῶν to the expedition of Polynices, cf. v. 908. οἶσθα referring to the preceding line. Thou, O Polynices, understandest it by coming hither, sc. how powerful the Fury is. Pauw, with the Schol. refers it to death. διαβὰς διὰ τῆς μοίρας, trajiciens Acheronta. Blomf. prefers this.

Διαπεύθεσθαι to ascertain, A. 781.

Διάπλοος sailing hither and thither. διάπλοον καθίστασαν ναυτικὸν λεών P. 374. kept them constantly engaged in sailing about. διάπλοος is here employed as an adjective.

Διατέμνειν to cut through, to traverse, S. 540.

Διατίμαν to honour, (in loc. dub.) S.c.T. 1038. (1047. D.) In this passage Wellauer's explanation seems, if any, to be the true one. He considers οὐ διατετίμηται as equivalent to a simple verb. Antigone then will reply to the question σὺ τιμήσεις τάφω; will you honour him by sepulture? — Why not? has he ever yet been not-honoured (i. e. dishonoured) by the gods? to which the herald replies, οὐ, i. e. he was not dishonoured, πρίν γε κ. τ. λ. For this use of the negative, cf. S. 861. (But see δαμάζειν.) Dind. considers the verse corrupt.

Διατομή a cutting asunder, slaying, S.c.T. 917.

Διατόρος penetrating, piercing, P.V. 76. 181. Met. E. 536.

Δίαιλος a double race, i. e. where they ran to a certain point and then back to the starting point. Used by Metaph. A. 335. of the expedition to Troy, where it was necessary, not only to reach Troy, but also to return home in safety.

Διαφέρειν to tear in sunder, C. 66.

Linw. τῆς δίκης ἐπάξια E.262. a punishment consonant with justice. Upon the passage S.c.T.586. (584. D.) μητρὸς τε πηγὴν τίς κατασβέσει δίκη; much has been written. In the first place, the alteration of τε into δέ, which Brunck, Porson, Schütz, and Blomf. adopt, (so B.) appears probable, there being not so much a connection (as Wellauer supposes) between μητρὸς τε κ.τ.λ. and πατρὸς τε κ.τ.λ. in the next line, as an opposition of μητρὸς δέ to the four preceding lines. [This opposition, however, does not necessarily require δέ. The construction may be explained as an asyndeton. Cf. not. ad Eum. 645. ed. Linw.] μητρὸς πηγὴ may be explained to mean either πηγὴ αἵματος h.e. the fountain of a mother's blood, or πηγὴ δακρύων the source of a mother's tears. If the former be preferred, the sense will be, What justice (of cause) shall quench the fountain of a mother's blood, i.e. prevent its rising in vengeance against you? not as Butler explains it, sc. What justice is it which would take the life of a mother? for thus the force of the sentence is lost, which is to shew the consequences of such an act, cf. v.568. πῶς σοὶ ξύμμαχος γενήσεται; If the latter sense of μητρὸς πηγὴ be adopted, it will mean, What justice of cause will quench the fountain of a mother's tears? i.e. How should a mother rejoice at evil done her, although justly? or, as Butler well translates it, An credis patriam tuam bello quamvis jure sibi illato lætaturam? The meaning of the whole passage is, "As the murder of a mother (or the causing her grief) though justly, can never do good to the author of it, so you must not expect the aid of your country if you invade her thus." μητὴρ is not put for one's country, as Wellauer says, but compared to πατρίς in the next verse. It cannot be denied, however, that both the above explanations of μητρὸς πηγὴν are harsh. Schütz's emendation is elegant and probable: μητρὸς δὲ πηγὴ τις κατασβέσει δίκην; matris vero cæsæ vindictam num fons aliquis extinguet? Shall any fountain quench the avenging justice of a murdered mother? Wellauer denies that μητρὸς δίκη could be used thus. It is, however, so used in A. 1407. μὰ τὴν τέλειον τῆς ἐμῆς παιδὸς δίκην, referring to the murder of Iphigenia. — In S. 1057. (1072. D.) καὶ δίκαι δίκας ἔπεσθαι, Heath reads καὶ δίκαι, and translates et ut id quod justum est justa etiam sequi possint, effectum est. πάρα in v. 1059. will then be for πάρεστι. If δίκαι, not δίκαι be read, the meaning must be καὶ δίκαι (ἐστὶ) δίκας κ.τ.λ. and πάρα must be joined with θεοῦ, it is right that justice should attend us by deliverance from God agreeably to our prayers. — a cause or suit, as δίκης γενέσθαι τῆσδ' ἐπήκοος μένω E. 702. φόνου δίκας E. 450. an indictment for murder. αἵματος δίκην E. 652. 772. ὀφλεῖν δίκην A. 520. to lose a cause. κρίνειν δίκην E. 446. to decide a cause. εἰσάγειν δίκην E. 552. to bring it into court. κυρῶσαι δίκην ib. 609. to settle a cause Cf. 551. ὅπως ἂν εὖ καταγνωσθῇ δίκη 543. that it may be rightly decided. διαγνῶναι δίκην 670. to decide a cause. μὴ τυχοῦσα τῆς δίκης 689. having lost it. τέλος δίκης 234. the issue of a cause. οὐχ ἔχουσα τῆς δίκης τέλος 699. losing the issue of the cause. ἐκπέφυγεν αἵματος δίκην 722. been acquitted on a charge of murder. κραί-

Of E. 468. (492. D.) νῦν καταστροφὰι νέων θεσμίων εἰ κρατήσῃ δίκαι τε καὶ βλάβαι τοῦδε μητροκτόνου, two meanings may be assigned: either, Now are there violent overthrowings, or revolutions of new laws (i.e. as Wakefield says, quibus originem dant novæ leges, better perhaps, overthrowings of the old and introductions of new, cf. μεθάρμοσαι τρόπους νέους P.V. 309.) if the cause and guilt (i.e. the unrighteous cause) of this matricide shall prevail; or, secondly (as proposed by Stanley in his MS. emend. of his version), Now is the overthrowing of new laws (i.e. of those of Apollo and Minerva, younger gods), if the accusation and punishment of this matricide shall take effect. This is very well in itself, but, as Butler observes, does not agree so well with what follows. πρόσφατοι δίκαι C. 793. fresh punishment. In C. 59. (61. D.) for ῥοπή ἐπισκοπεῖ δίκαν, Turn. reads δίκας, which recent edd. follow, making it the genitive after ῥοπή. So Schol.

This seems almost necessary to qualify ῥοπή. Wellauer, however, is of opinion that δίκαν or even δίκας is the accusative after ἐπισκοπεῖ, coll. E. 219. δίκας δὲ Παλλὰς τῶνδ' ἐποπτεύσει Θεά. But cf. ῥοπή. — δίκη ἐστὶ, the same as δίκαιόν ἐστι. δίκη γάρ ἐστι φῶτος ἀρχηγού τῖειν γυναῖκα A. 250. it is just. ἐστὶ is omitted, S.c.T. 848. Well. approves this, observing that it is scarcely consistent in a chorus of Persians to call Greece αἶαν Δίαν. Δίπλαξ a double surface. In P. 269. (277. D.) πλαγκτοῖς ἐν διπλάκεσσι, the meaning is obscure. Some,

as Schütz, explain it of the planks of the ships, upon which the bodies were floating. Butler, however, properly remarks, that it is not dead bodies, but living men who would thus cling to the planks. Moreover, the exclamation of the Chorus answers to what is stated by the messenger, vv. 264-5. πλήθουσι νεκρῶν ... Σαλαμῖνος ἀκταὶ πᾶς τε πρόσχωρος τόπος, where there is no mention of planks: to which the Chorus replies, λέγεις κ. τ. λ. Blomfield, following the remark of Schol. A. πλαγκτοῖς ὡς ἂν εἴποι τις διαύλοις τὰ γὰρ κύματα ἐγχεῖται καὶ ὑπονοστεῖ, interprets both words of the ebbing and flowing surface of the sea. The observation of Schol. B. however, guides us to a better meaning. Διπλάκεσσι. διπλαῖς ἀκταῖς Σαλαμῖνος καὶ τῆς γῆς. Taking it in this sense, it answers precisely to the statement of the messenger quoted above: by γῆς is understood the adjacent continent. So Heath explains διπλάκεσσι, only that he understands the two shores to be those of Attica and Argolis. The difficulty now lies in the word πλαγκτοῖς as applied to shores. Heath understands it to mean quassatus, verberatus, and quotes from Hesych. πλαγχθέντες, πληγέντες. Butler also understands it to mean the same as the compound ἀλίπλαγκτος in Soph. Aj. 596. which he explains mari allisa, mari circumflua. Here however, Hermann has adopted the reading ἀλίπλακτος. It seems very doubtful whether ἀλίπλαγκτος, and much more πλαγκτός, can mean this. It may be better to understand πλαγκτοῖς in its simple sense, and refer it to the restless aspect of the two shores, as they are agitated by the ebb and flow. Dind. conceiving that δίπλακες will not bear either of the meanings above assigned to it, observes, “δίπλακες dicuntur (sc. trabes) quatenus ex duobus lignis sunt compactæ.” Cf. θαλασσόπληκτος and πλαγκτός.

Διπλοῖζειν to double, A. 810. This verb is a trisyllable in the Attic writers. Cf. Pierson's note on Mæris s. v. οἰστός, δισυνλλάβως, Ἀττικῶς. Pierson compares οἷς, φθοῖς, καταπροίξεται, διπλοῖδα, Εὐβοῖδα, (Soph. Trach. 74) διπλοῖδιον and ἡμιδιπλοῖδιον, νοῖδιον, βοῖδιον, προχοῖδιον, ῥοῖδιον, γραιῖδιον, οἰζυρός, οἰζύς. Cf. also Porson on Eur. Med. 634.

D.) this is probably to be interpreted of fire and sword, the two weapons which war usually wields for destruction. Bothe explains it of the public and private calamity referred to. Cf. δίλογχος. Blomf. understands it to mean merely vehementemente flagello, i. e. having two thongs, and compares C. 373. Soph. Aj. 244. χώρας τὴν διπλὴν τυραννίδα C. 967. the two princes of the country. The force of διπλῆς in C. 369. (375. D.) is explained by Schütz, “Alterum flagellum est cogitatio eum qui propulsare hæc mala posset (Agamemnonem) jam terra conditum esse: alterum vero hæc, eorum qui nunc imperant, Clytæmnestræ et Ægisthi, manus haud puras esse ab abominandis hisce facinoribus e quibus ortæ sint hæ calamitates.”

D.) for ἡ λιμός, ἡ δίψη τις, ἡ λιβουρία ἔχει, alleging that δίψη for δίψα is not more Greek than γλώσση for γλώσσα. Dindorf, however (Præf. ad Poet. Scen. Græc. p. xxvi), quotes similar forms, as πρύμνη, τόλμη, although he agrees with Buttmann in rejecting δίψη. Wellauer retains δίψη on account of the harsh ellipsis which Elmsley's correction requires. Blomf. follows Elmsley. Buttm. conj. ἡ δίψ' εἴ τις.

concealment. So Heath. Schütz explains it of the house of Agamemnon overclouded with woe, comparing v. 50. ἀνήλιοι βροτοστυγεῖς δνόφοι καλύπτουσι δόμους, δεσποτῶν θανάτοις. The former meaning assigned to δνοφερὰς καλύπτρας is certainly very harsh; and Schütz's appears better suited to the sense of the passage. It may be better, however, by a slight alteration, to read δνοφερὰς καλύπτρας in the genitive. So Schol. Herm. conj. ἐκ δνοφερὰς καλύπτρας. This Blomf. adopts. λαμπρῶς and δνοφερὰς will then be opposed; and the prayer will be, that the house being rescued from oppression, may look brightly with friendly eyes upon him (sc. Orestes), from the dark veil which now overshadows it. Other meanings have been suggested, but none appear very satisfactory. Dind. suspects an interpolation in v. 797.

Pauw, and Butler,) is to be placed after δυρός, h.e. ἅλα στέγων δυρός, keeping the sea out of the ship. Schiltz joins δυρὸς with ἀχείματον, and explains it, belli tempestatem quæ nobis imminet ab Ægypti filiis haud expectatam. This is much to be preferred. In S. 985. (1007. D.) πολύς δὲ πόντος οὖν ἐκληρώθη δορί, which is not intelligible, Heath suggests οὔνεκ' ἠρόθη, and with πόνος supplies another verb. Let us not endure those things, to avoid which much labour (was endured) and much sea traversed by us. Cf.

Virg. Æn. ii. 780. iii. 495.—γομφοδέτῳ δορί, in a corrupt passage S. 826. (846. D.) This is explained by Abresch of the ship, quæ tota clavis firmissime compacta. Heath more correctly observes, “γομφόδετον δόρυ idem valet ac apud Homer Il. A. 245. 246. σκῆπτρον ἥλοισι πεπαρμένον.” So Schütz, who remarks, “agitur de violentia, qua Danaïdes in navem coacturus sit Præco, agendo, trahendo, trudendo, lanceæ ictibus vulnerando.” Herm. conj. γομφοδέτῳ δὲ δόρει διώλον. On the form δόρει as used by the tragics, see Herm. on Soph. Aj. v. 1035. Œd. Col. 626. (where cf. not. ad loc. ed. Linw.) 1316. 1388.

Δορυσόος or Δορυσσόος brandishing the spear, S. 179. 903. σάγαις δορυσόοις S. c. T. 118. military. Blomfield on this passage contends that this word is always written with σσ, and, therefore, reads here δορυσσοῖς, but Well. rightly observes, that the poets were at liberty to use the shorter form, as in θεόσυντος for θεόσυντος.

Δορυτίνακτος shaken with spears, S. c. T. 140.

Δορυφόρος spear-bearing, C. 758.

Δόσις a gift. γὰρ δόσις S. c. T. 343. the produce of the earth. δόσις ἐκ Διός A. 986. bounty from Jupiter. In a bad sense, δόσιν κακὰν κακῶν κακοῖς P. 998. see κακός.—σὺν θεῶν δόσει C. 771. by the blessing of the gods. γενέθλιος δόσις E. 7. a birth-day gift. δαιμόνων δόσιν E. 908. the bounty of the gods. In C. 93. (95. D.) ἀντιδοῦναι τοῖσι πέμπουσιν τάδε | στέφη, δόσιν τε τῶν κακῶν ἐπαξίαν, Herm. Obs. Critt. p. 62. reads δόσιν γε (which Stanley had conjectured), to avoid what he considers the awkward position of τε. Well. observes that ἀντιδοῦναι is put absolutely, h. e. without an object, and is to be repeated with δόσιν sc. to make a recompense to those who send these crowns, and such a recompense, etc. This may, perhaps, be accepted as a tolerable explanation in a passage which evidently appears corrupt.

S.c.T.904. γνωμῶν δυοῖν P.V.869. δυοῖν μiasμάτων E.570. In the former passage some MSS. have γνῶμαιν, and in the latter Elmsley (Eur. Med. 798.) recommends μiasμάτοιιν, alleging that δυοῖν is never joined by the Attics with the plural substantive. This is also the opinion of Buttmann. See Gr. Gr. vol. i. p. 282. Well. retains the plural. In P.V.780. Blomfield and Schütz adopt δυεῖν as the more Attic form. δυοῖν is, however, as Well. observes, the reading of the majority of the MSS. in this and in most other places.—ἐν δυοῖν ζευκτηρίαν sc. γαῖν P.722. (736. D.) which is also a marginal reading in Ask. for ἐν.

Δύρεσθαι to bemoan, P.V.271. P.574. the same as ὀδύρομαι. Blomf. on P.V.191. compares κέλλω and ὀκέλλω, μόργνυμι and ὀμόργνυμι, σταφίς and ὀσταφίς.

Δυσαχής grievous, E.140. So Rob. Here the vulg. has δυσαχθές, contrary to the metre. Hermann strikes out ὦ before πόποι.

Δύσβατος sorrowfully trodden, P.1026. 1030. (1069. 1073. D.) Pauw rightly explains this, Terra Persica δύσβατος nunc est mihi, eamque tristis nunc calco pede tristi. So Schol. οὐχ ὥς σκληρὰν καὶ δύσκολον εἰς ἔμβασιν, ἀλλ' ὥς ἐπὶ κακῷ καὶ δυστυχίᾳ βαινομένην τῷ Πέρξῃ. Brunck, comparing the v.l. δύσβατος in A.B. and δυσβάϊκτος B. in v. 1030. with the gloss δυσθρήνητος in the same, conj. δυσβάϊκτος. So Pors. Schütz, Blomf. Lachm. This, however, violates the metre, if Wellauer be right in supposing that the epode is divided into pairs of verses, each verse resembling the one following it.

Δυσβουλία evil counsel, A.1591. S.c.T.784.

Δυσδαίμων unhappy, P.915. S.c.T.809. 909. P.V.604. In A.329. (336. D.) for ὥς δυσδαίμονες ἀφύλακτον εὐδήσουσι πᾶσαν εὐφρονην, Stanley reads ὥς δ' εὐδαίμονες. This Pauw and Butler approve. Schütz explains the vulg. like poor persons, i.e. persons who have nothing to guard. This is very harsh. Abresch explains ὥς by ὥστε, and translates, so that, poor wretches (as referring to miseries before incurred), they will sleep the whole night without the fatigue of keeping guard as before. This seems nearly correct. It would be better, however, to understand ὥς in which manner, sc. πάγων δρόσων τ' ἀπαλ-

Δυσευνήτωρ a bad bedfellow. δράκοντας λεχέων (see λέχος) δυσευνήτορας S.c.T. 275. (292. D.) dangerous occupants of its nest. Here many MSS. and Ald. Rob. Turn. have δυσευνήτειρα. δυσευνήτορας M. Steph. Schol. A. Hence Blomf. δυσευνάτορας. This seems necessary, not only to the sense, but to the metre; it requires, however, the change of δράκοντας for δράκοντα δ' in v. 273.

Here Pauw, whom Blomf. and Dind. follow, reads φθινάσμασι from a remark by Eustathius that Æschylus called ἡλίου δύσις by the name φθινάσματα. Well., however, observes rightly, that this is equally true if the vulg. be retained; and for such circumlocutions refers to Erfurdt on Soph. Ant. 420. See also Pors. Hec. 298.

Δυσπήμαντος (vulg. δυσπήματος) E. 459. (481. D.) causing grievous calamity. In this passage, as it stands in the vulg. τοιαῦτα μὲν τὰδ' ἔστιν ἀμφοτέρα μένειν, πέμπειν δὲ δυσπήματ' ἀμηχάνως ἐμοί, the word δυσπήματ' is evidently corrupt. Bentl. rightly corrected δυσπήμαντ'. The meaning of the passage is doubtful, and has given rise to many conjectures. Herm. reads τοιαῦτα μὲν τὰδ' ἔστιν ἀμφοτέρα, μένειν | πέμπειν τε, δυσπήμαντ' ἀμηχάνως ἐμοί, i.e. such is the state of this case; either alternative, for them to remain, or for me to dismiss them, (is) so fraught with peril that I am unable to act. Well.

objects to this, that μένειν and πέμπειν are thus said of different persons; and that it refers only to the Furies, whereas this being the summing up of the deliberation, both parties ought to be mentioned. He proposes ἀμφω μὲν μένειν, but his explanation is forced. Butl. proposes τοιαῦτα μὲν τὰδ' ἔστιν ἀμφοτέρα, μένειν | πέμπειν τε δυσπήμαντ', ἀμηχάνως ἐχει, i.e. either alternative, for the Furies to remain, or for them to produce grievous mischief (sc. by not being allowed to stay) is fraught with difficulty. Schütz appears to come nearest to the truth; he retains δέ, and reads τοιαῦτα μὲν τὰδ' ἔστιν ἀμφοτέρα μένειν, πέμπειν δὲ δυσπήμαντ' ἀμηχάνως ἐμοί, which he translates, "utramque partem (Furias et Orestes) manere, utramque autem dimittere sine offensione haud licet." This translation of the last verse, however, is incorrect. He is right in referring ἀμφοτέρα to both parties, and making the opposition to be between ἀμφοτέρα μένειν and πέμπειν δέ, but not so, in also explaining πέμπειν of both. The general meaning of the passage appears to be, for both to remain at once is impossible, yet to dismiss either is fraught with difficulty. The second clause, πέμπειν δὲ δυσπήμαντα, refers only to the Furies, of whom in v. 454. he says, αὗται δ' ἔχουσι μοῖραν οὐκ εὐπέμπελον. The danger of dismissing Orestes is implied (for an instance of the omission of one of two things referred to see under διάγειν P. 661. and Pauw's note). Following, therefore, Schütz's reading, but placing the comma after δυσπήμαντα, we may refer ἀμηχάνως ἐμοί (sc. ἔχει) to both clauses, and translate such, indeed, is the case: for both parties to remain (is not in my power to effect), yet to dismiss those who may cause such grievous woe (cf. v. 455-7.) is also impossible for me. There is no occasion, with Well., to change the neuter ἀμφοτέρα into ἀμφω (see Blomf. Gl. Pers. 1.) If any emendation were to be admitted, we should prefer Butler's ἀμνηχάνως ἔχει. Perhaps it may be not amiss to subjoin a translation of the passage from v. 448. (470. D.) to shew the connexion of the whole. Minerva is expressing the difficulty of deciding whose side to take, a difficulty arising from the fact, that Orestes, although a murderer, yet could not at once be dealt with as such, being now purified; whereas, on the other hand, if he were not so dealt with, the most grievous results might be expected from the wrath of the Furies. She cannot, however, refrain, notwithstanding the admitted difficulty of deciding, from expressing a feeling in favour of Orestes; and this she does when she has only stated one part of the difficulty, sc. that concerning himself. The verse ὅμως δ' ἄμομφον ὄντα σ' αἰροῦμαι πόλει, would, as Well. observes, naturally come after v. 457. where both parts of the difficulty have been stated; but if we bear in mind that the ὅμως here refers not only to verses 451, 452. but to the whole difficulty (v. 448.) felt by Minerva, notwithstanding which she expresses this partiality for Orestes, we shall not have occasion to alter its position. The whole passage may be thus rendered: for a mortal to decide upon this matter, would be impossible; even for myself it is hardly right to determine hastily in so difficult a case of homicide, especially as you, though you have committed murder, are nevertheless come here as a purified suppliant (yet notwithstanding this difficulty I prefer you, since you are without offence towards the state, h. e. have no tendency to do it mischief); but on the other hand, these are of a sort which it is not easy to dismiss, and if they do not obtain a successful issue, the venom of their spirits falling on the ground (will prove) in after-time a severe calamity to the country. Such, indeed, is the case: for both parties to remain is impossible, yet I cannot well dismiss those who may be causes of such dire woe: since, however, it has come, etc. [The reader is referred to some further emendations and illustrations of this whole passage in not. ad loc. ed. Linw.]

T. 836. πόθεν τὸ δύσφρον τοῦτ' ἐπὶ στύγος στρατῶ; A. 533. (547. D.) Here στρατὸς certainly cannot signify the aged citizens left at home, or as Well. (whom Scholef. follows) says, populus, as opposed to the army come from abroad: στρατὸς is used for the army in vv. 524 and 530, and must surely mean likewise in this passage the army returned from Troy. The Chorus had been expressing its grief at the absence of the army, which grief arose from a feeling as well of their danger abroad as of the evil produced thereby at home; and hence they regarded the expedition with feelings of disgust. The Chorus having then strongly expressed their mournful anxiety for its return, the Herald imagines that there is some reason for this, and asks, Whence did this gloomy feeling of dislike attach to the army? The aversion here expressed was felt towards the army, not as men, but as the abettors of a cause which had produced, and was likely to produce, such mischief. This explanation is suggested by Klausen, and (although the expression ἐπὶ στρατῶ is not without awkwardness) is much better than that of Blomf. who, placing the comma after ἐπὶ, translates, unde tibi hæc animi sollicitudo quam aversatur exercitus? Emper, in Zimmerm. Diar. A. 1135. p. 627. quoted by Dindorf, has an observation worthy of attention: "Scribendum φρενῶν, quæ vox quum omissa esset, e priore exercitus mentione parum caute στρατῶ supplevit librarius." Cf. στρατός. — τὰ μὲν γὰρ ἐκ γῆς δυσφρόνων μειλίγματα βροτοῖς πιφαύσκων εἶπε τὰς δὲ νῶν νόσους κ. τ. λ. C. 276. (278. D.) Of this obscure passage several meanings have been proposed. Lobeck on Soph. Aj. v. 757. conj. μηνίματα for μειλίγματα, which he considers unintelligible. Blomf. translates δυσφρόνων μειλίγματα calamitates, quibus inimici gaudere possint. To this interpretation Klausen justly objects, but himself proposes a worse. Schütz and Well. explain δυσφρόνων μειλίγματα pænas ad placanda Erinnyum numina irata propter intermissam occisi Agamemnonis ultionem, and by τὰ μὲν ἐκ γῆς understand terræ sterilitatem. It seems, however, very harsh to refer δυσφρόνων thus put generally, to the Furies in particular. Scholefield's explanation seems upon the whole the best, viz. "quæ enim e terra oriunda hominibus morbos levant malignos (nam morbos e sequente νόσους intelligitur) hæc nobis contra denunciavit morbos fore, h. e. creatura esse: nempe lichenas," etc. In this case we may either read τὰσδε, with Turn. Steph. or δὲ may be emphatic in the apodosis. For the change to the feminine in τὰσδε from the neuter μειλίγματα, as referring to the noun νόσους following, cf. P. V. 755.

In the first passage Brunck, Pors. Schütz, Blomf. read ἦν. So in E. 225. ἦν for εἰ is read by Pors. Schütz, Herm. in conformity with Dawes' canon that εἰ cannot be constructed with the subj. Dawes, accordingly, in P. 777. (791. D.) reads μηδ' εἰ... εἴη for μηδ',... ἢ τὸ M. This canon is called in question by Herm. Obse. Critt. P. 77. and also on Soph. Aj. v. 491. where he reads εἰ θάνης. Compare also his note on Œd. T. 199. where he disapproves Elmsley's conjecture ἦν... ἀφῆ as being better suited to prose style, and observes, that Elmsley himself appears to retract it on Bacch. 203. 858. See his note also on Ant. 706. On Viger, however, p. 663. he expresses a different opinion, discarding the use of εἰ with the subj. from the Attic writers, but retaining it in Œd. T. 199. as a lyrical passage. It would appear on the whole that εἰ was, though sparingly, joined with the subj. in Attic Greek, although the uncertainty of the readings renders it difficult to form a decided opinion. See, besides the authorities already quoted, Wunderlich Obs. Critt. p. 196. Matth. Gr. G. 525. 7. 6. The plural is ῆσμεν for ῆδειμεν, ῆστε for ῆδειτε, and ῆσαν for ῆδεισαν. This last is restored by him in P.V. 449. οὔτε πλινθυφεῖς δόμους προσείλους ῆσαν. Εἶδωλον a form. εἶδωλον Ἄργου P.V. 567. an image, εἶδωλον σκιᾶς A. 813. (839. D.) an image, a shadow of a shade, i. e. a thing utterly unsubstantial. Cf. εἶδωλ' ἡ κουφήν σκιάν Soph. Aj. 126. νεκρὸν ἡ καπνοῦ σκιάν Phil. 934. σκιᾶς ὄναρ ἄνθρωπος Pind. Pyth. iii. 95. In this passage the old punctuation was εἰδῶς λέγοιμ' ἂν. εὖ γὰρ ἐξεπίσταμαι, ὁμιλίας κάτοπρον, εἶδωλον σκιᾶς δοκοῦντας εἶναι κάρτα πρενμενεῖς ἐμοί, where λέγοιμ' ἂν is referred to what precedes, expertus loqui possum: ὁμιλίας κάτοπρον and εἶδωλον σκιᾶς being considered as epithets of the persons referred to in the next line. In this case the former epithet must mean, as Blomf.

expresses it, imaginem et speciem familiaritatis. λέγοιμ' ἂν is, however, much more properly referred to what follows, cf. A. 720. 870. S.c.T. 357. etc. It is better to make εὖ γὰρ ἐξεπίσταμαι ὁμιλίας κάτοπρον a parenthesis, and connect λέγοιμ' ἂν with εἶδωλον σκιᾶς κ. τ. λ. I can assert from experience (for well am I acquainted with the mirror of familiarity, i. e. as Casaubon expresses it, scio uti consuetudine ceu speculo ad explorandos animos hominum) that they who seem so friendly to me are but the shadow of a shade, i. e. wholly insincere. This is by far the best explanation: κάτοπρον is not an image, as Blomf. translates it, but the mirror in which the image is viewed.

So Dind. In a lyrical passage, however, like the present, this objection seems to be of no force, as similar licences are continually occurring. Blomfield places a stop after πόλισμα, and refers ᾗσεται to the words which follow. Wellauer joins μὴ πύθηναι 117. and πέση 123. in construction, taking καὶ τὸ Κίσσιον πόλισμα . . ἀπῶν as a parenthesis, of which the latter clause is in the nominative absolute. This does not appear to be necessary, as μὴ may in this sense be joined with the future indicative, no less than with the subjunctive (see Matth. Gr. Gr. 519 7), nor is the transition from the subj. to the fut. ind. without a parallel. e. g. Arist. Eccl. 495. μὴ καὶ τις ἡμᾶς ὀψεται χήμῶν ἴσως κατεῖπη.

Choeph. 262. σιγαῖθ' ὅπως μὴ πεύσεται τις, ὦ τέκνα, γλώσσης χάριν δὲ πάντ' ἀπαγγείλῃ τάδε. Κένανδρον ἄστυ is not the nominative in apposition to πόλις, but the accusative after πύθηναι, πόλις referring, as Abresch remarks, to the country generally. The whole sentence from v. 114. may be thus translated: — Thus is my gloomy bosom torn with alarm, alas! on account of this Persian host, lest the country should learn that the great city of Susa is bereft of its heroes, and the Cissian town should cry responsively to the intelligence, (alas! the female multitude crying, alas!) and a rending should be made of their linen vestments.

Εἰσικνεῖσθαι to penetrate. S.551. (556.D.) Here for the vulg. εἰσικνουμένη we should certainly read εἰσικνουμένου with M. Rob.

Εἰσκομίζειν = ἐσκομίζειν to conduct within. A.925.

Εἴσοδος an entrance. E.30.

Εἰσοιχνεῖν to enter. εἰσοιχνεῦσι P.V.122. Ion. for εἰσοιχνοῦσι, which Blomf. adopts in preference. Dind., however, rightly observes, that the word being Homeric, Æschylus seems to have retained likewise the Homeric form.

Εἰσόπιν afterwards. εἰσόπιν χρόνου S.612. in after-time. Probably in E.996. (1044.D.) for the vulg. σπονδαὶ δ' ἐς τὸ πᾶν ἐνδᾶδες οἴκων we should read σπονδαὶ δ' εἰσόπιν.

Εἰσορᾶν = ἐσορᾶν to behold, P.203. P.V.246.568.901.943.1095. A.811. S.563. On P.111. ἐσορᾶν πόρτιον ἄλσος, Blomf. rightly observes that ἐσορᾶν has the sense of bearing, or enduring, and compares Hor. Od. i. 3. Qui vidit mare turgidum, and Eur. Med. 266. κακὴ δ' ἐς ἄλκην καὶ σίδηρον εἰσορᾶν.

Εἶσω = ἔσω (qu. v.) within. εἶσω κομίζου A.1005. go within. ἔξωθεν εἶσω τῷ φέροντι μέμψεται S.c.T.542. (560.D.) The collocation of these words is singular : the meaning can scarcely be other than ἔξωθεν μέμψεται τῷ φέροντι εἴσω. A somewhat similar collocation occurs A. 1166. εὐνάς ἀδελφοῦ τῷ πατοῦντι δυσμενεῖς. with gen. μένειν εἴσω δόμων S.c.T. 214. In C. 1055. (1059. D.) εἴσω καθαρμός. Λοξίου δὲ προσθιγών, ἐλεύθερόν σε τῶνδε πημάτων κτίσει, if this reading be correct, we must with Klausen understand it to mean, "in ædibus paternis lustrari poteris. Λοξίου statua Apollinis posita in ædibus Atridarum." But Schütz's suggestion εἰσὶν καθαρμοὶ appears very probable. Elmsley conj. ἔσται καθαρμός.

E. 446. 982. In C. 417 Dind. rightly adopts from Herm. ἔντε. See under πολεμίστρια.

D.) ποτιτρόπαιος δ' ὦν ἕτερον ἐν κάρφ' μιᾶστορ' ἐκείνου πάσεται, the word ἐκείνου violates the metre. Bothe remarks, "Scribendum ἐκ κείνου, post illud, quod ante passus est. Ita Soph. Phil. 685. εὐδαίμων ἀνύσει καὶ μέγας ἐκ κείνων, ubi Aldus simili menda ἐκείνων." It may, however, be better to join ἕτερον with ἐκ κείνου, referring the latter to Apollo, or the opposition will fail. Upon his head he will have an avenging fiend of a different sort, instead of him who now protects him. Cf. τυφλὸν ἐκ δεδοκότος Œd. Tyr. 455. By ἕτερον is meant not another fiend, but a fiend other than, or, instead of, his present protector. The metre, however, requires — υ —. ἔστιν οὐ conj. Hermann, which perhaps approaches the truth.

Here ἐκπατίοις ἄλγεσι παίδων is usually supposed to be put by a sort of hypallage for ἐκπατίων, h. e. grief for their lost young. So the Schol. δέον δὲ εἰπεῖν ἐκπατίων παίδων, ἐκπατίους εἶπε, πρὸς τὸ ἄλγεσι. It seems better to refer it to ἄλγεσι. Klausen remarks, "ἐκπάτιον quod esse continere nequit in itinere suo, quod huc illuc vagatur, itaque quicquid immodicum est et certis rationis finibus destitutum. Quod hoc loco optime sese habet. Ingens dolor vulturios huc illuc rapit, ut huc illuc supra nidum circumvolitent."

Ἐκπεύθεσθαι to inquire, P. 916. (954. D.) This verse is assigned by Blomf. and some others to Xerxes. This makes the sense easy, but is rendered doubtful by the arrangement seeming to require the first verse in the strophe as well as v. 928. in the antistrophe to be given to the Chorus. So Lachmann, and Hermann, the latter of whom suggests that ἐκπεύθου is here used in a passive sense, "interrogare, sine omnia ex te quaeri." This is approved by Well. and Dind. but justly (as it seems) condemned by Blomf. We may, perhaps, suppose it an apostrophe of the Chorus to itself, urging itself to learn at once the extent of its loss. Such apostrophes are not uncommon in such cases. See for instance Pind. Isth. iv. 24. ed. Dissen.

Ἐκτελής accomplished. P.214. in full power. κύριός εἰμι θροεῖν ὄδιον κράτος αἴσιον ἀνδρῶν ἐκτελέων A. 105. Here Casaub. conj. ἐντελέων. So Voss, Stanl. Pears. Heath, Schütz, Butl. Blomf. Butler, however, (ap. Peile in loc.) subsequently changed his opinion in favour of the MSS. reading ἐκτελέων. Blomf. gives to ἐντελής the sense qui magistratum gerit, quoting Timæus and Suidas. This, however (as Klausen observes), is not the sense of the word in the Tragic poets, but adultus, integer. Cf. Soph. Trach. 757. (ed. Herm.)

Choeph. 248. He himself reads divisim ἐκ τελέων, which he strangely refers to the gods, observing, “τέλη sæpissime de diis, qui rerum humanarum quasi magistratum gerunt.” This, however, is most improbable, the passages quoted by him in support of it being wholly irrelevant. There does not seem much difficulty in rendering the words, men having full power, or authority, h. e. the leaders of the expedition. It may be suggested, however, as better to consider ἐκτελέων as referring more generally to those in the full vigour of life, i. e. those belonging to the army; as opposed to the men of the Chorus who were left behind, ἀρίται σαρκὶ παλαιᾷ v. 72.

Ἐκφάτως with a clear voice, distinctly, signally, A. 689. (705. D.) The word is an ἀπαξ λεγόμενον and is of somewhat doubtful meaning. Well. translates it clara voce. So Passow; the word being clearly derived from ἔκφημι, the middle form of which ἐκφάσθαι occurs in Odyss. N. 308. in the sense of to utter or speak. Blomf. translates modo ineffabili, and observes, "idem significare videtur quod ἀφάτως." It seems, however, hardly probable that ἔκφατος and ἀφατος or οὐ φατός should mean the same. Klausen translates nimium. The Scholiasts are silent on the point. It may be better, at any rate, to join ἐκφάτως in construction with πρασσομένα, h. e. avenging in a marked or signal manner. Schütz conj. τλέοντος, with which ἐκφάτως might conveniently be joined in the sense of signally punishing. So Butl. Blomf. Dind. But can τλεῖν bear this sense?

Ἐλατήρ a driver. ἵππων ἐλατήρ P. 32.

Ἐλατήριον. See seq.

Ἐλατήριος driving away. ὅταν ἀφ' ἐστίας μύσος πᾶν ἐλάσῃ καθαρμοῖς ἅπαν ἐλατήριον. This is the vulg. in C. 962. (968. D.) and is retained by Blomf. and Klausen, the latter of whom explains it thus: "Quando omne remedium lustratione a foco ejecerit omne piaculum. Fateatur multis piaculis inde a facinore Atrei contractis contaminatas esse ædes, sunt vero multa lustrationum remedia, quibus usuri sunt ædium domini. Bene igitur memoratis piaculis (πᾶν μύσος) opponitur ἅπαν ἐλατήριον." ἐλατήριον is explained by the Schol. and Hesych. as being τὸ καθαρτικὸν φάρμακον. If this be its meaning here (which is scarcely probable), the sense will be, When (the application of) every sort of remedy shall have removed by its purifying influence every stain of guilt from the house. But the reading of Schütz (partly anticipated by Stanl. and adopted by Herm. and Well.) certainly has everything to recommend it, viz. καθαρμοῖς ἀπᾶν ἐλατηρίοις h. e. by purifications driving away guilt.

Ἐλαύνειν to drive (as a flock). ἐπὶ πᾶσαν χθόνα ποιμανόριον θεῖον ἐλαύνει P. 76. — to drive violently. τί δ' οὐκ ἐκείνην ζῶσαν ἤλαυνες φυγῇ; E. 574. fut. ἐλῶσι γάρ σε καὶ δι' ἡπείρου μακρᾶς E. 75. pass. D.) h. e. ἃς πέρι πύργος ἐλήλαται.

Ἐλεδεμνάς† a corrupt word occurring in S. c. T. 83. Passow in his Lexicon explains it ὁ ἐλαύνων ἐκ τῶν δεμνίων h. e. forcing men to leave their beds. The composition of the word, however, appears to refute this. An elegant emendation is proposed by Hermann, ἐλέδεμας h. e. ἐλὼν τὸ δέμας destroying the body, murderous. Hermann arranges the passage thus: ἐλέδεμας βοᾷ πέδι' ὀπλόκτυπος = ὥσὶ χρίμπτεται, ποτᾶται βρέμει δ'. This Well. adopts, only retaining πεδιοπλόκτυπος as a single word. Dind. (qu. v.) suggests a conjecture far different, sc. ἔλε (vel εἶλε) δ' ἐμὰς φρένας δέος. ὀπλων κτύπος ποτιχρίμπτεται, | διὰ πέδον βοᾷ ποτᾶται, βρέμει δ'. coll. P.V. 181.

Ἐλειινός pitiable, P.V. 246. Here Schütz and Blomf. have adopted ἐλειινός at the suggestion of Porson, præf. ad Hec. p. viii. qu. v. So Dind. All the MSS. have ἐλεεινός.

Ἐλειοβάτης living in a marsh, P. 39.

Ἐλένας destroyer of ships, A. 674. Here Blomf. reads ἐλέναυς, which Dind. approves. But Lobeck Paralip. p. 228. defends the form ἐλένας, as from the Doric νᾶς, or else contracted from ἐλέναος, comparing Ἀρχέλας, Στρατόλας, Ἀγησίλας. Cf. ἔλανδρος.

Well. in accordance with MSS. and Edd. retains the double ν in this word. Brunck first changed it to the single ν, which Blomf. approves as more ancient. On this point see Blomf. Gloss. P.V. 53. Here another reading is κρατεῖν ἐλπίζω, h. e. (as Schütz translates) sic enim spero fore, ut mulieris viriliter ferocientem animum vincam. This, however, is not so well supported by authorities (though adopted by Pors.) nor does it suit with the sense of the passage.

Ἐμβατεύειν to frequent, to walk upon. With acc. ἦν ὁ φιλόχορος Πάν ἐμβατεύει P. 441. This verb is likewise constructed with a gen. Cf. Soph. Œd. T. 818. So ἐμβαίνειν, from which it is derived, Œd. Col. 401. Arnald observes of this word, "Speciatim dicitur de Diis, qui lo-

Ἐμμοτος applied as lint to a wound, from μοτός lint. C. 464. (471. D.) "μοτός formatur a μόω infercio, unde ἄμμοτος, inexplibilis." Blomf. Gloss. From this meaning of "lint adhering to a wound," Blomf. and others, following the vulgar punctuation, join ἔμμοτον with ἄλγος, and translate with Heath, "œdibus inhærens ad similitudinem linamenti ulceri infarcti." It would seem, however, to be a strange accumulation of metaphors, to apply ἔμμοτον thus to δυσκατάπανστον ἄλγος, h. e. a running sore. Aurat. Jacob. Pauw, read ἔμμονον, which Butler approves. It is better, however, to refer ἔμμοτον to the following words: but here again interpretations differ. The vulg. is τῶνδ' ἐκάς, οὐδ' ἀπ' ἄλλων ἔκτοθεν, ἀλλ' ἀπ' αὐτῶν αἰῶν' ἀναιρεῖν. αἱματηρᾶν θεῶν κατὰ γᾶς ὃδ' ὕμνος. To explain this, it is supposed by some (as Wellauer, Scholef.) that the negative is to be understood before τῶνδ' ἐκάς, and conceiving the word ἔμμοτον to be used for any remedy, they translate the former part of the sentence, Ædibus remedium est, non procul ab his, neque ab aliis extrinsecus petendum, sed ab ipsis proficiscens, etc. (For an instance of this omission of the former negative. see A. 518. etc.) These likewise adopt an elegant anonymous conjecture, διώκειν ἔριν αἱματηράν, for αἰῶν' ἀναιρεῖν. αἱματηράν, and place the stop after αἱματηράν. Others carry on the sense to ὕμνος, in which latter case θεῶν τᾶν κατὰ γᾶς must be read, according to Hermann's emendation. So Blomf. who, retaining αἰῶν' ἀναιρεῖν, corrects οὐδ' ἐκάς for τῶνδ' ἐκάς, and ὑπ' ἄλλων, ἀφ' αὐτῶν for the vulg. ἀπ' ἄλλων, ἀπ' αὐτῶν, observing, that the construction is αὐτοὺς ὑφ' ἐαυτῶν αἰῶν' ἀναιρεῖν, for ὑπ' ἄλλήλων. — If the vulg. be retained, we might translate (adopting Wellauer's explanation of τῶνδ' ἐκάς), Alas! never ceasing sore, cleaving to the house! To destroy life, not apart from the instrumentality of these (its members), nor by strangers from without, but by their own hands, this is the song of (h. e. a subject fit to be sung by) the sanguinary deities beneath the earth. There appear, however, to be strong objections to this, as well on account of the harshness and obscurity of the expressions, as of the metre in v. 467. The reading mentioned above, as adopted by Well. and Scholef. seems highly plausible, διώκειν ἔριν αἱματηράν, ut sc. persequantur sanguinolentam rixam. This seems confirmed by a Scholium, ἣν ἤρισε πρὸς τὸν πατέρα, and by the reading of Rob. αἱματηράν. But with respect to the word ἔμμοτον, Peile appears right in saying, that it requires some substantive to sustain its meaning of a remedy—at least in the language of Æschylus (Cf. ἐλατήριον C. 962)—and that it could no more be used by itself than τομαῖον, βρώσιμον, χρυστόν, πιστόν, and other similar medical terms, with which ἄκος, φάρμακον, or some such word must be combined. We shall therefore probably be right in adopting with Dind. for ἐκάς, the reading of M. ἄκος, and joining this in construction with ἔμμοτον. Adopting this emendation, we may consider δώμασιν and οὐδ' ἀπ' ἄλλων to be placed in opposition, thus—in the house exists a healing remedy for these woes—in the house, and not (proceeding) from others without, but from themselves (sc. the members of that house), namely, that they should avenge this bloody quarrel (sc. of Clytæmnestra against Agamemnon). To the gods below this prayer is chanted.

(850. D.) ὑπαντιάζειν παῖδ' ἐμῶ πειράσσομαι, the reading is doubtful, owing to the elision of ι in the dative singular παιδί. Porson on Eur. Orest. 584. 1427. seems not altogether to deny this licence to the Tragic writers. See also Præf. ad Hec. p. 24. This is, however, done by Elmsley on Heracl. 693. Lobeck on Aj. 801. the latter of whom reads παῖδ' ἐμόν, shewing by examples that ὑπαντιάζειν and similar words are sometimes constructed with the accusative. Cf. Herod. iv. 121. Dind. (so Blomf.) defends the elision of the iota, referring to his note on Soph. Œd. Col. 1435. See not. ad loc. ed. Linw. φίλοις γὰρ εἰσιν οὐκ ἐμοῖς προσίκτορες E. 118. (119. D.) Müller explains here φίλοις οὐκ ἐμοῖς to mean to those not my friends, h. e. my enemies. Blomf. adopt the MSS. reading ἔμπειρος, which certainly is highly plausible, but is yet not absolutely necessary. Butler observes, “ἐμπορος tuetur Sieb. p. 72. partim Scholiastæ, partim H. Stephani auctoritate. (Stephens' words are ‘Alii ἔμπειρος, quæ lectio mihi prima fronte placere cœpit: sed sensum diligentius perpendens animadverti illud ἔμπορος habere in recessu aliquid et ἐμφατικώτερον et ποιητικώτερον quam ἔμπειρος.’) Atque, ut verum fatear,

Ἐναγής included under a curse;
 from ἐν and ἄγος. The sense of this word in S. 116. (122. D.) is exceedingly doubtful, and the passage is corrupt.
 The Scholiast's explanation of ἐναγέα by ἐναγίσματα is hardly satisfactory, and τέλεα, if genuine, would seem to be a substantive from τέλος, not an adjective from τέλειος. Scholefield comp. Soph. Œd. T. 656. where the Scholiast explains ἐναγῇ by καθαρόν, but neither does ἐναγῆς bear that meaning, nor is such consistent with the sense of the passage: see Hermann's note. Hesychius more correctly explains the word by μυσαρός, ἀκάθαρτος, πονηρός, ῥυπαρός, but these are secondary meanings. It seems to imply anything to which a curse attaches: and hence it may be applied equally to an individual, who by his guilt has fallen under sentence of divine displeasure, or to a religious duty, the neglect of which must involve us therein. Hence, if the reading be correct, we may translate ἐναγέα τέλεια rites of solemn obligation, h. e. which we are bound under a curse to pay. The whole passage is corrupt. The Scholiast's explanation is, ὅπου θάνατος ἀπῇ, ἐκεῖ τῶν ἀνθρώπων εὐπραγούντων τιμαὶ τοῖς θεοῖς ἐπιτρέχουσι. This appears substantially correct, but he wrongly conceives ἐπιδρομῶς to be a verb; whereas no such exists. Perhaps it may be best to adopt Hermann's conj. ἐπιδρομ' ὀπόθι. This agrees with the Scholiast's explanation, ἐπιτρέχουσι, and may be rendered—and to the gods rites of solemn obligation are duly paid, where matters turn out prosperously, and death does not come.

Ἐνδάκνειν to bite. The word appears in a corrupt passage ἔχιδνα δ' ὥς με τί ποτ' ἐνδακοῦσα S. 874. (896. D.) in which both sense and metre are violated. Something probably is lost.

Ἐνδακρύειν [ῥ] to weep, A. 527.

Ἐνδατεῖσθαι to divide. Hence, to deliver in parts or to pronounce distinctly, S.c.T. 560. (578. D.) From its meaning to divide, grammarians have also explained it in the sense to abuse, pull to pieces. So Herm. after Schütz, explains the passage to mean "Amphiarauum tandem dupliciter ei (Polynici) nomen exprobrasse, qui scilicet non lites modo, sed multas et magnas lites concitavisset." See, however, another explanation under ἐξυπτιάζειν, and cf. Blomf. Gl. in loc. Elmsl. Œd. T. 196.

D.) the vulg. ἐνδίκως is altered by Pors. Well. and some others into ἐκδίκως, on the authority of several MSS. As regards the sense, there does not appear to be any absolute necessity for this alteration. The word ἐνδίκως does not mean justly as respects the abstract fact of punishing the innocent with the guilty, to which, of course, it would be inapplicable, but justly as respects the moral necessity by which an innocent man, placing himself in the company of evil men becomes thereby by natural consequence, and therefore in this sense justly, a partaker in their punishment.

Ἐξαγίζειν to devote, to consecrate. πολλοὺς πολλῶν ἐξαγισθέντας δόμων A. 627. (641. D.) many, out of many families, doomed to destruction. So Pauwand Butler, "consecratus, morti scilicet, ut piacularis victima." The explanation of the Scholiast, ἐξορισθέντας h. e. expelled as an unclean thing, (so Passow explains the word in his Lexicon) appears to be incorrect. Neither is it equivalent to ἐκ δόμων ἀγισθέντας i. e. combustos vel ad parentalia elatos, as Blomf. supposes. The primary meaning of ἀγίζειν seems to have been to devote or consecrate, from ἄγος a sacred obligation; hence βούθυρον ἐστίαν ἀγίζων Œd. C. 1495. Cf. the use of ἀγνίζειν Eur. Alc. 75. καθαγνίζειν Orest. 40. Such likewise is the force of ἐξαγίζειν, the ἐκ here being merely intensive, and not referring to δόμων, which seems here to be the genitive of relation. Thus Hesych. ἐξάγιστα πάντα τὰ ἱερὰ καὶ ἀφωσιωμένα. Hence the word came to bear the double meaning of consecrated, h. e. holy or sacred (Cf. Œd. C.1526. ἀ δ' ἐξάγιστα μηδὲ κινεῖται λόγῳ), and accursed, h. e. unholy, impure, whence Hesych. also has ἐξάγιστος. ἀκάθαρτος, πόρνος. Suid. ἐξάγιστος. ἀκάθαρτος ἢ πονηρός. See under ἐναγής.

Ἐξαιρεῖν to rescue, take away, mid. v. S.902.—μηδ' ἐξελοῦσ' ὥς καρδίαν ἀλεκτόρων E. 823. (861. D.) Here the sense is, nor, as if you had extracted the heart of a cock (and put it into my citizens), establish among them, etc.

Ἐξαίρετος select, exquisite, A. 928. E. 980.

Ἐξάισιος excessive, beyond ordinary measure. αἰὲ δ' ἀνάκτων ἐστὶ δεῖμ' ἐξάισιον S. 509. (514. D.) The meaning of this is rather obscure. The chorus, in v. 506. states its alarm at its pursuers in exceedingly strong language, upon which the king reproving them in v. 507. they apologize in the words of v. 508. To this the king replies, “Nay, but towards sovereigns there is ever felt exceeding dread,” h. e. if I, as king, only call them πτερωτῶν, you ought not, out of respect to me, to use stronger expressions than myself. In reply to this, the chorus, in v. 510. bids him encourage them not in words only, but in deeds also, καὶ λέγων καὶ πράσσων. It seems highly probable, however, that some corruption has been introduced. May αἰὲ γυναικῶν be the reading, for which αἰὲ δ' ἀνάκτων has been substituted?

'Εξηβος past the age of youth, S.c.T.11. This passage appears to have been generally mistaken by commentators, not observing that three kinds of persons are here alluded to, one of which is expressed by the words ὦραν ἔχονθ' ἕκαστον. The three kinds are, — 1. Those not quite arrived at full vigour, yet capable on an emergency of bearing arms: that is to say, as yet ἔφηβοι, or not twenty years old. 2. Those in the full vigour of life, sc. ἐξέφηβοι, or persons from twenty to thirty-five. 3. Those past their actual prime, yet still in vigour and well able to assist: these are ἔξηβοι, or past thirty-five. The first are denoted by the words τὸν ἐλλείποντ' ἔτι ἡβης ἀκμαίας; the second by ὦραν ἔχονθ' ἕκαστον, h.e. men in their prime, ὦρα being here equivalent to ἡβη; the third by τὸν ἔξηβον χρόνον, of which the words βλαστημὸν ἀλδαίνοντα σώματος πολὺν are an epexegetis, denoting the condition of those who were thus ἔξηβοι. There is no necessity to read ὦραν with the Schol. for ὦραν, or to omit τε with Rob. and eight MSS. as Dind. proposes.

'Εξυπτιάζειν to turn upside down. ἐξυπτιάζων ὄνομα, Πολυνείκους βίαν S.c.T.559.(577. D.) The sense of this passage is obscure. Butl. translates it, nomen ejus alta voce inclamans, which is certainly incorrect. Schütz for ὄνομα proposes ὄμμα, turning upwards his eye. This Herm. Obs. Critt. p. 52. approves, but neither does this give any very distinct sense in this place. The interchange of ὄνομα and ὄμμα in MSS. (see Valck. on Eur. Phoen. 415.) is not uncommon: but in a passage of such uncertainty, it is better to retain, if possible, the reading of all MSS. and Edd. The repetition of the same word in two succeeding lines is no argument against it. (See ὄνομα.) Possibly ἐξυπτιάζων ὄνομα may be thus explained. A thing is said to be ὑπτίος when turned upside down, i.e. placed in a different position to the natural one. Hence, anything employed in an unusual or perverted manner might be said ἐξυπτιάζεσθαι, as the name Πολυνείκης, which properly denoted only the individual Polynices, is here, by a kind of perversion, taken in reference to the meaning of its component parts as a word, πολὺς and νεῖκος. In English it would be expressed by the phrase playing or punning upon the name. Such puns are very common in the Greek poets, cf. S.c.T. 640. 812. and the instances collected by Elms. on Bacch. 508. In the present instance it may be conceived that the name was pronounced so as to give the meaning ὦ πολὺ νεῖκος, νεῖκος, the stress being laid upon the latter half of the compound, sc. νεῖκος. This is alluded to in the words δὶς τ' ἐν τελευτῇ τοῦνομ' ἐνδατούμενος h.e. pronouncing the name twice in its termination, or pronouncing the latter part of the name twice over. See ἐνδατεῖσθαι, πρόσμορον and τελευτή. [Dunbar, Class. Mus xii. p. 206. seqq. objects to this and other interpretations of ἐξυπτιάζων ὄνομα, and conceives that ὄμμα alone gives an adequate sense. Be this as it may, the metrical objection urged by this scholar, sc. the combination of five short syllables, does not seem to be valid against the genuineness of the reading; nor can we approve the emendation suggested by him of v. 575. Soph. Phil. 922.]

Lachm. Dind. On this use of the subject, Dind. refers to his note on Soph. Œd. Col. 1560. Well. conj. ἐπανερόμαν.

Ἐπανθίζειν to cause to flourish or abound. πολλοῖς ἐπανθίσαντες (vulg. ἐπανθήσαντες corrected by Butler) πόνοισί γε δόμους S.c.T. 932. (951. D.) So Well. Blomf. from Vienn. B.D. The vulg. is πόνοισί γε δόμοι. In M. the reading is πόνοισι γενεὰν πόνοισί γε δόμοι. Hence πόνοισι γενεὰν

Lachm. Dind. omitting πόνοισι δόμους. It is transitive likewise in C. 148. (150. D.) κωκυτοῖς ἐπανθίζειν παιᾶνα, h. e. to set off or accompany a pæan with lamentations. Schol. στέφειν ὡς ἄνθεσι. In A. 1433. (1450. D.) is read νῦν δὲ τελείαν πολύμναστον ἐπηνθίσω δι' αἶμ' ἀνικτον, ἥτις ἦν τότ' ἐν δόμοις ἔρις ἐρίδματος ἀνδρὸς οἰζύς. Herm. Seidl. and Well. consider that four complete verses, with the end of v. 1434. and beginning of 1438. are wanting after τελείαν, and that the verses from 1430. to 1440. answer to ant. β' and γ' in 1519—1529. Others, as Butl. with whom Blomf. agrees, arrange them differently, considering the lacuna not to be here, but that the two corresponding antistrophes are wanting after v. 1453. For ἐπηνθίσω, Stanl. Casaub. Pauw. Schütz, and Blomf. read ἀπηνθίσω. Butler prefers a second conj. by Stanley, ἀπήνθισεν. For ἥτις ἦν Schütz reads ἥτις ἦν, which Butler approves. Heath ἥτις ἦς. Well. omits δι' in v. 1438 for the sake of the metre; and Klausen, for the same reason, reads ἐν οἴκοις for ἐν δόμοις. δι', however, is necessary to the sense, if the lacuna is not after τελείαν, and, although it may, as Well. says, have arisen from the following AI, yet in a case where the arrangement is so uncertain, it is better perhaps on the whole to retain the vulgate. The word ἐρίδματος is probably corrupt. Blomf. translates it "a contentione ædificata, i. e. rixam parit," but prefers Scaliger's conjecture, ἐρίδμαντός, from ἐριδμαίνω, irrito. Klausen explains it, firme condita, as equivalent to ἐϋδμητος. With respect to the meaning of the whole passage, Schütz and Butler understand ψυχὰν with τελείαν, to which they also refer πολύμναστον, and translate "nobilem et claram (Agamemnonis animam)." This they join with ἀπηνθίσω, in the sense of "deflorasti (h. e. cædi uxoris filiam ulciscentis objecisti)," and refer αἶμ' ἀνιπτον to the sacrifice of Iphigenia, of which Helen was the primary cause. In this they appear to be mistaken. Retaining the vulg. ἐπηνθίσω, (supposing there to be no lacuna at 1433.), the sense seems tolerably clear and connected. τελείαν and πολύμναστον may be connected with ἔριν, understood from v. 1440. The Chorus is ignorantly assigning to Helen the blame of all the mischief which had happened (see v. 1443. seqq.), first, as having destroyed so many lives at Troy, and lastly (νῦν δέ), as having caused by the inexorable murder of Agamemnon, (δι' αἶμ' ἀνιπτον) a renewal and consummation (τελείαν ἐπηνθίσω) of that memorable succession of strife (ἔρις ἐρίδματος) which formerly (τότε) existed in the house (of the Atridae), a cause of sorrow to its present master (ἀνδρὸς οἰζύς). τελείαν ἐπηνθίσω is the same as ἐπηνθίσω (ὥστε) τελείαν εἶναι. ἐπανθίζεσθαι is, as Klausen translates it, perficere ut floreat aliquid. cf. S.c.T.932. C.148. τελείαν, as Schütz and Butler understand it, h. e. perfectam, regiam animam, would be very harsh without something to explain it, as in v. 946. ἔρις is by some referred to Clytæmnestra : it is far better to refer it to the strife which had so long been a curse to the house of Atreus, cf. v. 150. 1445. etc. There should be no stop after ἀνιπτον, if the explanation assigned be correct.

From the abrupt change of address here from the Danaides to their handmaids, some have supposed that something is wanting, or that the passage is corrupt. The change of persons addressed does not itself appear to warrant such a supposition; but it must be allowed that the words ξύν τ' εὐκλείᾳ καὶ ἀμηνίτῳ βάξει λαῶν, seem more appropriate as addressed to the Danaides. Well. observes, in confirmation of the supposed lacuna, that the preceding verse is mutilated. This is not necessarily the case. The spondee in the third place of the paroemiac may be defended by P. 32. 148. S. 7. See προσπιτνεῖν, and Butler Not. On the corrupt passage δόμων μάλ' ἀχὼ ἐπ' αὐτοὺς προπέμπει δαϊκτὴρ γόος S.c.T. 898. see under ἡχώ. In S.c.T. 264. (282. D.) ἐγὼ δ' ἐπ' ἄνδρας ἐξ κ. τ. λ. ἐπ' is clearly corrupt, as it violates the sense. Blomf. has edited, from a marginal note in Ald. ἐγὼ δέ γ', of the certainty of which correction there can be little doubt. After the address just made, the particle γε is almost necessary in transferring the discourse to himself. Do thou, etc., and I for my part, etc. The change of π into γ is exceedingly trifling. nothing more being likely than that the accidental lengthening of the stroke on the right hand of the Γ should have caused it to be mistaken for a Π.

Ἐπιβοᾶν to accompany with a cry. εὐφημον ἐπιβοῶν Μοῦσαι S. 676. (694. D.) in loc. dub. Probably we should read ἐπὶ βωμοῖς with M. Cf. ἀτερπής. καὶ στέρν' ἄρασσε, κάπιβόα τὸ Μύσιον P. 1011. Here Eustath. on Dion. Per. 791. reads καὶ βόα, but Hesychius retains the preposition, s.v. ἐπιβοᾶ (corr. ἐπιβόα) τὸ Μύσιον. Porson, to avoid the anapaest in the fourth place, conj. καὶ στέρν' ἀράσσω ἐπιβόα τὸ Μύσιον. Burney and Blomf. consider the verse as antispastic. Passow supposes a synizesis in βόα. Well. probably with greater correctness, defends the anapaest, as occurring in a lyrical passage. Lobbeck on Soph. Aj. 706. quotes this among other examples of an anapaest occurring under similar circumstances. Cf. διαίνειν. Dind. proposes κάπιβῶ, which he considers a contracted form of κάπιβόα, referring to his note on Soph. Electr. 882.

Ἐπιβουλεύειν to plot against, S.c.T. 29. Here Blomf. from MSS. correctly reads κάπιβουλεύειν for the vulg. κάπιβουλεύσειν.

Ἐπιδεσπόζειν to command, with gen. P. 237. (241. D.) Here στρατῷ is read by M. and Rob. Blomfield observes that δεσπόζειν more properly governs a genitive, comparing A. 545. C. 186. This is true; but στρατῷ might be defended as governed chiefly by ἔπεισι, the verb κἀπιδεσπόζει being taken διὰ μέσον.

Ἐπιδιπλοῖζω to repeat, E.968. ἐπιδιπλοῖζω Pors. Schütz. There is some error here, as the verse does not answer to the corresponding one in the strophe. Pors. rejects the word, as proposed by Piers. on Mær, p.167. Dind. conj. ἔπος διπλοῖζω. ἔπανδιπλοῖζω Herm.

Ἐπιδρομῶς † S.117. The word occurs in a corrupt passage, as if from a verb, ἐπιδρομάω, which does not exist, though such seems to have been the idea of the Scholiast. Herm. conj. ἐπίδρομ' ὁπόθι, on which see under ἐναγής. M. has ἐπιδρόμω (o suprascr.) πόθι.

Ἐπιθιάζειν to sit as a suppliant before any one, hence, to supplicate, to pray. πόθεν ἄρξωμαι τάδ' ἐπευχομένη κἀπιθιάζουσ'; C.844. (856.D.) It is derived from θοάζειν to sit, which verb is itself used in this sense by Soph. Œd.T.2. τίνας ποθ' ἔδρας τάσδε μοι θοάζετε, ἰκτηρίοις κλάδοισιν ἐξεστεμμένοι; It is denied by some that θοάζειν (which they derive from θοός quick) is used in the sense of sitting, but only as denoting some kind of quick motion. In this latter sense it certainly occurs frequently in the tragic writers (see Erfurdt on Œd.T. 2.), but notwithstanding Hermann and Erfurdt's objections, it has been most satisfactorily shewn by Buttmann (Lexil. s.v. θαάσσειν, θοάζειν) that whether it be the same word as the other, or from a different root, θοάζετε in Œd. T. 2 and θοάζων in Æsch. S.500. can mean nothing else than sitting. Hence, if the simple verb means thus, there can be no difficulty in giving to the compound the meaning assigned above; nor is it necessary with Blomf. to read ἐπιθιάζουσ'. See Buttm. Lexil. in loc. cit. See also under θοάζειν.

But this is clearly a corruption. In S.c.T.768. (786.D.) ἐπικότους τροφᾶς is read by Codd. and Edd. only Ald. has ἐπικότας, and one MS. ἐπιτρόπους. Heath conj. ἐπικότος τροφᾶς angry on account of his treatment. So Pors. Blomf. ἐπικότους τροφᾶς Schütz, Schwenke, Wunderlich. Each is extremely awkward, from its requiring ἀραίας ἀράς to be joined, unless with Herm. we read τέκνοισιν δ' ἀράς. The vulg. is correctly explained by Well. "Œdipus qui educationem victumque debebat filiis suis, dedit quidem, sed ἀραίας ἐπικότους τροφᾶς, quæ deinde explicantur appposito πικρογλώσσους ἀράς."

Here the construction ἐπικραινέτω γὰν φέρματι is so extremely harsh, that we need not hesitate to adopt Stanley's conjecture, sc. καρποτελῇ, the alteration of H for EI being so very slight. The construction will then be the same as in the preceding instance. Well. less correctly translates perficiat, h. e. perfectam reddat fertili fœtu.

'Επιξενοῦσθαι mid. v. to claim hospitality at the hands of any one, A. 1293. (1320. D.) From this idea of claiming hospitality would seem to be derived the meaning we find assigned to the word by lexicographers, of calling upon, claiming support, etc. Thus Hesych. ἐπιξενοῦσθαι· μαρτύρεσθαι, πορεύεσθαι. So again ἐπιξενοδοκεῦμαι· ἐπιμαρτυροῦμαι, and ξενοδοκοῦμαι, μαρτύρομαι. Vid. Intt. ad Hesych. In the present passage, Cassandra, having asked the Chorus to bear witness to her fortitude, adds, ἐπιξενοῦμαι ταῦτα δ' ὥς θανουμένη h.e. I claim as a dying stranger this favour. Whether the word, however, is used by Æschylus in its primary or secondary meaning, or whether the latter does not belong only to a later age, is a question to be decided.

'Επίπας all, entire. οἷτ' ἐπίπαν ἡπειρογενὲς κατέχουσιν ἔθνος, τοὺς Μητραγαθῆς κ.τ.λ. P. 42. This passage, as it is commonly read, is exceedingly obscure. Blomf. proposes two explanations, sc. either to take κατέχουσιν intransitively, qui per totum continentis tractum habitant, or as governing ἔθνος, qui plane continente genitam obtinent gentem. Whether, however, we adopt κατέχουσιν ἔθνος, or κατέχουσιν ἐπὶ πᾶν ἔθνος as the true construction, it is, as he rightly observes, exceedingly harsh. Pauw conj. ἔδος for ἔθνος. The difficulty is entirely removed by the conjecture of Schütz, which Dind. approves, sc. to write οἱ τε divisim, and strike out τοὺς, which was probably inserted by some one who connected οἷτε with Ἀνδῶν. It must be allowed that the connexion of the persons mentioned in 43. 44. with the city Σάρδεις, as both referring to ἐξορμῶσι, would be singularly awkward. Adopting Schütz's conj. the sense will be, and they who have under their command the whole continental forces, Metragathes and Arcteus, etc. ἐπίπας is not used adverbially, but is an adjective from ἐπίπας, of which Dind. quotes two instances from Boeckh, vol. ii. p. 409. 15. 18. The last syllable is here long, although compounds of πᾶς generally shorten it. See on this point the authorities adduced by Blomf. Gloss. and also Dind. Annot. in loc. — In S. 802. the word would be better read ἐπὶ πᾶν sc. over all.

Ἐπίπνοια an in-breathing, a divine influence, S. 17. 44. pl. 572. Alluding to the fabled connexion of Jupiter and Io. In S. 1027. (1043. D.) where φυγάδας δ' ἐπιπνοίας is commonly read, the metre is defective and the meaning uncertain. Schütz, who conj. φυγάδας δ' ἔτι ἐπιπνοίας understands it as equivalent to φυγάδων ἐπιπνοίας, and refers it to the incitements which the herald and his party, being obliged to retire, might use to induce the sons of Ægyptus to hostilities: this, however, is forced in the highest degree. Burgess conj. φυγάδεσσιν δ' ἔτι ποινάς. The reading φυγάδεσσιν appears (as Well. remarks) partly supported by φυγάδες in M. Reg. L. Guelph. The meaning of φυγάδεσσιν δ' ἐπιπνοίας may possibly be, I fear for our sake as fugitives, favorable gales, h.e. which may bring forces from Egypt against us. Cf. v. 1030. If there be difficulty, however, in assigning this meaning to ἐπιπνοίας without something more distinctly to indicate its reference, it may be well to adopt Burgess's conjecture, ποινάς, which may possibly have been changed into πνοίας by a mere transposition of the letters.

Wellauer's attempt to explain it as a circumlocution for father, is harsh in the extreme. ἐπισκόπους may also be taken with εὐχὰς in the same sense as in E. 864. but this is less probable.—adj. watching. εὐφρενῶν ἐπίσκοπον E. 493, watching, or controlling the mind. Hermann, however, condemns the word ἔργμα in this sense, and in Soph. Ant. 541. reads ἔρμα. So Blomf. The word occurs in Eur. Orest. 160. Hipp. 1107. Bacch. 1067. T. 906. — to sacrifice. σφάγια καὶ χρηστήρια θεοῖσιν ἔρδειν S. c. T. 213. In A. 1642-3. (1657-8. D.) occurs this passage, στείχετε δ' οἱ γέροντες, πρὸς δόμους πεπρωμένους τούσδε, πρὶν παθεῖν ἔρξαντα καιρὸν χρῆν τάδ' ὡς ἐπράξαμεν. This, as it is commonly read, is unintelligible. In the former verse Pors. corrected στείχεθ' οἱ γέροντες ἤδη — Blomf. στείχετ' ἤδη δ' οἱ γέροντες. Stanley also had expunged τούσδε. In the latter verse Heath conj. πρὶν παθεῖν' στέρξαντας αἰνεῖν χρῆν τάδ' ὡς ἐπράξαμεν h. e. acquiescere vos oportebat hæc ita fieri, tolerantes prout ea perfecimus. Musgrave ἔρξαι τ' ἀκαιρον. Legrand, whom Schütz follows, conj. εἴξαντε καιρῷ, χρῆν τάδ' ὡς ἐπράξαμεν h. e. tempori cedentes nos hæc ita facere oportebat ut fecimus. Porson retains the vulg. and so Schütz in ed. 2. Blomf. conj. πρὶν παθεῖν ἔρξαντας αἶρειν χρῆν τάδ' ὡς ἐπράξαμεν, defending αἶρειν by Eur. El. 942. where, however, see Seidler's note. It might be better to place the stop after παθεῖν, h. e. χρῆν [ἡμᾶς] αἶρειν τάδε [referring sc. to Agamemnon] ἔρξαντας ὡς ἐπράξαμεν. Hermann suggests πρὶν παθεῖν ἔρξαντ' ἀκαιρα. χρῆν τάδ' ὡς ἐπράξαμεν. Klausen joins ἔρξαντα καιρόν, h. e. opportunitatem efficientem, which is impossible. None of these ways are satisfactory. The omission of a verb after ἐχρῆν, as in the conjectures of Legr. Herm. Musgr. appears extremely harsh. The two best conjectures appear to be those of Heath and Blomf. the latter of which approaches more nearly to the vulgate.

This is an emendation by Schütz for ἐρούμεθα which is evidently corrupt. αἰρούμεθα is read by Canter and some others, and affords an equally good sense, τὴν τύχην referring in that case to θανεῖν σε. Schütz's emendation is adopted by Blomf.

Ἐρημάς †. ἐρημάς γυνίης πέτρα S. 776. (795.D.) The word ἐρημάς, besides being otherwise suspicious [it is found once in the Anth. quoted in Lidd. and Scott's Lex.], violates the metre. The reading of Rob. κρέμας (corr. κρεμάς) satisfies the metre, and possibly may be correct, if the word be a genuine one, the epithet hanging, or precipitous, according very well with the sense of the passage.

The correct orthography is preserved in M. which regularly gives Ἐρινύς.

Ἐρίς Strife, personified as a goddess. Ἐρίς περαίνει μῦθον ὑστάτη θεῶν S.c.T. 1042. (1051.D.) Εὐαγής. ἔδραν γὰρ εἶχε παντὸς εὐαγῇ στρατοῦ P.458. (466.D.) This clearly means, a seat commanding a view of the whole army. About the derivation and orthography of the word opinions differ. The Scholiast's explanation, ὅθεν ἐδύνατο καλῶς ἄγειν τὸν ὀφθαλμὸν πανταχοῦ καὶ βλέπειν is clearly inadmissible. He also explains it to mean καθαράν, κεχωρισμένην, and lastly by αὐγάζοντα καὶ ὀρῶντα, which latter interpretation, as Dind. observes, belongs to another adjective, εὐανγής, which Hemsterh. wishes to restore here and in Eur. Suppl.652. where εὐαγῇ is commonly read. The word occurs likewise in Bacch.660. where Musgr. conj. εὐανγεῖς. The most probable derivation is suggested by Elmsl. on the latter passage, who refers to Bekker's Anecd. Gr. p.337. Ἀγής τοῦτο ἀπὸ συνθέτου καταλείπεται τοῦ εὐαγῆς ἢ παναγῆς. Ἐμπεδοκλῆς ἄθρει μὲν γὰρ ἀνακτος ἐναντίον ἀγέα κύκλον. Here, as he observes, the meaning can hardly be other than the bright disc of the sun. If then εὐαγής mean clear, bright, it is not difficult to conceive that it may also (such clearness being an essential requisite) mean affording a clear prospect. Such is substantially Passow's explanation, who, however, seems to derive it from ἄγος. This would seem also to be the opinion of the lexicographers, (vid. Hesych. Suid. Phot.) but most probably there may have been two different roots, with a derivative similar in sound, but separate in meaning.

The absence of Orestes being due originally not to his own prudence, but to the care of others, is much more naturally ascribed to his good fortune than to his own εὐβουλία. Neither is the phrase εὐβούλως ἔχειν in itself without suspicion.

Εὐλάβεια caution. οὐδὲ τὸν ὀρθοδαῆ τῶν φθιμένων ἀνάγειν Ζεὺς αὐτ' ἔπαυσεν ἐπ' εὐλαβείᾳ γε A. 994. (1024. D.) "Versus ineptissime interpolatus." Dind. The sense is sufficiently clear, sc. nor would Jupiter (if it were allowable for the dead to be raised) have checked, by way of security, him (sc. Æsculapius) who was skilled in recalling (mortals) from the tomb. Thus much seems evident, viz. 1. that the particle αὐτε is corrupt (αὐτ' ἔπαυσ' M. Fl. T.), unless, with Bothe, we take it to mean, "vicissim, quia læsus Jupiter læserit Æsculapium;" 2. that ἄν is wanting to complete the construction with ἔπαυσεν (so Herm.); and 3. that the words ἐπ' εὐλαβείᾳ γε (one MS. omits γε) are an interpolation. One MS. for these words has ἐπ' ἀβλαβείᾳ, which certainly seems better to accord with the words of the Scholiast, sc. τὸν Ἀσκληπιὸν ἐκεραύνωσεν ἀναστήσαντα τὸν Ἰππόλυτον, ὥστε μὴ βλαβῆναι. But whether we read one or the other, it must be admitted that the phrase ἐπ' ἀβλαβεία is harsh and obscure, and ἐπ' εὐλαβεία unpoetical. Possibly something like the following may be the true explanation: — ἐπ' ἀβλαβεία is susceptible of two meanings, either as referring to the state of the dead restored to their vital powers (so Blomf. Well. the latter of whom translates most inaccurately, quominus aliquem ad integritatem reduceret), or to the security which Jupiter wished to obtain for his own laws by checking their infringement. The same ambiguity attaches to the words of the Scholiast, although an accurate consideration will refer the words ὥστε μὴ βλαβῆναι to the object of Jupiter, rather than to the result in the case of Hippolytus. Possibly then some one, wishing to remove the ambiguity from the Scholiast's explanation, added the words ἐπ' εὐλαβεία γε, as a gloss on ὥστε μὴ βλαβῆναι; and this having somehow once crept into the text, another hand may have corrected ἐπ' ἀβλαβεία in order to bring it, as was conceived, nearer into accordance with the words of the Scholiast.

Εὐπρέπεια †. Λίπος ἐπ' ὀμμάτων αἵματος, εὐπρέπειαν τίετον vulg. A. 1403. (1428. D). That this is corrupt is evident, as well from the metre as the sense. εὐ πρέπει ἀτίετον T. ἐμπρέπει ἀτίετον conj. Cant. This is adopted by Blomf.. Herm. reads ἐμπρέπειν, which Dind. adopts, reading in the next line ἀτιτον for ἀτίετον. Εὐπρόσωπος fair, favorable. τύχα δ' εὐπροσώπῳ κοίτῃ τὸ πᾶν ἰδεῖν ἀκοῦσαι θεομένοις μετοικοδόμων πεσοῦνται πάλιν C. 963. (969.) seqq. This is clearly corrupt: Hermann by an ingenious emendation conj. εὐπροσωποκοίτῃ. The position of a die in falling appears to have been called κοίτη, hence τύχη εὐπροσωποκοίτος a lucky posture of affairs. For μετοικοδόμων we may read μέτοικοι δόμων with Scaliger. See Schol. The words ἰδεῖν ἀκοῦσαι θεομένοις are corrupt; the simplest conjecture appears to be Stanley's, sc. ἰδεῖν ἀκοῦσαί θ' ἱεμένοις. The reading will then be τύχα δ' εὐπροσωποκοίτῃ τὸ πᾶν | ἰδεῖν ἀκοῦσαί θ' ἱεμένοις | μέτοικοι δόμων πεσοῦνται πάλιν h.e. and by a favourable turn of affairs, the intruders into our home will experience a reverse, to us longing to behold and hear the whole matter. τὸ πᾶν may also be taken adverbially. Schütz transl., retaining θεομένοις, qui jam se omnia (sc. mala), vidisse et audivisse querebantur. The latter words are correctly explained by the Scholiast, οἱ νῦν τοὺς δόμους οἰκοῦντες πεσοῦνται εἰς τὸ ἔμπαλιν τῆς πρώτης τύχης. Several other explanations have been proposed by the ingenuity of critics, but none appear certain. Blomf. reads τύχη, making it a verb governed by ὅταν in the preceding sentence.

Εὐπρυμνής well guided, steered well. εὐπρυμνῇ φρενὸς χάριν S. 967. (989. D.) well-directed, or sincere, kindness of soul. Butler observes, "πρύμνη est puppis in qua gubernaculum, quo ipsa navis flectitur. Inde metaphorice εὐπρυμνῆς φρενὸς χάρις est propensum animi beneficium." He also well explains the whole passage. Hæc igitur cum consecuti sumus [rather, estis] colite propensum in vos Argivorum animum, eumque habete me ipso, patre vestro, honoratiorem. The vulg. reading here is τυγχάνοντες...σέβεσθε. Stanley conj. τυγχάνοντος (sc. ἐμοῦ). Butler τυγχάνοντες. Since, however, M. Guelph. Ald. Rob. have σέβεσθαι, this reading perhaps deserves the preference. The construction will then be the same as in γυμνὸν σπείρειν, γυμνὸν δὲ βωτεῖν Hes. Op. et Di. 391. On this use of the accus. see Matth. Gr. Gr. 546. Cf. also under τοιόσδε.

For κἄν Pors. reads καί, which Blomf. less correctly adopts, translating it, Quo nomine hoc compellabo, et simul a vero nomine non aberrabo. This, however, is not the meaning of εὐστομεῖν.

D.) μάταν γάρ, εὐτ' ἄν ἐσθλά τις δοκῶν ὀράν, παραλλάξασα διὰ χερῶν βέβακεν ὄψις, Heath, Schütz, and Blomf. understand ἐστὶ after μάταν, and join εὐτ' ἄν βέβακε, making δοκῶν the nom. absolute. This, however, since εὐτ' ἄν absolutely requires the subjunctive, cannot possibly be correct. Another way is, with Wellauer, to suppose an ellipsis of the verb substantive ῆ with the participle δοκῶν, so that it becomes equivalent to δοκῇ. As instances, apparently, of this, cf. Soph. Aj. 871. τίς... τὸν ὠμόθυμον, εἴ ποθι πλαζόμενον λεύσσων, ἄπύοι; Eur. El. 538. οὐκ ἔστιν, εἰ καὶ γῆν κασίγνητος μολῶν, κερκίδος ὅτῳ γνολῆς ἄν ἐξύφασμα σῆς; and Pind. Ol. 11. 56. εἰ δέ μιν ἔχων τις, οἶδεν τὸ μέλλον. Scholefield reads δοκῶν ὀρᾶ, which he translates in fancy sees. Dind. considers the verse corrupt.

Dindorf's conj. which comes nearest the reading of M. (sc. ἡ τοῦδε τύχη) appears the simplest and best. He observes, "τοῦδε propterea est necessarium, quia ab sententia communi, quæ præcedentibus versibus continetur, ad Promethei fortunam, cui nihil ad mentis alienationem deesse ait, orationem deflectit Mercurius." The change of EI into H is extremely simple, and might easily have occurred in the MSS.

Ἐφεδρος one who sits by to await the issue of a combat, and then challenges the conqueror, an antagonist in reserve. τοιάνδε πάλην μόνος ὦν ἔφεδρος δισσοῖς μέλλει θεῖος Ὀρέστης ἄψειν C. 853. (866. D.) Commentators appear to have mistaken the force of ἔφεδρος in this passage, by referring it simply to the present contest of Orestes with Ægisthus and Clytæmnestra: for as regards these,

Orestes was not an ἔφεδρος, as he himself was going to engage at first in the contest. Neither can Scholefield's explanation of μόνος ὦν ἔφεδρος, nullum habens assessorem, possibly be admitted. It seems that Orestes is called ἔφεδρος in respect of the former quarrel between Agamemnon and his murderers, which quarrel Orestes was now about to avenge, as the ἔφεδρος or champion of his father.

This may be read either with the interrogation after πῶς or after ἐφεστίων. In the former case, the Chorus, from the manner of Cassandra, catches a dim perception of her meaning, and alludes to the murder, which it apprehends, from her words, may actually then be taking place within the house. But how? this (sc. your expression) savours of domestic slaughter. This is much stronger than the meaning given by some who place the interrogation at the end, and translate, and how can such a smell arise from the domestic sacrifices? or again, retaining the former punctuation, How so? 'tis merely a smell from the sacrifices within the house. — sitting at an altar as a suppliant. With gen. δόμων ἐφέστιος ἐμῶν E. 547. Cf. ib. 639. S. 360. ναύτην ἄγοντας τόνδ' ἐφέστιον θεῶν ib.

It is probable that some adjective agreeing with φροιμίους is lost, but, as it is impossible to restore it without further aid from MSS., the verse had better be read *στροβεῖ ταράσων φροιμίους * * * οἰς*.

Ἐφοδοῦν (?) to lead upon a journey or expedition. ἐπεὶ στρατὸν εὖ ἐποδώκει P. 648. (657. D.) after he had happily led the army on its errand. ἐποδώκει may be Ionic for ἐφωδώκει plusq. perf. of ἐφοδοῦν. The only various reading is Cant. 1. ἐπωδώκει. The objections to the vulgate offered by Critics are three: first, that such an Ionism as ἐποδώκει for ἐφωδώκει is inadmissible; secondly, that if it were not, the verb ἐφοδοῦν occurs nowhere else; and lastly the hiatus in εὖ. To the first objection it may be replied, that in this very chorus we have, in v. 639. ἀνὴρ with the penult long as in Homer, ἔσκειν for ῆν 648. αι elided in ἐξέφθινται 665. according to the Epic usage, and if the reading be correct, εὖ here in the arsis with hiatus, as in Πηληϊάδεω Ἀχιλῆος. So in v. 544. we have ἐπέσπε from ἐπέπω, etc. These irregularities may, perhaps, explain the appearance of the Ionic change of φ into π. (See Greg. Cor. p. 399. ed. Schäf. and Lobeck on Soph. Aj. 805. who gives other examples of Ionism from the Attic writers.) In the next place, ἐφοδοῦν, though not elsewhere found, is supported by the analogy of the active verb εὐοδοῦν Soph. OEd. C. 1437. where see Hermann's note. [Here, however, Dind. corrects with great probability εὖ διδοίη for εὐοδοίη.] We have also ἐφοδεύειν in C. 717. but with a different construction. Lastly, the hiatus in εὖ is not inadmissible in a chorus like this, where the epic usage appears to be much imitated. We may, perhaps, conclude therefore, that it is safer to retain the vulg., as a doubtful case, than either to correct εὐώδωσεν with Blomf. or ῥωδώκει with Butler. Wellauer's observation, that it is remarkable that both the explanation of the Schol. ἴθυνε . . ἡνιόχει, and the gloss in B. ὠδήγει, have the imperfect (by which probably he means that ἐποδῶκει is the imperfect also), is not much to the purpose. The imperfect is not necessary here, the meaning being, "he used to be called, nay, he was, θεομήστωρ, after that he had conducted the army well."

Schütz, Blomf. and some others understand θήκας with ἔχοντας. Stanl. however, whom Butler follows, more rightly appears to understand it to mean conquerors, h.e. although conquerors. It alludes to those who, during the war, had fallen at Troy and been buried there, and who now virtually were conquerors, although themselves deceased, and buried in the enemy's country. In A.183. (190. D.) Χαλκίδος πέραν ἔχων παλιρρόθοις ἐν Ἀυλίδος τόποις, Schütz takes ἔχων intransitively in the sense of being, tarrying, observing “ἔχειν est habitare, aliquo loco degere, commorari, ut ἔχειν de urbibus usurpatum interdum significat situm esse, adjacere, Xen. Anab. vii. 8.” This may be very true, but since in S.259. we appear to have the substantive πέρα (Ἀπὶς γὰρ ἐλθὼν ἐκ πέρας Ναυπακτίας, although here it must be allowed that the readings differ) in the sense of the country opposite, it may be better with Blomfield to understand it as meaning, occupying the region over against Chalcis. In A.358. (368. D.) Διὸς πλαγὰν ἔχουσιν εἰπεῖν. πάρεστι τοῦτό γ' ἐξιχνεύσαι, Blomf. places a full stop after ἔχουσιν, and joins εἰπεῖν with πάρεστι. This, however, although good in itself, requires the arbitrary change of γ' ἐξιχνεύσαι into κάξιχνεύσαι. It may be better, either to take εἰπεῖν by itself as a qualifying word, so to speak, (Cf. τέτρωται δικτύου πλέω λέγειν A.842.), or to join εἰπεῖν with ἔχουσι, h.e. they may say that they are struck by Jove. On the expression πληγὴν ἔχω, see under ἔσω and πληγή. see also Blomf. not. in loc. — ἔχεσθαι mid. v. to grasp, to cling to. ἀκμάζει βρετείων ἔχεσθαι S.c.T.95. it is time to embrace the images. So in A.1644. εἰ δέ τοι μόχθων γένοιτο τῶνδ' ἅλις γ', ἐχοίμεθ' ἄν, h.e. we would eagerly grasp at or embrace it, namely, the completion of our series of misfortunes. See ἅλις.

Ἡλυσίς a coming. τὸ δὲ προκλύειν ἐπεὶ γένοιτ' ἂν ἡλυσίς, προχαιρέτω A. 243. (251. D.) as for listening for the event before-hand, since its coming will (in any case) take place, away with it. See the explanation of the whole passage under αὐγή. There is evidently some gloss crept into this verse, as it does not answer to the corresponding verse in the strophe, πρέπουσά θ' ὥς ἐν γραφαῖς προσεννέπειν. For ἡλυσίς, which is the reading of Turn. ἡ λύσις is read in M. Steph. We find also the various readings ἂν ἡλύοις Guelph. ἀνηλύοις Ald. ἀνκλύοις Rob. ἂν κλύοις (divisim) Flor. T. Ἡλυσίς is, however, in all probability genuine. Cf. Eur. Herc. Fur. 1041. Hec. 67. Hermann strikes out ἐπεὶ γένοιτ' ἂν and reads τὸ προκλύειν δ' ἡλυσιν προχαιρέτω. Elmsley rejects τὸ προκλύειν. The conjectures of Pauw, Heath, Schütz, and others, depart too far from the vulgate to be worth recording. Pearson conj. ἐπεὶ οὐ γένοιτ' ἂν ἡ λύσις, προχαιρέτω. So Blomf. but without the article. In the absence of further authority from MSS. it is difficult to form any opinion on this passage. It seems, however, not easy to perceive how ἐπεὶ γένοιτ' ἄν, or the slightly corrupt ἐπιγένοιτ, ἄν, could have crept into the MSS.; and hence Hermann's emendation becomes improbable. From the similarity of the reading ἀνκλύοις of Rob. or ἄν κλύοις of Flor. T. it seems as if the word κλύειν might somehow have been inserted; and in order to make this agree in sense with τῷ προστένειν in the next line, the copyist might have prefixed the preposition to κλύειν. It is probable, therefore, that the true reading is τὸ μέλλον δ', ἐπεὶ γένοιτ' ἄν ἡλυσις, προχαιρέτω. This slightly differs from the strophe, but this (as Scholefield, who adopts this reading, observes) may be obviated by reading ὥσπερ for ὥς. By adopting this, we also avoid the awkwardness of joining τὸ μέλλον with μαθεῖν, i. e. justice brings to those who have suffered, to know that which (before) was future, which is somewhat harsh, though, perhaps, not wholly inadmissible.

Ἡνιοστροφός regulating the reins. ἡνιοστροφὸν δρόμον C. 1018. (1022. D.) a race-course. Here, however, there is evidently something wrong. As the passage commonly stands, sc. ὥσπερ ξὺν ἵπποις ἡνιοστροφὸν δρόμον ἐξώτερῳ φέρουσι γὰρ νικώμενον φρένες δύσαρκτοι, it is unintelligible. Pauw removes the stop after ἐξώτερῳ and makes the whole sentence governed by γὰρ. So Bothe, who reads ἡνιοστροφόν. This position, however, of γὰρ is absolutely inadmissible. Wellauer proposes ἔξω περῶ, or thinks that it may possibly be a verb ἐξώτερῳ, formed after the analogy of ὑστερεῖν, προτερεῖν, and the like. This appears equally improbable. It seems difficult to refuse to admit Stanley's elegant emendation ἡνιοστροφῶ, a word which is found in Eur. Phœn. 176. This is approved Pauw, νηπίους Jacobs. Blomf., in adopting the former, remarks, "Scilicet Orpheus fera corda mansuefecit: tu vero etiam placida ingenia latratibus irritas." Well., in preferring νηπίους, remarks that the opposition which Blomf. imagines between Orpheus leading the wild, and the Chorus exasperating the gentle, does not exist. Certainly the main stress of the comparison lies in ἦγε and ἄξει sc. in the drawing, and being drawn. Nevertheless the word πάντα seems to favour Blomfield's opinion: "he drew all things (consequently, even the wildest) by his voice: you, on the other hand, having exasperated even the gentle, will be drawn yourself." The verb ἐξορίνας seems rather to require something as an object: but in the absence of further evidence it is difficult to decide between the two emendations, though ἡπίους, as being the least alteration, is, upon the whole, to be preferred.

Ἡχή a sound. ἡχῇ κέλαδος Ἑλλήνων πάρα μολπηδὸν εὐφήμησε P. 380. (388. D.) In this passage, for ἡχῇ, Pierson on Mœris, p. 176. proposes to read ἡχοῖ, which has been adopted by Brunck, Pors. Schütz, Blomf. Dind. It is also found written over ἡχῇ in B. Cant. 2. Butler also approves ἡχοῖ, though it is difficult to understand his reasons. The mention of the echo in this place would seem unintelligible. It is the shouting of the Greeks (not the echo) which is here referred to, to which shouting ἀντηλάλαξεν ἡχώ (v. 383.)

So far then from ἡχώ in the latter clause confirming the conjecture ἡχοῖ in the former, as Butler observes, it seems plainly to disprove it. The dative is not put for σὺν ἡχῇ (as Arnaldus proposes to read), but is used adverbially, with a shout, as φνγῇ in P.384. 414. and in numerous other instances.

Ἡχώ an echo, P.383. a sound, P.V. 115. 133. 1084. In S.c.T.898. (915.D.) is commonly read δόμων μάλ' ἄχῳ ἐπ' αὐτοὺς προπέμπει δαϊκτὴρ γόος. Here the hiatus in ἄχῳ shows the existence of some corruption; and the expression ἐπ' αὐτοὺς προπέμπει is unintelligible. Schütz conj. δεινὰν μάλ' ἄχῳ δ' ἐπ' αὐτοῖς, valde gravem autem sonum super iis emit tit luctus. Blomf. ἄχῳ 'π' αὐτούς. Lachm. ἄχάν. Elmsl. ἄχάν ἐς οὓς. If the preposition be retained, Schütz's conj. αὐτοῖς seems necessary. Guelph. however, omits the preposition. It also inverts the order of the words, reading ἄχῳ μάλ' αὐτοὺς δόμων προπέμπει. This Scholefield adopts, approving also Elmsley's proposal to omit πρό in the antistrophe. Perhaps this is as satisfactory as anything which has been proposed. Translate "a loud wailing from the house attends them, even a piercing cry." Upon the meaning of the passage, Butler observes, "Falso hæc de funere quod ex ædibus efferretur Portum intellexisse jam monuit Schützius. Locus autem facile expeditur, si modo fingas dum chorus in fratribus deplorandis occupatur, clamorem ejulantium exaudiri ex ædibus. (He then refers to similar cases in v. 78. seqq. S.814. seqq. Θαλασσόπληκτος beaten by the sea. θαλασσόπληκτον νῆσον Ἀΐαντος πολεῖ P.299. (307. D.) This is the reading of the best MSS. θαλασσόπλακτον Barocc.Cant. 1. Lambeth. P. and written over in Cant. 2. θαλασσόπλαγκτον C.H. v. 1. ap. Turn. which Blomf. suspects to have been the original reading. Lobeck on Soph. Aj. 598. where Salamis is called ἀλίπλαγκτος, perceiving that the word is not there used in its ordinary sense, refers to this passage, and wishes to establish an identity of meaning between ἀλίπλαγκτος and θαλασσόπληκτος. But admitting that the Æolians had a word πλάζω πλάγξω equivalent in sense to πλῆσσω, from whence πλαγχθέντες, to which the gloss in Hesychius, πλαγχθέντες. πληγέντες may refer, and that from this are derived the Latin plango planctus, still this would seem to have been confined to the Æolians, and from them derived to the Latins; and it is therefore scarcely possible that a meaning which the Attics did not recognise in the verb would have been retained by them in the verbal πλαγκτός. Again, even if πλαγκτός could have borne this sense, it is not likely that the tragedians would have employed it in both these senses of wandering and beaten. If then we can in some cases decide with certainty on its signification, we may examine whether the same will not apply to the rest. Thus in Soph. Aj. 680. there can be little doubt that the true reading is Πὰν ἀλίπλαγκτε φάνηθι, and still less that whether it be an epithet of Pan, as the Scholiast says (cf. μάκαρες ἀλίπλαγκτοι Opp. Hal. iv. 582), or joined with φάνηθι as Hermann asserts, it is derived from πλάζεσθαι in the sense of to wander. In A. 599. the simple πλαγκτός can mean only led astray, deceived. So also in the compound νυκτίπλαγκτος, which often occurs, the idea of beaten is out of the question, which is true also of πολύπλαγκτος, παλίμπαγκτος, κ. τ. λ. Such being then the undisputed sense in these passages, we may perhaps be justified in inferring that it must hold good in the others, where the meaning is less decided by the nature of the case. In P. V. 465. θαλασσόπλαγκτος is applied to ships as roving on the sea; in Eur. Hec. 770. to the body of Polynices carried to and fro by the waves. There is a passage in P. 269. which occasions some difficulty; and here πλαγκτοῖς is interpreted by Heath and Butler according to Lobeck's idea. Certainly the meaning cannot be strictly wandering, if διπλάκεσσι be rightly explained of the shores of the sea. See δίπλαξ. In the passage from the Ajax, if the meaning assigned to πλαγκτός above be the true one, we must either read from MSS. ἀλίπλακ- τος with Erfurdt and Hermann, (so Lobeck, ed. 1.) or explain the vulg. consistently with the sense. We may observe that πλαγκτός, besides its strict sense of wandering, is also used in the secondary meaning thence derived of restless, troubled. It occurs thus in the compound νυκτίπλαγκτος, and may possibly be thus used here to express the agitation of the coast, vexed and troubled by the waves. The same meaning will suit the passage in the Persæ quoted above.

Blomf. objects to this, although MSS. have no variation, and proposes χεροῖν, which reading he thinks is expressed in the paraphrase of the Scholiast. Dind. conj. ἴσον. There does not, however, appear to be any reason for condemning this use of θάλλειν. See Matth. Gr. Gr. 423. and Bernhardy Synt. Gr. iii. 17. who compares Theoc. 25. 16. ἐπεὶ μελιηδέα ποίην Λειμῶνες θαλέθουσι. Neither does βίον seem objectionable; the expressions μητρὸς ἀγρίας, παρθένου πηγῆς, γαίας τέκνα, being all derived from living objects. In S. 99. (105. D.) the part. τεθαλὼς h. e. become vigorous, is conj. by Bothe for the vulg. τὸ θάλος. The Scholiast explains both πυθμὴν and τὸ θάλος of Ægyptus; which is so evidently false as to make it probable that he read the passage differently. Bothe's conjecture accords well with the explanation of the Schol. and expresses the new vigour displayed by the aged Ægyptus to effect this marriage for his sons. See νεάζειν and πυθμὴν.

In the first verse Valck. on Eur. Hipp. 1247. conj. ἔταφεν, ἔταφεν, i.e. ἐτάφησαν, a termination of the aorist which, excepting this passage in the Hippolytus, occurs nowhere else in the tragic writers. In this he is followed by Brunck, Schütz, and Blomf. Some commentators, who retain ἔταφον, consider it to have an intransitive signification, like κεύθω and some other verbs. Such was, perhaps, the Scholiast's opinion, who explains it by ἀπέθανον, ἀπέθανον. But the form ἔταφον, from θάπτω, is exceedingly doubtful. Pauw refers it to Xerxes in the first person: Abresch joins it with the accusative in the preceding verse. — In the second verse ὅπισθεν δ' ἐπόμενοι violates the metre. ὅπισθεν ἐπόμενοι Blomf. ὅπιθε δ' ἐπόμενοι Passow. Wellauer, considering that δὲ injures the meaning, and may possibly have been inserted by some one in whose copy κακὰ πρὸς κακά was read in the strophe, reads ὅπιθεν ἐπόμενοι. — With respect to the meaning, Schütz explains σκηναῖς τροχηλάτοιςι to refer to the covered carriages in which the Persians were wont to carry their dead to burial. Schol. ἔθος ἦν τοῖς Πέρσαις σκηνὰς τῶν ἀμαξῶν ἄνωθεν ποιουμένους, ἐπιφέρειν ἐκεῖσε τοὺς νεκρούς, καὶ οὕτως αὐτοὺς προπεμπέοντες, ἔθαπτον. Schütz reads ἐπομένοις, and translates ἀμφὶ σκηναῖς κ.τ.λ. not with cars, etc. nor with attendants, a sense which ἀμφὶ clearly cannot bear. Butler conj. ἐπομέναις as referring to ἀμάξαις. So Blomf. who is equally incorrect with Schütz in translating ἀμφὶ σκηναῖς in sandapipilis; οὐκ ὅπισθεν ἐπόμενοι he refers to the dead, who were not brought home with the army. Well., referring ἐπόμενοι to the dead, explains σκηναῖς τροχηλάτοιςι of the chariot of Xerxes, which these being dead no longer accompanied. So Dind. Heath refers it to the tents of the camp, near which, in prosperous warfare, the dead are usually buried, whereas, in this case, they were buried in a hasty manner, wherever they happened to lie. None of these explanations appear quite satisfactory. Dind. rightly observes that ἔταφον, ἔταφον is from ταφεῖν not θάπτειν, sc. obstupui. Cf. ταφεῖν. The construction must then be οὐχ ἐπόμενοι (εἰσὶ h. e. οὐχ ἔπονται) ἀμφὶ σκ. τροχ. ὅπιθεν. Possibly ἐπομένοις may be conj. as the dative governed by ἔταφον. Cf. συνορμένοις in A. 419. or ἐπομένους from C. Turn. which have ἐπόμενος.

temples of the gods. It seems doubtful whether θήκη can thus be understood. Müller and Butler refer it to the sepulchres of the departed ancestors of the Danaïdes, which were under the protection of the infernal gods. Perhaps χθόνιοι rather refers to the deceased heroes of the coun-

Θοάζειν to sit, S. 590. (595. D.)
ὑπ' ἀρχὰς δ' οὔτινος θοάζων τὸ μείον κρεισσόνων κρατύνει· οὔτινος ἄνωθεν ἡμένου σέβει κάτω. In the Scholium on this passage, οὐχ ὑπὸ δὲ τὰς ἀρχὰς τινος τῶν κρεισσόνων καθήμενος, τὸ μείον ἔχων, we see that the explanation of θοάζων is καθήμενος, sitting.
Likewise in Soph. Œd. T. 2. τίνας ποθ' ἔδρας τάσδε μοι θοάζετε; the explanation which stands first in the Scholium is θοάζετε. κατὰ διάλυσιν ἀντὶ τοῦ θάσσετε. From this Buttm.
(Lexil. v. θαάσσειν) rightly observes that this must have been the general traditional explanation. The meaning of the passage is, He does not, sitting under the authority of any one, wield a weaker power than (others) more mighty: he does not feel reverence below, whilst some one is sitting above him. To this Erfurdt, Hermann (on Soph. Œd. T. v. 2.) and others, who wish to derive θοάζω from θοός, and connect it with the
the idea of quick motion, object;
they do not, however, explain themselves further, than to deny that θοάζων means sitting. With this Well. agrees, and adopts the reading of Turn. θοάζον, and proposes to alter κρεισσόνων into κρεῖσσον ὄν, which he translates sub nullius impe-rium confugiens id quod te debilius est fortius factum te superare potest.
Buttm., however, shows satisfactorily that no idea of haste is implied in the passage of Soph. and that in the passage before us, the idea of sitting is peculiarly suited to the notion of a ruling power. See v. 592. Ag. 176.

etc. See also ἐπιθοάζω and cf. Buttm.

Ἱαχεῖν to utter a cry, S.c.T.850. where Elmsley (on Heracl. 752.) supposing the penult. of ἱαχεῖν to be always long in the Attic poets, suggests ἡχεῖν. So Dind. He also attempts to alter various other passages of the tragic poets where the word occurs with the penultimate short. This Well. disapproves. So Blomf. The penult. though more generally lengthened, was clearly common in the Attic tragedians.

Ἱέναι to go. εἶμι (generally, perhaps always, in Attic, in a future sense) P.835. A.931.1286. C.770. P.V.325.830. S.c.T.654. I will go. εἶσι S.879. ἵμεν S.c.T.1060. κείνος ὁ τάλας ἄγοος εἶσι S.c.T.1057. sc. will go to burial. —to come. χαλεποῦ ἐκ πνεύματος εἶσι χειμῶν S.158.172.—with acc. οὐκ εἶσι δόμον S.c.T.682. will not attack the house. In S.c.T.355. (373.D.) the vulg. is εἶσ' ἀρτίκολλον ἀγγέλου λόγον μαθεῖν, εἶσ' being, as is supposed, for εἶσι, with a present signification, he comes. This is objectionable, not only from the awkwardness of the word ἀρτίκολλον put thus by itself, but because it is very doubtful whether εἶμι is ever used in any other than a future sense. The passages adduced by Wellauer (Lex. Æschyl. s. Ἱέναι) S.c.T.682. S.158.172. have all a future signification. So likewise in the passage quoted by him from Eum. 237. πρόσσειμι δῶμα καὶ βρέτας τὸ σόν, θεά, the meaning is, I will approach. Porson appears, therefore, rightly to have corrected εἰς (εἶς Ven. Ald. Rob.) which is joined with ἀρτίκολλον as governing the inf. μαθεῖν, he is here precisely at a right moment for hearing the news. Cf. the use of εἰς in Œd. Tyr. 78. ἀλλ' εἰς καλὸν σύ τ' εἶπας. The ellipsis of ἐστὶ after ὅδε (not of ἦκει as Blomf. supposes, ὅδε being equivalent to ὦδε) is not uncommon. Blomf. compares Soph. Ant. 626. So Æsch. E.1044. S.217. etc.—imp. ἴθι come, or go, P.649.995. A.1040. ἴτω S.c.T.672.946. S.196. ἴτε. S.c.T.105. E.960.993. S.996. ἴτων E.32. for ἴτωσαν. Heath ῥέουσι μάτην. So Blomf. Herm. conj. λούσειαν μάτην. Klausen fruitlessly attempts to explain the vulgate. Wellauer's opinion is probably correct, that something has been lost after v. 72. by which the words ἰοῦσαν ἄτην are rendered unintelligible.

Many meanings are proposed of this passage: the Schol. refers ἱερῶν to the Furies; another is, wrath on account of temples in which no fires are burnt, h.e. on account of the neglect of sacred rites caused by the expedition against Troy, and for which Paris was to suffer. So Blomf. Dind., however, is undoubtedly correct in understanding ἀπύρων ιερῶν with Bamberger, of the sacrifice of Iphigenia. παραθέλξει will then refer to Agamemnon.

Ἱή an interjection, P.965. A. 1464. S. 106.

Ἱήϊος Ieian, A.144. an epithet of Apollo, of uncertain origin. Some derive it from ἰέναι in allusion to Apollo's killing the serpent with an arrow. So Callimachus says, Ἱή, Ἱή, Παιῆον, ἴει βέλος. Some from ἰᾶσθαι to heal, in reference to Apollo's healing power. It is probably an epithet derived from the exclamation ἰή, ἰή, used in calling on Apollo, which like εὐοῖ and others, owe, as Blomf. observes, their origin to the Egyptian mythology.

Ἰότης pleasure. ἰότητι γάμων P.V.557. (558. D.) in pleasure at the marriage. This dative is, as Passow (Gr. Lex.) observes, much the same in sense as the word ἔκῃτι. To reconcile the Homeric usage of the word with its use in the present passage is by no means easy. Blomf. simply gives “Ἰότης, lætitia.” It can only be conjectured that the original meaning of the word was such as to render deducible both meanings, sc. that of pleasure, as in this passage of Æschylus, and that of by the will of, at the behest of, in which it so often occurs in Homer in the dative ἰότητι, also once in the acc. Il. 15. 14. δι’ ἐμὴν ἰότητα. Malden (Trans. of Phil. Soc. Vol. ii. No. 29.) throws out as a conjecture that Æschylus may have used the word under a misapprehension of its meaning in Homer, and that conceiving it from its usage there to mean simply the same as ἔκῃτι on account of, he may have employed it here in the same way, sc. on account of the marriage. This is ingenious, yet it scarcely seems likely that Æschylus could have been under any mistake on such a point.

Ἰππιος equestrian. δ θ’ ἵππιος ἀναξ S.c.T. 121. an epithet of Neptune. On this epithet Hesychius, quoted and restored by Blomf. observes ἵππειος Ποσειδῶν. φυσικῶς φασὶ διὰ τὸ λέγειν τὸν ποιητὴν—αἱ θ’ ἄλός ἵπποι Ἀνδράσι γίνονται. (Odyss. δ. 708.) ἡ κατὰ τὸν μῦθον, ὅτι ἵππους ἐγέννησε Ποσειδῶν, Ἀρείονα, φασί, Σίσυφον, Πήγασον. Festus thus explains it:—“Hippius, id est, equester, Neptunus dictus est, vel quod Pegasus ex eo et Pegaside natus sit: vel quod equuleus, ut putant, loco ejus suppositus Saturno fuerit, quem pro Neptuno devoraret: vel quod tridentis ictu terra equum excierit; cui ob hoc in Illyrico quaternos equos jaciebant nono quoque anno in mare.” With this last account agrees that given by Ovid, Metam. vi. 75. Virg. Georg. i. 13. Some say that the epithet was given him because he was the first who put horses into harness. Cf. Soph. Œd. Col. 705. He is addressed as Ἰππι’ ἀναξ Ποσειδῶν in Arist. Eq. 548.

Ἰππομέδων prop. name. Ἰππομέδοντος σχῆμα καὶ μέγας τύπος S.c.T. 470. (488. D.) In this verse, in order to avoid the trochee in the first foot, Turn. edited Ἰππωμέδοντος. Blomf. inserts μέγ’ before the word, which Porson had done before him. This Scholefield adopts, but no authority appears for so violent an insertion. The vulg. is retained by Brunck. Herm. Butler. Hermann, El. Doctr. Met. p. 44. reasons thus, “tragici interdum, quum anapæstum possent admittere, productionem prætulērunt, ut gravitati numerorum magis congruentem.” To this Blomfield objects; but it is better to account for the vulg. than to introduce an arbitrary emendation into the text. Brunck, in his note on the passage, thus remarks: "literarum quas liquidas vocant, ea vis est et proprietas, ut quia eorum sonus facile nec ingrate geminatur, brevem vocalem producant. In pluribus vocibus recepta vulgo scriptura literas illas duplicat, quas unicas tantum exhibent veteres codices et primariæ editiones. Exempli gratia, vocem φιλομειδής etiam ubi secunda producitur unico μ semper scriptam reperi." He then adduces the words Ἐριννύς or Ἐρινύς, and alludes to instances similar to the present in Παρθένοπαῖος v. 592. Τελεύταντος Soph. Aj. 210. on which, however, see Hermann's note. The true account of the matter seems given by Priscian, quoted by Dind. Ἰχαρ †. The word appears in S.830. (850. D.) ἡσυδονπία τᾶπιτα· κελεύω βία μεθέσθαι Ἰχαρ, φρενί τ' ἄταν. The whole passage is exceedingly corrupt, and conjecture has availed nothing. Καίειν s. κάειν to burn, A. 292. to cauterise (a wound) aor. 1. ἦτοι κέαντες, ἢ τεμόντες A. 823. These two verbs are often found thus united. See Pierson's note on Mœris s. vv. κλάειν καὶ κάειν, and Blomf. Gloss. in loc.

Καίνειν to kill, C. 873. ὁ καίνων A. 1543. the murderer. aor. 2. ἔκανες S.c.T. 942. So Herm. for vulg. ἔκτανες. In C. 917. (930. D.) the vulg. is κᾶνες γ' ὃν οὐ χρῆν, καὶ τὸ μὴ χρεῶν πάθε. Here Heath, Pors. Schütz, Blomf. insert the augment ἔκανές γ' ὃν οὐ χρῆν. Pauw proposes κανοῦσ' ὃν οὐ χρῆν, which Well. approves. Herm. conj. ἔκανες ὃν— or ἔκανες τὸν οὐ χρῆν. The particle γε certainly may have been inserted by some copyist wishing to complete the metre when the first syllable in ἔκανες was lost: but it nevertheless seems peculiarly appropriate and emphatic here, "You have slain him you ought not, therefore suffer what you ought not." Opt. κᾶνοι S.c.T. 612. pass. καίνεται ib. 329.

Καινίζειν to handle or use a thing for the first time. καίνισον ζυγόν A. 1041. wear the yoke for the first time. μέμνησο δ' ἀμφίβληστρον ᾧ σ' ἐκαίνισαν C. 487. the net with which for the first time they enclosed you, h.e. no one having been so enclosed before. Here Blomf. reads ὡς ἐκαίνισαν unnecessarily. Valck. on Phœn. 1310. conj. ἐκαινέτην.

D.) κατὰ γαίας is the vulg. although several MSS. have κατὰ γαῖαν, which Well. adopts, conceiving that it has the meaning of in terram, and joining it with πομπὸς εἶναι as referring to Darius. But κατὰ γαῖαν πέμπειν would hardly be used to signify to send up from beneath to the earth: it is better to retain the vulg. and join εὐφρονας εἶναι κατὰ γαίας h.e. to show us favour beneath the earth. sc. by sending up from thence the shade of Darius. —Separated from its verb by tmesis: see κατακρατεῖν, κατακαλύπτειν, κατ-όλλυσθαι.

Καταρράπτειν to sew together, Met. to plot. Πενθεῖ καταρράψας μόρον E. 26.

Καταρρῖνᾶν lit. to polish with a file. βραχίον' εὖ κατερρηνημένους S. 728. (747.D.) said of those whose limbs are made extremely supple and nimble by exercise. Well. conj. καταρρινωμένους from ῥινός, which would mean covered with hard skin.

Καταρρίπτειν to throw down. εἴ τε δημόθρους ἀναρχία βουλήν καταρρίψειεν A.858. (884.D.) should form some daring design. These words are understood by Schütz and Butler to mean, ne senatum dejicerent. So Well. But to say nothing of the harshness of the term βουλή thus abruptly applied to those who conducted the state in the absence of Agamemnon, the words τὸν πεσόντα λακτίσαι πλέον, which are an epexegetis of the preceding, do not refer to any council, but to Agamemnon, whose family would be exposed to insult at his fall. The double danger spoken of is, first, that to which Agamemnon was exposed at Troy: secondly, that which awaited his family, in case of his failure, by popular insurrection at home. Blomf. considers the expression καταρρίπτειν βουλήν to be identical in its origin with ἀναρρίπτειν κίνδυνον, sc. as a metaphor taken from throwing dice. This is probably correct. A conjecture of Abresch, however, καταρράψειεν, deserves to be considered. Cf. E.26.

Καταρτύνειν to arrange, order, effect. σὺ μὲν κατηρυκῶς ὅμως ἰκέτης προσῆλθες καθαρὸς ἀβλαβῆς δόμοις E.451. (473.D.) sc. κατηρυκῶς τὸν φόνον, having committed the murder. κατηρυκῶς is here explained by some commentators to mean, adornatus, præparatus, expiatus, probe instructus, etc. senses which, as Wellauer observes, it cannot possibly have. Scholef. referring to Hesych. κατηρυκῶς τελειώσας, translates, expiatione facta. Well. quanquam perfecisti cædem, but hesitates about this verse because the Schol. has κατηρυκῶς τέλειος τὴν ἡλικίαν. τοῦτο δὲ ἀπὸ τῶν ζώων, a meaning which it certainly sometimes has, but which has nothing to do with the present case. The verb καταρτύνειν means in itself merely to effect, or make. What it is which is effected or made, whether the murder or expiation, must be sought from the context. There is clearly an opposition between κατηρυκῶς and ἰκέτης προσῆλθες καθαρὸς ἀβλαβῆς δόμοις. Orestes was καθαρὸς, although κατηρυκῶς. Hence κατηρυκῶς does not refer to the expiation. The only thing to which it can refer is φόνον, to be understood from φόνον in the preceding line, and this accords with the general sense of the passage, which see explained under δυσπήμαντος. [This appears the simplest way of taking the words as they stand in the vulg. See, however, not. ad loc. ed. Linw. where the passage is otherwise emended and explained.]

Κάτοικος a resident in a house. τί δῆτ' ἐγὼ κάτοικος ᾧδ' ἀναστένω; A.1259. (1285.D.) Schütz translates κάτοικος ante aedes, which it certainly cannot mean: it might mean in the house, but this does not suit the sense of the passage, cf. v. 1286. (1313.D.) Blomf. joins κάτοικος ᾧδε, h.e. sojourning here. This is the best explanation, κάτοικος by itself being vague. Dind., however, is most probably right in considering the words corrupt. Wakefield's conj. κάτοκνος is among the best proposed. Cf. P.V.67.

(731.D.) κενῆς ἀρωγῆς is the vulg. and retained by Blomf., who considers it to have reference to κενανδρίαν, v. 716. Schütz rightly prefers the reading κεδνῆς, found in M. and in many other MSS. Well. rightly observes, that it was the preceding word, κενανδρία, which gave rise to the corruption. Schütz understands these words ironically; but in this he appears to be wrong.

Κεκασμένος well-appointed. ἐποίσειν εὖ κεκασμένον δόρυ E. 736. From a root κάζω or χάζω, signifying to clear away, to make an empty space, seems to have been derived the perfect κέκασμαι, in the sense of to have made room for oneself, to have made others give way to oneself. Hence the idea of conquering or excelling. In this sense it takes an accusative, e. g. πᾶσαν γὰρ ὀμηλικὴν ἐκέκαστο κάλλει Il. ν' 431. But, since conquering or excelling involves the idea of distinction, hence it came to signify, without an accusative, to be distinguished, to excel, e. g. κακοῖσι δόλοισι κεκασμένε Il. δ' 339. Lastly, as distinction involves the idea of being well-appointed or furnished, it was used to signify provided with, furnished with, e. g. Pind. Ol. i. 42. Eur. Al. 620. Hence εὖ κεκασμένος well-appointed. See the various significations of this word, and its cognate forms, traced by Matth. Gr. Gr. 239.

The meaning of this whole passage is, If a person has to bear an evil unattended with disgrace (such for instance, as the death which now awaits me), be it so (h. e. let him bear it) : for it is nought but gain amongst the dead (h. e. when he is among the dead, the glory remains, the evil is past) : but in things which are at once evil and also disgraceful, you cannot say that there is aught glorious.—λέγουσα κέρδος πρότερον ὑστέρου μόρου ib. 679. (697. D.) speaking of the previous gain involved in the subsequent death, h. e. urging the glory of the victory which precedes the death which follows after it.

Blomf. constr. λέγουσα κέρδος εἶναι μᾶλλον τὸν πρότερον τοῦ ὑστέρου μόρου. This sense, however, as Well. observes, the words will not bear without a very awkward ellipsis.

(124. D.) making proclamation for me to the effect that the infernal gods would listen to my prayers. Before this verse, Herm. has, with great probability, inserted one which usually appears as v. 163. κῆρυξ μέγιστε τῶν ἄνω τε καὶ κάτω, and which, in this latter place, is unintelligible. Before Ἑρμῇ he adds ἀκουσον, to fill up the sense; ἄρηξον perhaps, or some such word, would be better, as the aorist κηρύξας follows.

Κίσσιος Cissian. Κίσσινον ἔρκος P. 17. Κίσσινον πόλις ib. 119. the city of Cissa, in the district of Susa. Blomfield writes Κίσσιον for Κίσσινον, (though nearly all MSS. and Edd. have the latter,) because Κίσσιοι and the country Κισσία are so written by Herodotus and Strabo. So Dind. who cf. C. 417.

Κιχάνειν [ā] to overtake. κιχάνει δέ νιν Ἑρμῆς C. 613. (622. D.) Porson writes κιγχάνει. Schütz seems correctly to understand this as said sarcastically of Mercury, the god of gain, overtaking with vengeance the guilty party (Scylla), who for the sake of a present had committed the crime. The idea is, "unjust gain finds out the gainer." The Schol., less correctly refers νιν to Nisus.

ley on Eur. Heracl. 693. compares Soph. Ant. 857. ἔψαυσας ἀλγεινοτάτας ἐμοὶ μερίμνας πατρὸς τριπόλισ-τον οἶτον. If this be correct, the accusatives depend upon the preceding words as equivalent in sense to μαρτύρια τάδε ἔχω. See κλύειν. It is perhaps, however, better to make τάδε the intensive word in the sentence, as equivalent to ὧδέ ἐστι.

Κλάριος (Dor. for κλήριος) assign- ing to mankind their portion: an epithet of Jupiter. Διὸς κλαρίου S.
 355. where Schol. πάντα πᾶσι κληροῦντος καὶ κραίνοντος. Some (see Stanley's note) refer it to Apollo, here addressed as the protector of exiles, himself having once been banished from heaven (S. 211.) and consider that Apollo is called Δία κλάριον, as Pluto and Neptune are sometimes addressed as Ζεὺς καμόντων, Ζεὺς πόντιος. This seems unnecessary, and the epithet Clarius, belonging to Apollo (Virg. Æn. iii.

 359), is clearly of a totally distinct origin from κλήριος in this passage:
 to the former probably refers the gloss in Hesychius κλάριον. ἐπίθε-

In C.408. (414.D.) σπλάγχνα δέ μου κελαινοῦται πρὸς ἔπος κλυούση (sc. ἐμοὶ κλυούση) the transition from the gen. to dative is remarkable. φονος P.V. 870. to be called a coward, etc. κλύειν δικαίως E. 408. to have a reputation for justice. κλύειν εὖ A. 455. to have a high reputation. In the passage πέπαλται δ' αὐτέ μοι φίλον κέαρ, τόνδε κλύουσιν οἶκτον C. 404. (411. D.), the accusative is remarkable. See Herm. App. Vig. ii. and vi. Hermann rightly observes that the accusative is used because the whole preceding sentence is equivalent to τρόμος ἔχει με, precisely as in Soph. Ant. 857. ἔψαντας ἀλγεινοτάτας ἔμοι μερίμνας πατρός τριπόλιστον οἶκτον, where the preceding sentence is equivalent to ἔλεξας μερίμναν. Exactly similar to C. 404. in construction is Soph. El. 470. ὕπεστί μοι θράσος ἀδυνόων κλύουσιν ἀρτίως ὀνειράτων, which is equivalent to θράσος ἔχει με. So in P. 877. (914. D.) λέλυται γὰρ ἐμῶν γυίων ῥώμη τήνδ' ἡλικίαν ἐσίδοντ' ἀστῶν, the word ἐσίδοντ' is the acc. and not the dative, the former part of the sentence being equivalent to λύσις ἔχει με. So likewise in S.c.T. 270. (290. D.) μερίμναι ζωπυροῦσι τάρβος τὸν ἀμφιτειχῇ λεών, the accus. depends on ταρβῶ implied by the preceding clause. Cf. Elms. on Heracl. 683. Erfurdt on Soph. Ant. 211. Herm. on Soph. El. 122.

Κλύζειν to dash, as a wave. ὥστε κύματος δίκην κλύζειν (so Aurat. vulg. κλύειν) πρὸς αὐγὰς τοῦδε πῆματος πολὺν μεῖζον A. 1155. (1182. D.) In this passage, Aurat. conj. ἀκτάς, unnecessarily. πρὸς αὐγὰς is the same as πρὸς ἀντολὰς in v. 1153. The poet, under a double metaphor, compares the development of the oracle to the rushing in of a strong wind, and the result of it to a wave dashing under its influence. The wind is said to blow and the wave to dash towards the sunrise, as that is the quarter from which the light breaks in. Schütz considers that there is an allusion here to the west wind, comparing Hom. Il. δ. 422. seqq. This Butler disapproves. It is possible, however, that Cassandra, being a native of Troy, upon which coast the waves were brought strongly by a west wind, might allude in her mind to an appearance which she must have so often witnessed. See Wood's Essay on Homer, p. 27. τοῦδε refers to the sufferings of Cassandra just described by her, far greater than which were now to take place.

Κόμπος a boast, vaunt, or display of words, P.V. 1033. A. 599. S.c.T. 407. καὶ δὴ πέπεμπτ' οὐ κόμπων ἐν χεροῖν

ἔχων S.c.T.455. (473.D.) This passage is suspected by some editors, on account of the elision of αι before οὐ, the admission or exclusion of which from tragic iambics is a point not decided by critics. καὶ πέμπεται δ' Turn. Steph. but this is clearly by way of emendation, and does not suit the sense, which requires καὶ δὴ. Blomf. (so Dind.) reads καὶ δὴ πέμπεται κόμπον ἐν χεροῖν ἔχων, which is a conjecture of Erfurdt on Soph. Aj. p. 514. h. e. cujus jactatio in agendo constat, or, as Reisig explains it, missus est, ostentationem manibus gerens, i. e. non lingua sed factis se jactans. Wellauer, however (in Add.), shows that the supposed opposition fails: for Eteoclus' boasting was not in words, but was a device carried in his hands; hence Megareus cannot be said, by way of opposition, to have his boast in his hands, as the other had it thus likewise. Hence we conclude that the elision in πέπεμπτ' οὐ is to be retained as the best alternative. With respect to this elision, Erfurdt on Soph. Aj. 190. denies that αι ever is so elided. Seidler, on Iph. T. 679. questions the truth of this; Lobeck, on Aj. 190. produces several cases of this elision. Some of these may be plausibly corrected; others, like the present passage in Æschylus, seem to reject certain emendation. In P.V. 837. μέλλουσ' ἔσεσθ' εἰ τῶνδε προσσάινει σέ τι, the reading of many MSS. sc. ἔσεσθαι, τῶν δὲ προσσάινει σε τί, is more generally adopted. But see προσσάινειν. Upon the whole, it seems safer to consider that the tragics most generally avoided the elision of αι in iambics, but that, in some few cases, they allowed themselves to use the old epic license. [It is possible that πέπεμπται οὐ may form one syllable by synizesis.]

Κόναβος a noise, S.c.T. 145.

Κονία the dust, pl. A. 64.

Κονίειν [i] to cover with dust. κονίσας οὐδας P. 159. (163. D.) covering the plain with dust, hastening. Schütz observes that this is here a metaphorical expression, denoting haste, and compares the Homeric κονλοντες πεδ-λοιο. The words ἀντρέψῃ ποδὶ ὀλβον also are derived from the same metaphor. Atossa is expressing her fear lest the wealth of the Persians, by inducing them to engage in enterprises where the people, and perhaps the king himself, might perish, should thus in a rapid manner overthrow the happiness which Darius had raised.

Κόνις dust, S.c.T. 81. 718. A. 481. E. 617. 935. S. 177. 764. P.V. 1086. The last syllable of κόνις, like ὄφις, is long, as appears from these three last passages. See Blomf. Not. on P.V. 1086.

He also reads κάρβανον, to agree with αὐδάν. If the reading εὐα κοννεῖς be adopted, the construction will be Ἰλέομαι μὲν . . . καρβάνα δ' (οὔσα) αὐδάν. εὐα, κοννεῖς. Boissonade conj. εὐ, γὰ, κοννεῖς. On the phrase κρεισσοτέκνων ὀμμάτων, see under ὀμμα. Schütz improperly considers κρεισσοτέκνα ὀμματα to be equivalent to κρεισσόνων τέκνων ὀμματα, h.e. "filiorum nunc patre potentiorum oculi," from which Œdipus ἐπλάγχθη, i.e. withdrew himself. Κροκόβαπτος died with saffron colour, P.651.

Κροκοβαφής saffron-coloured, A.1092. (1121. D.) In this passage, the blood is called κροκοβαφής σταγῶν from the pallid hue which overspreads the face when the blood rushes back to the heart in strong emotion. Such (as Stanley observes) was the common opinion. Blomfield compares Virg. Georg. ii. 484. Frigidus obstiterit circa præcordia sanguis.

Κρόκος saffron. κρόκου βαφάς A.230. (239. D.) cloth died of a saffron colour. This is referred by Schütz to the fillet of saffron-coloured cloth placed according to custom on Iphigenia, previous to her sacrifice. He compares Lucretius in his description of the same event, i. 89. Cui simul infula, virgineos circumdata comptus, ex utraque pari malarum parte profusa est. This answers, he conceives, to the κρόκου βαφὰς ἐς πέδον χέουσα of Æschylus. It is more simple to refer it generally with Pauw to the dress of Iphigenia, of which the fillet formed a part. Cf. χεῖν. With respect to the colour, Butler (ap. Peile) observes, "videtur non tam ad virgineum quam ad regium cultum pertinuisse color croceus. Sic ap. Pind. Pyth. iv. 413. croceam vestem habet jam Argonautarum dux. Idem est etiam Darii ornatus, P. 660." Stanley and Abresch incorrectly interpret κρόκου βαφὰς to mean blood, comparing A. 1092. ἐπὶ δὲ καρδίαν ἔδραμε κροκοβαφῆς σταγῶν. This is clearly wrong; the meaning of the latter passage is quite different, κρόκος not being an epithet there of the blood, but of a certain effect upon the face. Moreover, the blood of Iphigenia had not yet been shed, cf. 239. τὰ δ' ἔνθεν οὐτ' εἶδον, οὐτ' ἐννέπω. For κρόκος applied to dyeing, cf. P. 651. κροκόβαπτον εὐμαριν, and Pind. For κρυπτός ὀρθοῦται λόγος is read in MSS. and edd. κρυπτός ὀρθούσῃ φρενί, or ὀρθώσῃ φρενί. This reading, which is wholly unintelligible, is evidently the result of an error in transcribing, being a repetition of the termination of the preceding line γαθούσῃ φρενί. Cf. A. 1189. 1190. For the restoration of the text we are indebted to Schol. Venet. on Il. σ'. 207. who thus cites the passage, ἐν ἀγγέλῳ γὰρ κρυπτός ὀρθοῦται λόγος. Eustathius borrowing this in his Commentary, writes κρυπτός, not κρυπτός. Hence Porson edited κρυπτός ὀρθοῦται λόγος. Blomf. prefers κρυπτός, and translates Nuntii prudentia rectam facere potest orationem incurvam, h. e. vitiosam, which certainly conveys no very clear idea of the meaning. The general force of the phrase (which is evidently a proverbial one) is clear from the words in Homer upon which it is referred to as an illustration, sc. ἐσθλὸν καὶ τὸ τέτυκται, ὅτ' ἄγγελος αἵσιμα εἰδῇ, denoting the necessity of tact and adroitness in one who carries important messages. Commentators appear to have been misled from not perceiving that ὀρθοῦται does not mean is made straight (hence the preference of κρυπτός as a supposed antithesis) but succeeds, prospers, as in E. 742. etc. The Chorus desires the nurse to deliver the message to Ægisthus in a manner not likely to excite his fears (ὥς ἀδειμάντως κλύῃ): hence they bid her not to tell him what she had been desired by Clytæmnestra, sc. to bring guards with him (as that would raise his suspicions of danger), but to come cheerfully alone (γηθούσῃ φρενί): for that, where the real purpose of a message (e. g. to inveigle a man to destruction) had to be concealed, the message depended much for success on the ease and apparent indifference assumed by the messenger. With respect to reading κνπτός or κρυπτός, it is better to retain the latter, as it is supported by the MSS. and is preferable in respect of sense. The prep. ἐν is used as in E.447. Cf. Soph. These words, notwithstanding Schütz's attempt at explanation, are probably corrupt. Schütz explains, quis vero, quæso, propinquos dote sua dominos emat? Rob. understanding it so likewise, refers to Virg. Georg. 1. Teque sibi generum Tethys emat omnibus undis. But Dind. is undoubtedly correct in adopting Boissonade's conj. ὄνοῖτο. "Respondet virgo quæstioni regis κατ' ἐχθραν; ob odium nempe; nam quis dominos vituperaret qui essent amici? Quum illos fugiamus, sequitur odio nobis esse." The king then, wishing to waive the subject, partly apologises for the invaders in v.333. to which the chorus, indignant at the evasion, retorts in v.334.

A. rightly explains as referring to τῶν πολεμίων. κυκλούμενον, pass. Rob. Cant. In P. 450. ἀμφὶ δὲ κυκλοῦντο πᾶσαν νῆσον, Heath and Brunck read 'κυκλοῦντο, Pors. and Blomf. ἐκυκλοῦντο. Upon the omission of the syllabic augment in tragic iambs, two opinions are well known to exist: one, that of Porson and Elmsley, who deny its legitimacy altogether, except in some few special cases (see Pors. Præf. ad. Hec.); another, which is supported by Herm. and some others, that it might in certain cases be omitted. Elmsley on Bacch. 1132. divides the existing instances of omission into three classes: 1. such as may have the augment restored without injuring the verse; 2. those where, owing to a diphthong or long vowel terminating the preceding verse, the mark of elision may be prefixed; 3. such as do not admit of these two remedies, and which he conceives may either be emended, or if not capable of easy emendation, ought to be ascribed to the errors of copyists. To this view of the case, objections have justly been made. With respect to Elmsley's second class, which he would explain as cases of elision caused by a diphthong in the preceding line, it is observable, that in tragic iambs the termination of one line does not connect itself with the beginning of another, so as to affect it in a metrical point of view. Thus e.g. in Soph. Ant. 900. we have ἐγὼ | ἔλousα, where no elision takes place. Even δὲ is never cut off by Æschylus or Euripides; very rarely by Sophocles. Hence it seems unfair to suppose that the termination of one line affects the first word of the succeeding in some few cases where the augment seems omitted, but not as a general principle. If then the omission of the augment be established as regards the second class, it will hardly be fair to have recourse to emendation to correct those of the first. With respect to the third class, to suppose that they are all incorrect involves a petitio principii: that these passages are all wrong, depends upon the truth of the supposition that the Attics never omitted the augment: but that the Attics never omitted the augment can only be proved from their extant writings: hence this is reasoning in a circle. The following appears to be a correct statement of the case:—

1. When the verb in the imperfect or aorist is preceded by a long syllable in the middle of a verse, the augment may be omitted on the common principle of elision, e.g. Ἰόλη 'καλεῖτο Trach. 381. δώρημ' ἐκείνῳ 'δωκε Aj. 1304. 2. Of passages where the word in which the augment is omitted, does not occur in the middle, but at the beginning of a verse, there are no less than twenty-seven in number; and if the reasoning above adduced against Elmsley's statement be valid, these must be considered as actual omissions of the augment. If we come now to examine into the cause of this, we shall find that these instances all occur in ῥήσεις ἀγγελικαὶ or narrative parts, where we may conceive that the poets adopted the style of the early epic poetry. Hence we may ascribe the omission of the augment to an imitation of the epic style in such passages. The exceptions (four in number) where the omissions appear in passages of a different character, are susceptible of just emendation. 3. It is supposed by some, that this licence extended only to words in the beginning of a verse; hence Æsch. P. 305. οἶδε ναὸς ἐκ μιᾶς πέσον is considered corrupt, and probably is so, whatever be the truth as regards this point. One instance likewise occurs in Bacch. 1134, but here the word, occurring in the beginning of a proposition, can hardly be viewed as an exception. By those who hold this opinion, several instances are explained on the principle of elision, e.g. νικώμενοι 'κύριссон P. 302. πλεῖστοι 'θανον id. 482. Cf. Soph. Aj. 308. Trach. 772. 905. etc. Wellauer, however, on P. 302. observes, that the mark of elision is here placed against the authority of all MSS. His reasoning appears correct, sc. that if the tragic writers in epic passages allowed themselves the omission of the augment at all, no reason can well be assigned why they should not have employed this licence in the middle as well as in the beginning of a verse. Hence we may, on the whole, conclude that the tragics, though in ordinary passages always inserting the augment, did occasionally omit it when imitating the epic narrative style, and this not in the beginning only, but also in the middle of a verse. The meaning of the passage is, feeding upon a female hare big with young, stopped with her offspring in their last race. For ἐρικούμονα, which is the reading of the Schol. (ἐρικούμονα. πολυκύμονα), some MSS. and edd. have ἐρικούματα, an error arisen probably from the similarity of the termination of the following word, φέρματι, which is so read by Guelph. Ald. Rob. Turn., but which has also been corrupted by some into φέρματα. βλαβέντα is referred by Wellauer to λαγῶν understood, to which he considers λαγίναν γένναν as equivalent. For this he quotes the authority of the Schol. who says, πρὸς τὸ σημαίνονμενον τὸ βλαβέντα. But here βλαβέντα is not the acc. masc. sing., but the neut. plural, referring generally to the hare and her young ones, both of which are alluded to in the following line, and this may very likely be the real meaning of the Scholiast.

This is better than Wellauer's explanation, "qua parte diei non suspiravimus, quum illa nobis non acciderint?" i. e. nulla parte diei illa nobis non acciderunt: which makes λαχόντες too vague. Probably some verb is lost in λαχόντες of a similar meaning to στένοντες. So Stanl. οὐ κλαίοντες. [λάσκοντες was doubtfully conj. in ed. 1. coll. A.839. P.V.405.] The participles may perhaps be explained as an anacoluthon, the preceding words being in sense the same as εἰ λέγοιμι ὡς σπανίως παρήκομεν καὶ κακοστρώτως, τί δ' ἡματος μέρος οὐ στένοντες, (i. q. καὶ οὐδὲν ὃ τι οὐκ ἡματος μέρος στένοντες) κ.τ.λ. — with gen. εὖ πρᾶπιδων λαχόντα A.370. having a good share of intellect. — with inf. πάντα τὰ κατ' ἀνθρώπους ἔλαχον διέπειν E.891.

Here by some λάκτισμα δείπνου is understood of the violation of the sanctity of the banquet. So Schütz. Butler and Musgrave understand it of the overturning of the table. Blomf. of the vomiting up of the food eaten. It seems highly questionable whether the first and last of these explanations will stand. The words probably mean simply overturning with a curse the viands set before him, τιθεῖς being of course taken with λάκτισμα, and both together being equivalent to λάκτιζων. See συνδίκως.

Λαμπτηρουχία the keeping up of a night lamp. τὰς ἀμφί σοι κλάουσα λαμπτηρουχίας ἀτημελήτους αἰέν A. 865. (890. D.) Wellauer refers this to the signal fires which were kept ready to announce the return of Agamemnon, but which, owing to the delay of that event, remained unused, and consequently unheeded. This is objectionable, because λαμπτήρες are not the signal fires (which are λαμπάδες, the expression in v. 22. being metaphorical), but are the night lamps which are kept burning in a chamber until the inmates retire to rest. Such lamps (we may suppose) were kept always burning in Clytæmnestra's chamber, as always expecting to hear the news of her husband's coming. Scholef. (who most unaccountably joins ἀμφί σοι with κλάουσα) is right in considering λαμπτηρουχίας to denote the time during which these lamps were kept burning, h.e. the whole night. On this Herm. on Viger. 271. observes, "formula est male ominatum quid proferentis, quod abominari se significat." It has probably a different force in A. 845. (871. D.) πολλὴν ἄνωθεν, τὴν κάτω γὰρ οὐ λέγω χθονός, τρίμοιρον χλαῖναν ἐξηύχει λαβῶν. Here Blomf. places the comma after λέγω, and interprets χθονός χλαῖνα to mean the grave, quoting a variety of authorities (q. v.) in support of this interpretation. He translates, multum superne (non enim eam dico quae substernitur) triplicem terrae chlamyda cepisset, id est, ter sepultus fuisset. To this there are, apparently, two objections: first, that if Agamemnon were spoken of as thrice buried, he must have had four bodies, not three, being still alive: and that hence the comparison with the three-bodied Geryon becomes inapplicable. But Agamemnon is regarded, under the supposition, as dead: sc. if he were dead (which he is not) he must have had three bodies, have been thrice dead, and thrice buried. Secondly, the words τὴν κάτω γὰρ οὐ λέγω seem to have little meaning, notwithstanding Klausen's observation, "de ea potius terra cogitamus, quæ tegit mortuos, quam de ea, quæ sub ejus corpore est." But it may be observed that such antitheses are not very unusual in a writer like Æschylus; and stress seems to be laid upon the upper part, as coming more within the reach of calculation than the immensity below. Cf. S.c.T. 930. πολλὴν is not to be taken with Wellauer in the sense of often, but means ample, large. [It may, however, be referred in the former sense to τρίμοιρον.] This explanation of Blomf. is, upon the whole, the best of the passage as it now stands. Another explanation is, with Stanley, to understand χλαῖνα to signify metaphorically the body. The meaning will then be, he might have said that he had been invested with no less than a triple body above-ground, for I speak not of that below-ground, the force of which latter clause would be, that Clytæmnestra, whilst speaking of the various deaths which her husband is supposed to have undergone, desires rather to call attention to the new bodies with which he had been invested on returning to life, than to those which he had lost by death, which would be of ill omen to mention, and which she therefore avoids, using the formula οὐ λέγω. Butl. (ap. Peile), inclining to this interpretation, says, "in usitata est hæc locutio, χλαῖνα pro corpore, sed videtur pertinere ad disciplinam Pythagoream, unde Plato apud Diog. Laert. iii. 67. ἀθάνατον ἔλεγε τὴν ψυχὴν καὶ πολλὰ μεταμφιεσμένην σώματα, ubi eandem metaphoram habes." This, however, appears too refined and philosophical. A conjecture has been thrown out by Schütz,

sc. that the verse πολλὴν ἄνωθεν τὴν κάτω (or τὸν κάτω, as he reads it, understanding it of Geryon,) γὰρ οὐ λέγω is spurious. He remarks that πολλὴν ἄνωθεν in the first part is an error of the copyist, whose eye fell upon the first part of v. 849. πολλὰς ἄνωθεν ἀρτάνας κ. τ. λ.; and that the rest is a gloss of some grammarian, who may have written Ἀγαμέμνων τὸν κάτω (sc. Geryon) οὐ λέγει. He would, therefore, omit the line altogether.

read with Schütz for the vulg. λευσμόν.

Λεύσσειν to see, S. 180. 341. P. V. 144. 560. P. 670. C. 10. κυάνεον λεύσων P. 81. see κυάνεος. In P. 696. the vulg. ἔλευσας has been rightly altered from M. into ἔλευσες. The same had been conjectured by Steph. and Stanl. In E. 246. (255. D.) λεύσσειτον πάντα μὴ λάθῃ φύγδα βάς, there is some difficulty in explaining the dual λεύσσειτον. Buttmann asserts that anciently the plural form was identical with the dual, and that the plural is meant here. Müller supposes that it refers to the two long lines in which the chorus entered, and observes, that the dual is used, not only of two individuals, but of two sets of persons. Thus, in Hom. Il. ἡ. 158. it refers to two pairs of horses. Cf. Odyss. viii. 48. and Hymn. Apoll. 456. 501. quoted by Dissen. on Pind. Ol. ii. 87. Wellauer supposes that the Fury who speaks this verse addresses the two Furies who had preceded her, viz. the Choragus, and the second Fury, who, in addressing the Choragus in the preceding line, uses the singular ὄρα, ὄρα. Schütz conj. λεῦσσε τοι. Dind. with Herm. λεῦσσε τε.

Λέχος a bed, P. V. 556. A. 339. 1197. pl. P. V. 897.—a bird's nest, pl. A. 50. S. c. T. 274. (292. D.) Here for λεχέων Lachmann conj. λεχαίων h. e. from λεχαῖος, in the nest.

Λέων a lion, A. 139. 699. 801. 1197. 1232. C. 926. E. 184. S. c. T. 53.

Λεωργός a daring man. τόνδε πρὸς πέτραις τὸν λεωργὸν ὀχμάσαι P. V. 5. This word is by some explained with reference to Prometheus having formed a man of clay. So Etym. λεωργός· ὁ τῶν ἀνθρώπων πλάστης. With this the Schol. and Stanl. agree. Photius, referring to Xen. Mem. i. 3. 9. θερμουργότατόν τε καὶ λεωργότατον, observes that the Attics write λεωργός, but the Dorians λεουργός.

Archilochus joins λεωργὰ καθέμιστα, from which, with the passage from Xenophon, it is clear that the general meaning is daring, impious. So Hesych. λαοργός, ἀνόσιος, Σικελοί. Suidas explains it τὸν λαοῖς παρασχόντα τὸ ἐργάζεσθαι διὰ τοῦ πυρός. The precise etymology of the word is uncertain.

Λεώς a people or multitude, the people E. 15. 608. S. 395. 480. S.c.T. 80. 272. ἱππηλάτης καὶ πεδοστιβῆς λεώς P. 125. ναυτικὸν λεών P. 375. ἀσπιδηστρόφος λεώς A. 799. Περσικὸς λεώς P. 775. Ληΐς spoil, booty, property which is stolen, Dor. S.c.T. 313.

Λῆμα mind, disposition. αἶθων λῆμα S.c.T. 430. fiery in spirit. λήματος κάκη S.c.T. 598. cowardice. λήματος ἐν τροπαίᾳ ib. 688. a change of mind. τοξουλκῶ λήματι P. 55. cleverness in archery. λήμασι δισσοῦς A. 121. different in mind. The passage in S. 358. (363. D.) οὐπερ ἱεροδόκα θεῶν λήματα (vulg. λήμματα) ἀπ' ἀνδρὸς ἀγνοῦ is corrupt, and the following line is lost. For οὐπερ, εἴπερ has been suggested by Faehs. syll. lectt. p. 318. Dind. approves Hermann's conj. οὐ πενεῖ, from the Schol. οὐ πτωχεύσεις. So Well. in his Lex. The lost passage renders any satisfactory explanation impossible; but the idea implied apparently is, that the minds of the gods are willing to accept sacrifices at the hands of a righteous person. In any case the reading λήματα appears to afford a more simple meaning than λῆμα. Cf. seq.

Λῆμμα a something taken or received. vulg. in S. 358. but M. Ald. Rob. λήματα. See λῆμα.

Λίλαιος proper name, P. 300. 931.

Λιμήν a harbour. Met. λιμήν κακῶν S. 465. a refuge from ills.—a receptacle. πλούτου λιμήν P. 246. Butler rightly understands this of the regal city, where the chief wealth of the kingdom was stored up. Abresch compares the expressions μέγας πλούτου λιμήν Eur. Orest. 1075. παντὸς οἰωνοῦ λιμήν Soph. Ant. 987. Ἄδου λιμήν ib. 1270.

Λίμνη a lake, P.V. 417. 731. A. 293. Λίμνην Δηλίαν τε χοιράδα E. 9., h. e. Λίμνην Δηλίαν καὶ χοιράδα Δηλίαν, (Cf. not. ad loc. ed. Linw.) alluding to the Delian lake near which Apollo was born. So Schütz. Abresch less correctly understands it to mean the sea. See Schütz's note.—the sea. λίμνη ἔμβαλε τὰν μελανόζυγ' ἄταν S. 524. See Abresch on prec.—In P. 852. (871. D.) λίμνας ἔκτοθεν is correctly explained by Blomf. without the Aegean sea. Heath less properly, procul a mari. The enumeration which follows "Ελλας τ' ἀμφὶ πόρον πλατὺν εὐχόμεναι, μυχία τε Προποντίς, καὶ στόμωμα Πόντου, is a subdivision of these parts here said generally to be λίμνας ἔκτοθεν κατὰ χέρσον. The particle τε after "Ελλας is rightly added from two MSS. by Schütz, Blomf. Herm. Dind.

Λιμοθνής dying with hunger, A. 1247. (1274. D.) there should be a comma after λιμοθνής, which, with the two preceding adjectives, refer to ἀγύρτρια, the construction being ἡνεσχόμενῃ καλουμένη φοιτάς, ὡς ἀγύρτρια πτωχὸς τάλαινα λιμοθνής. See Elberling Obs. in Agam. p. 23.

Μακιστήρ long, P. 684. Here the vulg. is μακεστήρα, but μακιστήρα M.

Μακιστήρ piercing as an arrow. μακιστήρα καρδίας λόγον S. 461. (466.

D.) The precise origin of this word is uncertain. Blomf. denies that it can have come from μάκιστος, which is certainly true; but it seems nevertheless a derivative of μῆκος, formed after the analogy of τευχηστήρ, ἀκιστήρ, καρανηστήρ, etc. Its second signification possibly may be derived from the idea of piercing far or deep. Hesych. has μακιστήρ. βέλος. τάσσεται ἐπὶ τοῦ μεγάλου. In this passage, however, Stanley with some probability corrects μαστικτήρα.

Μάκιστος Mount Macistus, A. 280.

Rob. τὴν μακράν πόλιν is to be joined in constr. not πομπὴν τὴν μακράν. It is, as Well. explains it, a euphemism for Hades or death, sc. that distant city. A gloss in A. B. has ἡγουν εἰς τὸν Ἀδην. Dind. considers the whole verse as an interpolation. μακρὰν ἀποικίαν P. V. 816. a distant colony. Blomf. compares Hor. 1. Ep. x. 23. laudaturque domus longos quæ prospicit agros.

πάντας Ἀργεῖους λέγω καὶ μαρτυρεῖν μοι, μενέλεως ἐπορσύνθη κακά C. 1036.
(1041. D.) This is the reading of M.
Guelph. Ald. μενέλεας' with the correction μοι ὅσ' Rob. μοι λεώς Turn.
Steph. The verse, as thus read, is of course unintelligible, and contains too many feet. Blomfield transposes the verses 1036. 1037. and reads with Pors. μὲν ὥς for μοι μενέλεως, also τάδ' for τὰ δ', from Ald. Rob. Turn.
The meaning then is, and I bid all the Argives to bear me witness in course of time, how these sad evils have been brought about. It must be confessed, that this transposition is not wholly satisfactory, nor is it easy to see whence the letters ελε can have been inserted between μὲν and ὥς in some of the MSS. Dind. disapproves Blomfield's reading, but proposes nothing better. Herm. (adopting the transposition) conj. καὶ μαρτυρεῖν ὥς

this passage see under ὥς. Blomf.
on P.V. 632. observes that μάσσων is Doric for μείζων, which he retracts on P. 432. Matth. Gr. Gr. rightly derives it from μακρός, the ι of the comparative being with the preceding consonants changed into σσ, as in ἐλάσσων for ἐλαχίων, θάσσων for ταχίων, βράσσων for βραχίων, etc.

the words μάταιον αἰτίας are unintelligible. Abresch conj. μάταιος making αἰτίας the accusative plural. ματαίων αἰτίας h. e. temeritatis crimen, Schütz, which Well. approves. We prefer μάταιος αἰτίαν, merely transposing the ν and ς. This gives a clear sense, and avoids the awkwardness of the plural αἰτίας.

πος χαλινῶν δ' ὥς κατασθμαίνων μὲν-ει, | ὅστις βοὴν σάλπιγγος ὀρμαίνει μένων, is the vulg. reading. One MS. only has μάχης δ' ἐρῶν, which Brunck adopts, placing a colon after ποταμίαις. The Glasg. ed. likewise inserts δ', which is rightly omitted by Herm. Well. Blomf. Dind. They also, with Brunck and Pors. rightly omit the particle after χαλινῶν (which is omitted only by one MS. and Rob.) correctly contending that μένει is the dative of μένος, not from the verb μένειν. Well. compares οὐδὲν ἀσθμαίνων μένει E. 621. and A. 243. which latter passage is, however, totally different from the former. Schütz, on account of μένων following, conj. βρέμει, which it is surprising to find Butler approving. See his note on v. 559. For the second μένων Tyrwhitt conj. ὀρμαίνει κλύων, which Blomf. and Dind. adopt. It is, however, by no means certain from the paraphrase of Schol. A. that he read κλύων. Schol. B. has the reading ὀρμαίνων μένει, which he explains σφαδάζων ἐκδέχεται, and such is the reading in several MSS. This has probably arisen from the similarity of the words above. There is no occasion to depart from the majority of MSS. and Edd. the meaning being, he cries beside the banks, desirous of the battle, like a horse snorting violently over his bridle, who struggles whilst awaiting the sound of the trumpet. — with dat. μενεῖ κτέανα ἐπιγόνους S.c.T. 885. will remain to their posterity. τίς δέ μοι τιμὴ μένει; E. 854. what honour remains to me? Cf. Μέσακτος (?) lying between shores, P. 861. (889. D.) Heath interprets this of the islands lying between the shores of Asia and Thrace. μεσάκτους, however, as derived from ἀκτὴ, violates analogy, which would require μεσακτίους. This is read by the Scholiast, and adopted after Heath by Schütz and Brunck. If this is correct, a synizesis takes place of the vowels io. See Αἰγυπτιογενής. The vulg. is μεσάγκτους, without sense. μεσάκτους is read in several MSS. and in Ald. Rob. Turn.

D.) κὰν τοῖσδε κόσμοις καταγελωμένην μετὰ φίλων, ὑπ' ἐχθρῶν οὐ διχορρόπως μάτην, Hermann, whom Well. follows, conjectures μέγα, on the ground that μετὰ could not stand thus at the end of a senarius as referring to the next line. For the same reason he alters ὡς into ὣς in v. 1527. It is, however, doubtful whether this argument is valid in a writer like Æschylus, especially in rapid and less strictly constructed passages. Well. places the comma after ὑπ', which he makes to govern φίλων, and takes ἐχθρῶν οὐ διχορρόπως as an apposition to φίλων, translating, qui vidit me hoc ornatu irrisam inepte ab amicis, qui haud ambigue inimici erant. Blomf. follows the old reading μετά, and rightly joins οὐ διχορρόπως with ἐχθρῶν, comparing S. 960. There appears no occasion for altering the text. Stanley's translation of μετὰ φίλων is correct, una cum amicis. By φίλων we must understand Agamemnon, who was the sharer of the insults heaped upon Cassandra.

Μόλις scarcely. — οὐ μόλις not scarcely, i.e. completely, utterly. ἀπώλ-

εσας γὰρ οὐ μόλις τὸ δεύτερον A. 1052. Cf. Eur. Hel. 341. θέλουσιν οὐ μόλις καλεῖς. The passage in E. 826. (864. D.) θυραῖος ἔστω πόλεμος οὐ μόλις παρῶν is obscure, and the various conjectures which have been proposed are unsatisfactory. Herm. on Vig. 422. approving the explanation of the Schol. οὐ μακράν, translates foris bellum esto, sed satis vicinum, i.e. as Well. explains, "non nimis longinquum, ne eo proficiscentes cives majoribus incommodis premantur, neve procul a patriæ finibus moriantur." This is giving the sense of μόλις οὐ to οὐ μόλις, which cannot mean sufficiently near, but not a little, i.e. entirely near, which is evidently a contradiction to θυραῖος ἔστω. It may be better to take παρῶν not as meaning nearness of locality, but as denoting that which is present to, or exists in, the state, in the same way as the messenger in P. 322, speaking of evils which had happened afar off, says, πολλῶν παρόντων ὀλίγ' ἀπαγγέλλω κακά, i.e. of many which exist. We may then translate, let war be abroad, and let there be as much of it as there may, i.e. provided war be with foreign states, we do not mind how much of it is carrying on, but let us avoid intestine war. The negative οὐ in οὐ μόλις, after the imperative, is used because the two words form only one notion, cf. Soph. Aj. 1131. and see Herm. App. Vig. iv.

Νεάζειν to be young, to act with vio- lence as a young man. On S.98. see under θάλλειν. φιλεῖ τίκτειν ὕβρις παλαιὰ νεάζουσιν ἐν κακοῖς βροτῶν ὕβριν A.742. (764.D.) In this passage the participle νεάζουσιν has its peculiar force, signifying that restless activity common in youth, whence the words νεανιεύεσθαι, νεάζειν, etc., are used to express anything rash or insolent. The meaning is, a first crime begets another crime, exerting itself freshly in the ruin of those subjected to it. ἐν κακοῖς βροτῶν is not the same as ἐν τοῖς κακοῖς βροτοῖς, but refers to the misfortunes of those men who are made to suffer by the crimes spoken of. Schütz rightly understands ὕβρις παλαιὰ as alluding to the rape of Helen, and νεάζουσιν ὕβριν of the unjust and destructive war by which Paris sought afterwards to support his unlawful act. Cf. νεαρός.

Νεᾶνις a young girl, P.V.706. E.917.

Νεαρός young, youthful, A.76.—a youth, A.350. νεαροῖς ib. 1485. In A.745. (767.D.) the reading is corrupt. Various emendations have been proposed, e.g. νεαρά φύει κότον Heath, νεαρά φύει κόρον Butl. νεορραφή σκότον or νεαροφαῖ σκότον Herm. φάους κότον is corrupt, notwithstanding Klausen's fruitless attempt to explain it, coll. v.378. If conjecture is to be admitted, we should prefer φύει σκότον. The poet seems to be comparing the dark and fatal consequences of crime, with the light and cheering condition of the just. Thus he says that δῖκα λάμπει or shines in the poor houses of the just, but speaks of crime as throwing a gloom over the palaces of the wicked, μελαίνας μελάβροισιν. This usage of σκότος and φάος, or of similar words, to express the opposite ideas of misery and happiness, is too common to require illustration. Cf. μελαγχίτων φρήν P.114. μελανόχρως καρδία S.

766. ἐν φάει καρδίας E.496. δώμασιν φάος μέγα P.292. Hence if light be spoken of as the result of justice, it must be the absence of light, or darkness, which is alluded to, as following upon crime. Three progressive stages appear to be intended: 1. the original act of crime, ὕβρις παλαιὰ. Next, a second act engendered by this first, νεάζουσιν ὕβριν (cf. νεάζειν). 3. sooner or later, τότε ἢ τότε, ὅταν τὸ κύριον μόλη, that mental illusion or ἄτη so often spoken of by the Greeks, which urges men blindly forward to the commission of one crime after another, till suddenly it involves them in destruction and darkness. The words δαίμονα τε κ.τ.λ. are a kind of epexegetis to the former. Hermann rightly changes τὸν into τάν, as agreeing with the feminine εἰδομέναν.

In E. 686. Herm. conj. νέμων for vulg. μένων.

Νέμεσις a feeling of indignation or jealousy. τί τάδε νέμεσις στυγεῖ; S.c.T. 217. (235. D.) wherefore does any feeling of indignation censure this? viz. to worship the gods. Heath with great probability corrects τίς τάδε (so Dind.) for τί τάδε. νέα φρονεῖ, the two last words are by some considered as corrupt, on account of the lengthening of the short syllable in νέα before φρονεῖ. Porson on Orest. 64. states his opinion thus: ubi verbum in brevem vocalem desinit, eamque duæ consonantes excipiunt, quæ brevem manere patiantur, vix credo exempla indubiæ fidei inveniri posse, in quibus syllaba ista producatur. Agreeably to this, Erfurdt on Soph. Aj. 1109. corrected by transposition φρονεῖ νέα. This is approved by Hermann and Monk on Hipp. 1284. but to this separation of νέος and νέα Wellauer justly objects. Elmsley on Eur. Heracl. 387. where καὶ μάλ' οὐ σμικρὸν φρονῶν is read, conjectures νέον φρονεῖ, which Herm. on Aj. 1099. and Lobeck on the same passage, rightly deny to be Greek, the plural being always used with φρονεῖν in this sense, from which the expressions μέγα or σμικρὸν φρονεῖν are entirely different. Reisig. conj. νεοφρονεῖ. Well. νεαφρονεῖ. Lobeck appears to be right in supposing Porson's canon not to have been always observed by the tragic writers. Cf. P.V. 612. where see Well.

D.) disturbing me at night with his loud cries. The whole passage. 737—752. (748—763. D.) which is one of much obscurity, stands thus: τὰ μὲν γὰρ ἄλλα τλημόνως ἤντλουν κακά φίλον δ' Ὀρέστην, τῆς ἐμῆς ψυχῆς τριβήν, δν ἐξέθρεψα μητρόθεν δεδεγμένη, καὶ νυκτίπλαγκτον ὀρθίων κελευσμάτων, καὶ πολλὰ καὶ μοχθήρ' ἀνωφέλητ' ἐμοὶ τλάσῃ. * * * * τεθνηκότος δὲ νῦν τάλα-ινα πεύθομαι. Well. understands νυκτίπλαγκτον as if it were τὸ νυκτίπλαγκτον, h. e. nocturna vagatio, which is quite inconsistent with the usage of the language. It is also usual to place a mark of aposiopesis after δεδεγμένη, by which the following lines can only be explained as a very awkward anacoluthon, hardly admissible even upon the supposition of the words of the speaker being rendered irregular through emotion. A mistake seems to have arisen from supposing φίλον δ' Ὀρέστην, κ.τ.λ. to be in opposition to τὰ μὲν γὰρ ἄλλα τλημόνως ἤντλουν κακά. It will be better to suppose the lines beginning φίλον δ' Ὀρέστην to indicate part of the κακά or sufferings referred to in v. 737. and the opposition to be deferred till verse 752. in which she alludes to his death as an inconceivably greater calamity than all her other sufferings, whether on account of the woes of the family, or of the toil which she underwent as the nurse of the infant Orestes. With Ὀρέστην in v. 738. we must supply ἔφερον or some such word from ἤντλουν. v. 740. is to be referred to v. 738. and καὶ taken in the sense of καίπερ. πολλά καὶ μοχθηρὰ likewise are governed by ἤντλουν or ἔφερον. The sentence being then interrupted by a long parenthesis, the opposition is finally introduced in v. 752. Translate, *for all other sufferings I bore with fortitude: so (I bore with) the dear Orestes, my soul's delight, whom I brought up, having received him at his birth, albeit disturbing me at night by his rousing cries, and many other sufferings beside (I bore patiently for him) without advantage (as they have proved) to me after having endured them: * * * * but now, alas! As a practical rule, perhaps it may suffice to consider that νῦν (i.e. οὖν) means therefore, and has ῥ short; νῦν now, with the ῥ long. Νύχιος nocturnal, A. 574. νυχίαν πλάκα P. 914. (952. D.) Here some understand the western region, i. e. Salamis, westward to the Persians. So Butler, from the Gloss, δυτικήν. Schütz more correctly translates it, nocturnam, i. e. funestam, infaustam. (So Schol. ἦτοι νύκτα καὶ θάνατον γεγονυῖαν αὐτοῖς.) He understands νυχίαν πλάκα of the sea, coll. 412. and δυσδαίμονα ἄκταν of the island of Psyttaleia, coll. 439. seqq. and observes, “κείρεσθαι, demeti, ad utrumque pulchre refertur. In maris enim æquore naves et milites classarios, in insula Psyttalea equites peditesque demessuerant Græci.” It is better to understand both πλάκα and ἄκταν of the same, sc. of the island. The more definite notion ἄκτῃ is added to explain the less definite πλάκα, according to the rule proposed by Heyne on Georg. ii. 139. See Lobbeck on Soph. Aj. 145. — τὸν νύχιον C. 716. (727. D.) him that is of the night, h. e. Orestes, whose approach has been secret as that of a thief by night. τὸν νύχιον is usually applied to Mercury, as addressed under both titles of χθόνιος and τὸν νύχιον. But to say nothing of the presence of the article with νύχιον, which seems to indicate some person well known, but obscurely referred to, there does not seem sufficient reason to apply, with Müller, the epithet νύχιος to Ἑρμῆς, as “the god of nocturnal fraud.” Herm. strikes out χθόνιος as a gloss on νύχιος, which he considers as equivalent to the former. Blomf. more correctly understands νύχιος of Orestes, whose coming has been secret, and, as it were, by night. The construction is, ἀκμάζει πειθῶ δολία, (ἀκμάζει) δὲ χθόνιον Ἑρμῆν ξυγκαταβῆναι καὶ ἐφοδεῦσαι τὸν νύχιον τοῖσδε ξιφοδηλήτοισιν ἀγῶσι h. e. it is the hour for Mercury χθόνιος (qu. v.) to come down with us and to guide the dark stranger to this murderous attempt. The construction of ἐφοδεῦσαι involves some difficulty. ἐφοδεῦσαι ἀγῶσι h. e. to superintend, watch over the contest (as it must be translated, if χθόνιον and τὸν νύχιον both refer to Mercury), seems unlikely: neither is ἐφοδεῦσαι τὸν νύχιον τοῖς ἀγῶσι, h. e. to guide the secret stranger to the contest, any better. Bamberger proposes ἐφοδῶσαι (reading καιρὸν for καὶ τὸν, which is improbable); and this seems better.

O as an exclamation, ὦ, ὦ, ὦ, S. 195.

Ὁ, ἡ, τό, the definite article, used in various connexions, e.g.—1. as a demonstrative pronoun, e.g. ὁ δ' εὐθὺς ὡς ἤκουσε P. 353. Hence τῷ wherefore, for which cause, P.V. 237.—also as an enclitic for τις. πέμποιμ' ἂν ἤδη τόνδε, σὺν τύχῃ δέ τῳ S.c.T. 454. i.e. τινί.—3. It is placed with proper names, e.g. αἱ Φόρκιδες P.V. 796. τὰς Ἀθήνας P. 227. with adjective added, e.g. τῆς ὀρθοβούλου Θέμιδος P.V. 18.—4. with nouns, e.g. ἡ ὁμιλία P.V. 40.—with nouns and adjectives, e.g. ἡ ποικιλείμων νύξ P.V. 24. or with a word in regimen, e.g. τὴν Διὸς τυραννίδα P.V. 10.—with ποῖος. τὸ ποῖον εὐρὼν τῆσδε φάρμακον νόσου; P.V. 249. It is frequently placed, together with its adjective, etc. after the substantive, either the article being prefixed to the substantive likewise, e.g. τοῦ τυράννου τοῦ νέου P.V.944. or not prefixed, e. g. Ἄδου τοῦ νεκροδέγμονος P.V.153. In S.c.T.200. (218.D.) for τοὺς τῆς Schütz conj. αὐτούς. But see Wunderl. Obs. p. 159. who cf. Ag. 330. (339.D.) Dind. suspects that the verse preceding this is interpolated. Certainly the arrangement requires that the whole three verses 198-200. (216-218.D.) should be assigned to Eteocles, which would render the construction of v.199. (217.D.) even supposing that a full stop is placed (so Well.) after θεῶν, peculiarly harsh and abrupt.—5. with adverbs used as adjectives, e. g. τῆς τότε ἀρωγῆς A. 73. θεοῖς τοῖς πάρος P.V.403.—6. with a preposition and its case intervening between the article and the substantive, e. g. τὸν ἀμφ' ἐαυτῆς ἄθλον ἐξηγουμένης P.V.704.—7. with the infinitive used as a substantive, e. g. ὅσον τό τ' ἀρχειν καὶ τὸ δουλεύειν δίχα P.V.918. so in regimen, e. g. τοῦ ζῆν ἀπεστέρησε P.V.684. ἐν τῷ προθυμεῖσθαι ib. 381. πρὸς τὸ φανεῖσθαι C.411. in loc. dub. —with infin. and negative depending on a previous verb, e. g. ἴμερος θέλξει τὸ μὴ κτεῖναι ξύνεννον P.V.868. with μὴ οὐ P.V.789.920. E.874.—8. with participles, e. g. τίς ὁ μαρτυρήσων; A. 1487. who is to bear witness?—9. with adj. alone, a subst. partic. or other word being understood, e. g. ἐγὼ δ' ἄτιμος ἢ τάλαινα E.750. wretched woman that I am. τὸν ἐξηβον χρόνῳ S.c.T.11. sc. ὄντα.—with a neuter adjective as a substantive, e. g. τὸ συγγενές P.V.39. i. qu. ἡ ξυγγένεια.—10. with adverbs, e. g. τοὺς πέλας P.V.335. your neighbours.—11. with a preposition and its case, e. g. τινὲ τῶν ἐξ οὐρανοῦ P.V.899. one of the heavenly beings.—12. in the neuter with a genitive, e. g. τὰ τῶν θύραθεν S.c.T.68. the affairs of those without. Cf. ib. 175. 357. P.589.976. A.32. C. 393. S.595.1047. periphrastically τὰ τοῦδε for τόνδε S.c.T.968. (but see νοσφίζειν) 1038.—13. in speaking of two persons, parties, or sets of things, ὁ μὲν the one, one — ὁ δέ the other, another. e. g. μόχθος δ' ὁ μὲν αὐτίχ', ὁ δ' ἥξει C.1016. The construction is often varied in one of the clauses, some other word being substituted, e. g. σὺ μὲν κατεύχει, τοῖς δ' ἀποκτείνειν μέλει A.1223. Cf. P.740. A.1613. E.573. Compare also as other instances of variation, S.c.T.463.493. 498.741. P.800. A.544. C.60. seqq. 546. So without μὲν and δέ. ἡ τοῖσιν ἢ τοῖς πόλεμον αἰρήσει νέον S. 434. either with one or the other. without μὲν expressed in the former clause, S.c.T.303.323.—τὰ μὲν...τὰ δέ on the one hand...on the other hand, E.213.214. followed by ἀτὰρ in the second clause. P.V.340. τὸ μὲν πρὸ χρημάτων κτησίων ὄκνος βαλῶν A.980. (1008.D.) fear casting out a part, etc. Here μὲν refers, as Klausen observes, to τὸ δέ in v. 990. (1019.D.)—the poetical form τοῖ is occasionally used for οἱ, e. g. P.416. (where Blomf. corr. οἱ) 560.576. etc.

Ὁβρίκαλον the young of an animal, A.141.

Ὁβριμος heavy, severe, violent. μῖσος ὀβριμον ἀστοῖς A.1385. ἀνδρῶν ὀβρίμων κομπάσματα S.c.T.776. where Ald. Turn. ὀμβρίμων. So T. in the former passage.

Ὁγκα a name of Minerva, S.c.T.148.469.484. Ὁγκα was the name under which Minerva was worshipped by the Phœnicians, and as such was introduced at Athens by Cadmus. So Pausan. Steph. Schol. A. The Schol. on Pind. Ol. ii. 48. speaks of a village called Ὁγκαι in Bœotia, where Minerva Ὁγκαία was worshipped. See Stanl. not.

Ὁδε, ἥδε, τόδε, κ. τ. λ. this man, woman, etc. passim. — with a substantive and article, e. g. τήνδε τὴν νεάνίδα P.V.706. etc.—with a substantive without an article, e. g. τῷδ' ἀπανθρώπῳ πάγῳ P.V. 20. It is often used by way of apposition to what has gone before, e.g. Ἀρκεύς, Ἀδείης, καὶ Φερεσσεύης τρίτος, Φαρνοῦχος, οἶδε ναὸς ἐκ μιᾶς πέσον P. 305. Cf. ib. 301. So in the singular, referring to one subject only, e.g. τὸ δ' εὐτυχεῖν, τόδ' ἐν βροτοῖς θεός τε καὶ θεοῦ πλεόν C. 58. Cf. S.c.T. 390. 404. It occurs after αὐτῷ in the preceding line, S.c.T. 1029. (1038.D.) but here Pierson's conjecture αὐτῇ has with great probability been adopted by recent editors.—It is also used to denote place, and is then equivalent in force to ὧδε, e.g. κήρυκ' ἀπ' ἀκτῆς τόνδ' ὁρῶ A. 479. I see here a herald from the beach. Cf. P.V. 561. S.c.T. 80. 354. 843. P. 146. C. 720. E. 325. S. 215. 217.

Ὁδιος seen upon the way, as an omen. ὀρνίθων ὀδίων A. 152. ὄδιον κράτος αἴσιον ib. 104. strength derived from lucky omens seen on the way.

Ὁδισμα a road or way. πολύγομφον ὄδισμα ζυγὸν ἀμφιβαλὼν αὐχένι πόντου P. 71. ζυγὸν is here in apposition with ὄδισμα, sc. having thrown it (as) a yoke, etc. Blomf. needlessly conj. ὀδισμοῦ.

Ὁδοῦν to lead, P.V. 496. 815. τὸν φρονεῖν βροτοὺς ὁδῶσαντα A. 170. who guided mortals into the way of wisdom.

Ὁδυνᾶσθαι to suffer pain. ὀδυνᾶσαι γάρ C. 368. (374.D.) This, which is clearly corrupt, is altered by Pors. into ὀδυνᾶ γάρ. οὐ δύνασαι γάρ O. Müller, δύνασαι γάρ Herm. So Dind. h.e. for you may speak such a wish, however unlikely may be its accomplishment. Lachmann em. ὀδύνῃ σῶ.

Ὁδύνη pain, S. 558. E. 806. 837.

Ὁδύρεσθαι to mourn or lament, P.V. 645. (but here, probably, the correct reading is αἰσχύνομαι) S.c.T. 638. It is also commonly read in P.V. 271. P. 574. but here the form δύρεσθαι (so M.) has been rightly adopted by recent editors.

Ὁδυρμα lamentation, C. 501.

Ὁδυρμός id. P.V. 33.

Ὁδυσσεύς Ulysses, A. 815.

Οἰβάρης [ᾱ] proper name, P. 946.

Οἷγειν to open, P.V. 614. οἷγοντι δ' οὔτι νυμφικῶν ἐδωλίων ἄκος C. 69. (71.D.) Here the construction is rightly given by Schütz, οὔτι ἔστιν ἄκος νυμφικῶν ἐδωλίων οἷγοντι sc. αὐτά, there is no way of repairing (the violation of) a virgin's chambers, to one who intrudes therein, h.e. as no man having violated a virgin's chastity can repair the loss, so likewise, blood once shed cannot be recalled.

Οἰδίπους id. gen. Οἰδίπου S.c.T. 185. 345. 636. 659. 691. 738. 789. 815. 961. acc. Οἰδίπουν S.c.T. 757.

Οἷεσθαι to think. οἷομαι C. 747. οἷεται E. 448. ῥόμην P.V. 268. contr. οἷμαι P.V. 970. A. 312. 1502. In P.V. 187. οἷω is rejected by Brunck, Schütz. Pors. Blomf. on account of the metre. Wellauer thinks that it belongs to the following verse, from which something has been lost. The form οἷω does not occur elsewhere in the tragic writers. Dind. considers it to have arisen from ὄμω, by which one of the Scholiast's explains ἔμπαρ.

Οἰζύς wretchedness, A. 734. E. 853. S. 853. in loc. dub. On A. 1440. see under ἐπανθίζειν. Cf. διπλοίζειν.

consequence of its crimes. See under παλίνορτος.

Οἶκος a house, h. e. a dwelling, P. 514. 819. A. 714. 1553. C. 74. E. 230. 395. 430. 996. (1044.D.) But here the reading is probably corrupt. See not. ad loc. ed. Linw.—a house or home, P.V. 387. P. 847. A. 334. 415. 841. 935. C. 572. E. 434. 437.—a house or family, S.c.T. 172. A. 18. 35. 37. 132. 152. 328. 739. 1400. 1505. C. 754. 849. 922. 956. E. 514. 721. 855.

Οἰκουρεῖν to keep house, to preserve by staying at home, A. 783.

Οἰκουρός keeping at home, A. 1198. τοὺς ἤκοντας ἐκ μάχης νέον οἰκουρός A. 1608. (1625.D.) Here Wellauer explains the acc. as governed by οἰκουρός, sc. watching at home for those lately arrived from the war. This interpretation, if correct, obviates the necessity of reading, with Stanley τοῦδ' ἤκοντος. Dind. prefers Stanley's reading.

Οἰκοφύλαξ the guardian of a house, S. 27.

Οἰκτεῖν to pity, P. 194. C. 495.—with gen. οἰκτεῖω σε θεσφάτου μόρου A. 1294. κόπων οἰκτερε μὴ πολωλότας S. 206. pity us for our woes ere we perish.—ῥκτεῖρα P.V. 352. οἰκτεῖρας A. 1214. In A. 1303. (1330.D.) καὶ ταῦτ' ἐκείνων μᾶλλον οἰκτεῖρω πολύ, some commentators refer ταῦτα and ἐκείνων respectively to the two clauses εὐτυχοῦντα μὲν κ.τ.λ. and εἰ δὲ δυστυχεῖ κ.τ.λ. h. e. I pity far more the condition which attaches to adversity, than that which attaches to prosperity. Others, as Butler, refer ταῦτα to the whole sentence ἡ βρότεια πράγματα, and ἐκείνων to what Cassandra had recently stated respecting herself in v. 1299. (1326.D.) I comiserate far more the general condition of humanity, than my own individual fate. This is better. οὗτος and ἐκεῖνος are thus opposed in S.c.T. 246. τοῦτ' ἀντ' ἐκείνων τοῦπος αἰροῦμαι σέθεν. See an explanation of the whole passage under σπόγγος.

Οἶνος wine, A.945. E.698. In support of this last passage, Dind. refers to the Schol. on Eurip. Alc. v. 12.
It seems to refer to a tradition not elsewhere noticed. θοινῶν conj. Well.
in Lex.

Οἶνοῦσθαι to be drunk with wine.
δεδορκὸς ὄμμα μηδ' ἄγαν οἶνωμένον S.404. a drunken look. Probably we should write ῥνωμένον from M. which has ὠνωμένων. So Guelph. Ald. οἶνωμένος occurs Soph. Trach. 268. where Dind. corrects ῥνωμένος. On this point consult Elmsley on Bacch. 686.

Οἶνοψ proper name, S.c.T.486.

Οἶοβουκόλος (from οἶς a sheep) *a

Οἶον only. This is the reading followed by Pors. in A. 130. So the Schol. who explains it μόνον μή.
Others read οἶον from οἶος, which is far better.

 (454. D.) where the vulg. is τὰ δ' αὐ-τὸς ὀργᾷ μαθεῖν, thus explained by Well. the infin. being considered equivalent to the imperative. Pauw, whom Herm. Schütz, and Bothe follow, reads ὄργα from ὀργᾶν, lit. to swell as ripe fruit, hence, to be ripe for anything, to desire ardently. Both these seem forced and improbable.
 Bamberger corrects ὄρμα, translating Sunt hæc ut dixi; cetera jam ipse proficiscere ut cognoscas, decet autem forti animo pervenire.

Ὀργια sacred rites, S.c.T. 162.

Ὀρέγεσθαι mid. v. to stretch oneself forth, to aim a blow, A. 1082.
 (1110. D.) Here Dind. prefers χεῖρ for χεῖρα from Ven. Steph. and adopts Hermann's conj. ὀρέγμα-τα.

Ὀρεγμα a putting forth. χερὸς ὀρέγματα C. 420. ἴσθι δ' ἀνδρὸς φίλου πῶλον εὖνιν ζυγέντ' ἐν ἄρματι πημάτων, ἐν δρόμῳ, προστιθεὶς μέτρον. τίς ἂν σωζόμενον ῥυθμὸν τοῦτ' ἰδεῖν δάπεδον, ἀνομένων βημάτων ὄρεγμα; C. 783. seqq. (794. seqq. D.) The general meaning of this very corrupt passage is clear: Orestes in his career of woe is compared to a horse driven violently over the plain; so many and so numerous are his sorrows. The words ἀνομένων βημάτων ὄρεγμα appear to be merely a periphrasis for βήματα ἀνόμενα, though Schütz suggests a more refined explanation. See further explanations of the passage under ῥυθμός and σώζειν.

Cf. διχῇ. In C. 914. (927. D.) πατρὸς γὰρ αἶσα τόνδε σουρίζει (σουρίζει Pors. for vulg. σ' ὀρίζει) μόρον, Blomf. correctly understands σουρίζει to be a contraction for σοὶ οὐρίζει, not for σοὶ ὀρίζει, as Elms. Well. and Dind. suppose. See οὐρίζειν.—m. v. ὀρίξεσθαι to mark out a limit for oneself, to claim as a boundary. ὀρίζομαι δὲ τήνδε Περραίβων χθόνα S. 253.—to determine upon. ὑπαστρον δέ τοι μῆχαρ ὀρίζομαι γάμον δύσφρονος φυγῇ S. 389.

Ὀρμᾶν to hurry on or rush, to hasten P.336. ἐν σπαργάνοισι παιδὸς ὀρμῆσαι δίκην C.522. (529.D.) Here Well. supposes ὀρμῆσαι (so Pors. for vulg. ὀρμίσαι) to be from ὀρμεῖν to lie at rest, not from ὀρμᾶν to move. This, however, is shown to be wrong by the words τίνος βορᾶς χρῆζοντα in the next line, the restlessness of the child being caused by the want of food. ὀρμᾶσθαι m. v. id. S.c.T.31. P.147. This is the explanation of the Scholiast, but must be admitted to be far from satisfactory. ὀρνίθων A.152. ὀρνισι S.782. ὀρνιθας S.c.T.26. — ἐνοικίου ὀρνιθος E.828. the domestic bird, i.e. the cock. — an omen or presage, e.g. of ill-luck, S.c.T.59.

Ὀροθύνεσθαι pass. to be stirred up, P.V.200.

Ὀρος a boundary, P.V.669.792. E.901. πιθανὸς ἄγαν ὁ θῆλυς ὅρος ἐπινέμεται A.472. (485.D.) where ὁ θῆλυς ὅρος is the opinion laid down by a woman, and refers to the same as γυναικοκήρυκτον κλέος in v.474. It is well explained by Schütz, opinio mulieris de re quadam gesta quam ea summa cum fiducia verissimam esse decernit ac definit. Klausen is wrong in translating it credulus ambitus mentis muliebris. πιθανὸς does not refer to the credulity of a woman's mind, but to the influence which her opinion exercises over others. πόθεν ἔχεις ὅρους θεσπεσίας ὁδοῦ κακορρήμονας; A.1125. (1154.D.) the rules or laws of the science of divination, i.e. every thing by which divination is regulated. Schütz rightly translates it, quis tandem tibi male ominatam divinam viam definiit? h.e. quis tibi male ominatorum carminum modos præcipit?

Ὀροφος a roof, S.638.

Ὀρσολοπεῖσθαι to be agitated, P.10. The word is derived from ὀρσός, an old form of ὀρθός, as in ὀρσοθύρη, ὀρσινεφής, κ.τ.λ. λοπος, according to Passow, is a mere termination. Another form ὀρσοπολεῖται is found in many MSS. and in Ald. Rob. Turn. This (which was corrected by Steph.) is restored by Lange and Pinzger, who derive it from ὀρσός and πολέω or πέλομαι. But see Dorville, Vann. Crit. p.480.

But ὅταν is necessary to represent the circumstance as a conception of a future event in the mind of Xerxes, when they should, not when they did. The opt. is used with ὅταν, because the main sentence, ὅπως κτείνουσι, being thrown into the oratio obliqua, the subordinate ὅταν ἐκσώζωνται (as it would have been, had the construction πέμπει been continued) follows the same construction, irrespective of the usual connexion of ὅταν with the subjunctive. Certainly, an expression of fear for herself is too selfish to be suitable in the mouth of Atossa under such circumstances, and, moreover, the words ἐμαντῆς ἀδείμαντος will hardly bear the meaning of fearing for herself.

Blomf. for τύχης reads τύχας, acc. pl., which, it must be admitted, is probable, δαίμονα τύχης being rather a harsh expression — πατρὸς γὰρ αἴσα τόνδε σοῦρίζει μόρον C. 914. (927. D.) Here σοῦρίζει is put for σοὶ οὐρίζει, h.e. brings inevitably on thee, not for σοὶ ορίζει, as Elmsl. Well. Dind. suppose.

ὦ πάτερ αἰνόπατερ, τί σοι | φάμενος
ἢ τί ῥέξας | τύχοιμ' ἂν ἔκαθεν οὐρίσας
| ἔνθα σ' ἔχουσιν εὐναί, | σκότῳ φάος ἰσόμοιρον; χάριτες δ' ὁμοίως | κέκλην-
ται γῶς εὐκλεῆς | προσθοδόμοις
Ἀτρεΐδαις C. 313. seqq. (315. seqq. D.)
Of this passage many interpretations have been given. The only variations in the reading and punctuation worth mentioning are ἀνέκαθεν for ἂν ἔκαθεν, (Herm. conj. ἀγκαθεν) and the placing the interrogative after εὐναί instead of after ἰσόμοιρον, as is usually done. A comma may also be placed after τύχοιμ' ἂν, taking φάμενος ἢ ῥέξας τύχοιμ' ἂν absolutely, and ἔκαθεν οὐρίσας by itself. The passage appears after all very simple according to the common reading and pointing. Orestes is expressing his wish that any prayer or act of his might be made to reach his father in the shades, and cause his spirit to arouse itself to take vengeance on his murderers. Whether this may be so or not, he cannot tell; but, he adds, be that as it may (ὁμοίως), a due lamentation of the dead is a proper token of respect. To this the chorus replies, that he need not fear lest the spirit of the dead should be inattentive to his cry, for that his lament would certainly have the effect desired. Translate, O father, unhappy father, what having said, or what having done for thy sake, could I succeed in making it reach from afar to the place where thy couch holds thee, a light (h.e. a place where the light is) equivalent to darkness? but still, be this as it may, etc. οὐρίσας is to be taken actively, sc. τὸν λόγον ἢ τὸ ἔργον, as Lachm. explains it, and not intransitively, as some prefer, sc. could I succeed in reaching thee myself? Some, placing the interrogative after εὐναί, join σκότῳ φάος ἰσόμοιρον with οὐρίσας, and understand it metaphorically of the act contemplated, as a pleasure (or light) equal to the sorrow (or darkness) which now encompasses Agamemnon, as being hitherto unavenged. It is simpler to take these words as an epexegetis of εὐναί, by which Æschylus expresses somewhat of the same idea as Milton when describing the regions below, “no light, but rather darkness visible.” Others again, as Well., place the interrogative after εὔναι, and refer σκότῳ φάος ἰσόμοιρον to γόος, as denoting the probable inefficacy of the act performed. Other interpretations, etc., may be seen in the notes of commentators; see especially Blomf. Lachm. Herm. Obs. Critt. p. 89. seqq.

See under ὄμμα. νυκτὸς ὀφθαλμός S.c.T. 372. the brightest ornament of night. — A certain minister of the Persian king, alluded to in P. 941. (980. D.) the reading of M. is οὐ φεῖσε πᾶσα σπαργάνη πλείζετο for which Turn. has ὄφεις τε πᾶσιν σπαργάνοις ὀπλίζετο. Guelf. and Rob. coincide with M. οὐφείσε πᾶσα σπαργάνη ὀπλίζετο Ald. About the two latter words there can be little doubt; the former part of the verse is very uncertain.

Butl. conj. οὐφεις τε παῖς ὦς. Faehse (Syll. Lect. p. 325.) thinks the reading of Turn. may be explained "omnibus, quibus, sc. infantes involvi solent." Pors. (Opusc. p. 211.) conj. οὐφεις ἐμοῖσι σπαργάνοις. This conjecture is adopted by Blomf. It is possible that after all ὄφεις may not be the word concealed under the corrupt reading. This is partly supported by the division of the syllables in M. οὐ φεῖσε. — On the quantity of the final syllable see κόνις.

D.) what beneficial effect could it have? Here ὄρκου πῆγμα must certainly be read with Auratus. The words πῆγμα γενναίως παγέν, as a mere apposition to ὄρκος, would be unmeaning. The sense is how could an oath although sincerely taken, etc. —καὶ παιώνιος is a very probable anonym. conj. in A.498. (512. D.) where κάπαγώνιος is now read. Dind. adopts κάναγώνιος from Spanh. or else would consider the word to come from ἐπαγώνιος, not ἀπαγώνιος.

On the meaning of παλίγκοτος, and other compounds of πάλιν and κότος, see Elberling Obs. in Ag. p.9. seqq. who denies that “κότος proprie est indoles,” as Blomf. (Gloss. ad S.c.T. 804.) asserts and restricts it to the sense of “ira penitus infixā et permanens.” It seems, however, impossible to conceive, if this be so, how this sense can have entirely disappeared in the words ἀλλόκοτος, νεόκοτος, and ὑπερκότως, which clearly signify only strange, novel, excessively: also in παλίγκοτος itself, for the word does not mean qui iram adversus aliquem gerit, as Elberling says, πάλιν not at all signifying adversus aliquem, but being used to signify contrariety of direction, lit. cross-tempered, cross-grained. Neither does it mean, as the passages quoted show, valde iratus, πάλιν sc. exerting an intensive force, as in παλιμμήκης, παλίσκιος, etc. It seems clear then that if κότος be not a mere termination, it must have a meaning something similar to that suggested by Blomf. On ἀλλόκοτος, see Kuhnken's note on Timæus s. v. In βαρύκοτος it is not necessary to force the meaning from κότος anger, the word being, as Elberling observes, little different in signification from βαρύς. The idea of anger is also quite inappropriate in νεόκοτος (S.c.T.785. P.252.), and, lastly, in ὑπερκότως, which word occurs A.455. τὸ ὑπερκότως κλύειν εὖ βαρύ, where ὑπερκότως κλύειν εὖ means to enjoy an exceedingly high reputation. It has the same meaning in Eurip. Herc. Fur.1059. ὦ Ζεῦ, τί παῖδ' ἤχθηρας ὧδ' ὑπερκότως τὸν σόν; In A.796. for καὶ πάγας ὑπερκότους Blomfield properly reads ὑπερκόπους, the idea ὑπερκότους being foreign to the sense, but needlessly makes the same correction (sc. ὑπερκόπως for ὑπερκότως) in A.455.

Παλινόροτος rising again, recurring, A.149.(154.D.) Here Schütz conj. παλινόρσον, which he refers to the return of Agamemnon. In this, however, he is wrong. μέμνει does not refer solely to Agamemnon, nor is the meaning of οἰκονόμος (as Wellauer rightly observes) confined to Clytæmnestra, but it alludes to the wrath which, from the beginning, had attached to the house of Pelops, since its first crime, the πρῶταρχος ἀτη (v.1165.) viz. the murder of Thyestes' children. Hence the wrath of the Furies, μῆνις (cf. v.1159. seqq.), never ceasing (μῖμνει), showing itself from time to time (παλίνορτος) in the commission of treacherous crimes (δολία), and which Calchas fears (if Iphigenia be sacrificed) may be exerted again in punishing Agamemnon for the murder of his child (τεκνόνποινος). τεκνόνποινος refers primarily to the murdered children of Thyestes; but prophetically also hints at the fate of Agamemnon: in the same way Clytæmnestra too is obscurely alluded to in οἰκονόμος δολία μῖμνει is used as it is in v. 1544. μῖμνει δέ, μίμνοντος ἐν χρόνῳ Διός, παθεῖν τὸν ἔρξαντα. μῆνις is used in the same manner to denote the consequence of crime in v. 685. sc. Πανήγυρις an assembly or company, S.c.T. 202. ἐν πανηγύρει A. 819.

Πανήμερος through the day, P.V. 1026. (1024. D.) Cf. Blomf. Gloss. who shews that the word means through the day, rather than daily, as some translate it. So Schol. διὰ πάσης τῆς ἡμέρας.

Πάννυχος throughout the night, P. 374.

Πανόδυρτος. See πάνδυρτος.

Πανοίζυς most wretched, C. 48. Lo-beck Paralip. p. 251. shews that this word should be written πάνοιζυς.

Πανσέληνος fem. the full moon, S.c.T. 371. The fem. is probably used because σελήνη is feminine, and this is included in the compound ἡ πανσέληνος. Or, because ἡ πανσέληνος ὥρα means the time of full moon, the expression may have come to be used, with an ellipsis of ὥρα, for the full moon itself.

Παντόφυρτος collected from all sides. τὰ πολλὰ παντόφυρτ'  ἀνευ δίκας E. 524. (554. D.) Here the verse is defective by two syllables, nor is the sense complete. Pauw conj. παντόφυρτ' ἄγοντ'. So Herm. Schütz, Dind. Wellauer from the Ald. reading παντόφυρτον conj. παντόφυρτον ὄντ'. If this be correct παντόφυρτον will have an active signification, sc. gathering from all sides, and govern the acc. τὰ πολλὰ. It seems very improbable, however, that παντόφυρτος can have this meaning. If no verb is lost, and παντόφυρτα is to be taken with reference to τὰ πολλὰ, it will be necessary to translate καθήσειν with Butler as governing the acc. See καθιέναι.

Πάντρομος very timid. So M. in S.c.T. 276. See πάντροφος.

Πάντροφος nursing with all care, S.c.T. 276. but the reading of M. πάντρομος (above which, however, πάντροφος is written) is adopted by Casaub. Schütz, Blomf. Dind.

Παρακλίνειν [i] to turn aside, sc. from the right way. παρακλίνουσ' ἐπέκρανεν δὲ γάμου πικρὰς τελευτάς A. 724. (745.D.) This is correctly explained by Heath, ab iis quæ primo aspectu promittebat deflectens et in pejus mutata. It is less properly connected by some with the preceding words, in the sense of looking askance with the eyes. In this case the stop must be placed after παρακλίνουσ'. So Blomfield. The former way is adopted by Dind. Well. Klaus.

Παρασκευάζεσθαι mid. v. to prepare oneself, A. 344. to prepare for oneself, P.V. 922. pass. παρεσκευασμένος ready, prepared, E. 1030. S. 422. A. 1396. (see ἀπειλεῖν.)

Παρασκηνοῦν to place upon as a covering. φᾶρος παρεσκήνωσε E. 604. threw around him a cloak. Butler says that the metaphor is taken from the hangings of the theatre, which covered the scene as robes do a man, and that in the preposition παρὰ lies the idea of craft and wickedness. This latter remark is superfluous.

Παρασκοπεῖν to look beside, to overlook or neglect. ἡ κάρτ' ἄρ' ἂν παρεσκόπεις χρησμῶν ἐμῶν A. 1225. (1252. D.) Here the meaning clearly is, surely then you quite failed to comprehend (lit. you overlooked) my oracular sayings, hence the particle ἂν is not only unmeaning, but absolutely incorrect. Moreover, even supposing that the genitive were correct after παρεσκόπεις, which is very doubtful, the verse as it thus stands violates the rule observed (certainly, for the most part) by tragic writers, not to make the third and fourth feet contained by a single word. Hence Porson, who lays down this canon (Suppl. to Præf. to Hec. p. 25.), suggests ἡ κάρτα χρησμῶν ἄρ' ἐμῶν παρεσκόπεις. This is objected to by Well. and Herm. who prefer Heath's conj. ἡ κάρτ' ἄγαν, conceiving Porson's canon to be without sufficient foundation. Dind. prefers Musgrave's conj. ὄρον for ἄρ' ἂν, but arranges the verse thus, ἡ κάρτα χρησμῶν ὄρον ἐμῶν παρεσκόπεις. Canter for ἄρ' ἂν conj. ἄράν, but this is very improbable.

Παραντρά A. 719. (737. D.) This is by some translated, in like manner, referring to the preceding allegory. Others translate it, at the beginning, in the first instance, as opposed to v. 724. So Schütz. Hesych. has παραντρά. παραχρῆμα. Scholefield compares Dem. Mid. 35. παρ' αὐτὰ ράδικήματα. Cf. Lobeck on Phryn. p. 47. The former explanation is the best, there being nothing sufficiently definite to which to refer παρ' αὐτὰ in the latter sense. Cf. παρά.

Παρέχειν to present, P. 20. 206. A. 1575.—to cause, P. 314. 320. A. 550. E. 915. The passage in A. 1493. (1512. D.) οἱ δὲ καὶ προβαίνων πάχνη (so Herm.) κουροβόρῳ παρέξει, is very obscure. Butler proposes to alter δὲ καί, which is without meaning, into δίκην. This being changed into the Doric δίκαν, will, without further alteration, afford a very tolerable sense. This Scholefield adopts, and translates, "quo quum processerit, pœnas solvet, vel faciet ut solvantur pœnæ, ob concretum rorem sanguinis liberorum voratorum," h. e. to which point advancing, he will cause satisfaction to be made for the blood of the murdered children of Thyestes.

Παρηβᾶν (?) to pass the vigour of life, to decline in strength. The word appears in A. 956. seqq. (983. D. seqq.) χρόνος δ' ἐπεὶ πρυμνησίων ξυνεμβόλοις ψαμμίας ἀκάτας παρήβησεν, εὐθ' ὑπ' Ἴλιον ὤρτο ναυβάτας στρατός, which is evidently corrupt. The word ξυνεμβόλοις is unknown. Schneider in his Lex. corr. ξυνεμβολαῖς, which occurs also in P. 388. Casaubon conj. ξὺν ἐμβολαῖς. The form ἀκάτη for ἀκατος does not exist, though Klausen endeavours to defend it. Cf. ἀκάτη. Hence some conj. ἀκάτους or ἀκάτου. But the expression ψαμμίας, as referred to a vessel, is certainly very awkward; and probably ἀκάτας is nothing more than a corruption from ἀκτή. Thus Blomf. suggests ψαμμιαίς ἀκταῖς, which is, perhaps, the best correction proposed, if we may consider it as the dative governed by the preposition ἐν in ξυνεμβολαῖς. For παρήβησε Heath conj. παρῆψε, as from παράπτειν to fasten, a word without authority, though adopted by Schütz. We may observe, however, that παρήβησε would scarcely have been substituted by an error for the simpler word παρῆψε. Moreover, this does not accord with the meaning of the passage. The apprehension felt by the chorus does not arise from the length of time elapsed since the army arrived at Troy, their safe return being now a matter of certainty. Hence the words χρόνος ἐπεὶ ψαμμίας ἀκάτας παρῆψε would become unmeaning. The same objection lies against joining στρατός with παρήβησε in the sense of when it grew old: and likewise against Blomfield's conj. ἐπεὶ πρυμνησίων ξυνεμβολαὶ παρήβησαν. It may be suggested, if παρήβησε be not corrupt, which appears most probably the case, to make θράσος its subject, understood from v. 955. and take it in the metaphorical sense of since my confidence decayed, declined. Cf. a somewhat similar use of ἡβᾶν in A. 570. The Chorus, in the beginning, expresses the loss of confidence which it feels; it then proceeds to say, that this confidence had failed ever since the time when the Grecian army arrived under Troy. Translate, it is long since when, at the throwing out of the cables on the sandy shore, (my confidence) passed away, when the army came under Troy. The words εὐθ' ὑπ' Ἴλιον ὥρτο ναυβάτας στρατὸς may be considered as an epexegetis of the words πρυμνησίων ξυνεμβολαῖς ψαμμίαις ἄκταις.

Πατρωνύμιος named from the fa- ther, P. 142. (146.D.) Ξέρξης βασιλ-εὺς | Δαρειογενής, | τὸ πατρωνύμιον γένος ἀμέτερον. In this passage, if πατρωνύμιος be genuine, it refers to the adjective Δαρειογενής as applied to Xerxes. The Schol. explains it ὁ κατὰ πατέρα συγγενὴς ἡμῖν, τοῦτ' ἐστίν, ὁ ἐκ προγόνων ἰθαγενής. Blom- field, conceiving the form πατρωνύ-μιος to be barbarous, conj. τὸ πατρώ- νυμον ὦν, but afterwards τό τε Περ- σονόμον. Schütz supposes that the word has been introduced from an observation of a grammarian who had written πατρωνυμικὸν opposite Δαρειογενής, and that the true read- ing is therefore Δαρειογενής, γένος ἀμέτερον h. e. Darii filius idemque (ut Persa) nobis cognatus. The objection of Blomf. that Δαρειογενής is not strictly speaking a patronymic, is, perhaps, not of much weight. Butler considers the whole sentence from Δαρειογενῆς to ἀμέτερον spurious. Dind. compares with πατρωνύμιος the adjectives παρωνύμιος and ἐπωνύμιος.

For πειθῶ μολπᾶν in the former clause Blomf. reads πειθῶ μολπᾶν h.e. suadelaam canticorum, and ἀλκὰν σύμφυτον in the next line as an apposition, h.e. robur senectæ proprium. Schiitz in his first edition read πειθῶ μολπᾶν, ἀλκᾷ σύμφυτος αἰέν, but in his second edition retains the vulg. which he translates, "potentiam vero ætas congenita; h.e. quia illud quod narraturus sum ipse vivendo attigi." He also conj. ἀλκὰν σύμφυτον ᾄδων, h.e. "cognatum robur canens, fratres scilicet, Agamemnonem et Menelaum." Well. retains the vulg. and explains it with Voss, ætas vires (ad canendum) subministrat. The Scholiast also understands σύμφυτος αἰὼν to mean old age: ὁ σύμφυτός μοι αἰὼν, ὃ ἐστι, τὸ γῆρας. It is better, however, according to Butler's suggestion, to understand by σύμφυτος αἰὼν the period of time appointed for the fulfilment of the omen, h.e. the time co-existent as it were and grown up with the omen, from its first appearance to the time of its fulfilment. This time is denoted obscurely by χρόνῳ in v. 125. The explanation of the Schol. on v. 105. gives the general sense of the passage. πείθει γὰρ με ἡ παρὰ θεῶν πίστις μέλπειν καὶ λέγειν ὅτι εὖ πράξουσιν οἱ Ἀτρεΐδαι ὅσον ἀπὸ τοῦ σημείου. ἔτι γὰρ refers to the age of the chorus, as explained by the Scholiast (though wrongly referred by him to σύμφυτος αἰὼν), sc. εἰ καὶ γέρων εἰμὶ ὁμῶς μέλψω τὰ γεγονότα· πέποιθα γὰρ ὅτι εἰς πέρας αὐτὰ ἄξουσιν οἱ θεοί. The passage may be rendered for still (h.e. old as I am)

Πέλανος any soft clotted substance. The Schol. on Apoll. Rhod. i. 1077. quoted by Blomf. observes, 'Αττικοὶ πᾶν τὸ πεπηγὸς οὕτως λέγουσι. Thus in Eur. Orest. 214. (ed. Pors.) the hardened foam collected about the mouth is called στόματος ἀφρώδη πέλανον. It is frequently used to denote clotted blood or gore. Compare Eur. Alc. 851. Iph.T. 300. Incert. Rhes. 430. where the expression αἵματηρὸς πέλανος occurs. So Æschyl. P. 802. τόσος γὰρ ἔσται πέλανος αἵματος σφαγῆς. E. 255. ἐρυθρὸν ἐκ μελέων πέλανον. It is applied to a cake of oil or unguent for trimming lamps in A. 90. πελάνῳ μυχόθεν βασιλείῳ. It is also peculiarly used to denote a cake used in sacrifices, formed of fine flour, oil, and honey. So Timæus, πέλανοι. πέμματα ἐκ παιπάλης καὶ ἐλαίου καὶ μέλιτος πεποιημένα πρὸς θυσίαν. Hence θῦσαι πέλανον P. 200. to offer such a cake. So P. 516. Likewise in C. 90. (92.D.) χέουσα τόνδε πέλανον ἐν τύμβῳ πατρός, where Well. is wrong in translating πέλανος a libation. χέουσα means simply letting fall, dropping, and is applied to anything of a slight loose texture, and not only to strictly liquid things. See A. 230. and cf. χεῖν.

Πελασγία (sub. γῆ) the Pelasgian land, P.V. 862.

Πελάσγιος Pelasgian, S. 627. Here τὰν Πελασγίαν is the vulg. contrary to the metre. Pauw omits τάν. Πελασγίαν is probably a trisyllable by synizesis, as Wellauer observes.

Πελειοθρέμμων nourishing doves,
P. 301. From this passage it appears that Salamis was famous for its doves.
The dove being sacred to Venus, Stanley infers that they were bred here in honour of her as tutelar goddess of the island: but Butler shews that Stanley mistook the passage in Hom. Hymn. ix. 4. where it is Salamis in Cyprus which is spoken of as under the protection of Venus.

Πέραν beyond. with gen. A.1173. Χαλκίδος πέραν ἔχων A.183.(190.D.) occupying the coast opposite to Chalcis. From this we see that πέρα is originally a noun, of which the adverbial accus. only is in common use Schütz understands ἔχων intransitively, and πέραν to be used as an adverb. Cf. ἔχειν. We have, however, in S.259. Ἄπιδ γὰρ ἐλθὼν ἐκ πέρας Ναυπακτίας, according to M. Rob. Steph. Eustath. where Turn. reads χώρας γὰρ ἐλθὼν Ἄπιδ ἐκ Ναυπακτίας. So Well. Schütz, Bothe.

(489.D.) in no unrighteous manner mentally transgressing their oath. Here Well. and others suppose some error. Certainly the expression ὅρκον περῶντας is harsh, but may perhaps be defended by the expression in Frag.268. (ed. Dind.) κεῖτ' ἀμπλάκημα τῷ περῶντι τὴν θέμιν. Butl. suggests ὅρκον περῶντας μηδὲν, ἐνδίκους φρεσίν, or ὀρκωμοτοῦντας μηδὲν ἔκδικον φράσαι. Well. suspects that some unusual compound lies hidden under the words ὅρκον περῶντας. Herm. conj. πορόντας Dind. considers περῶντας corrupt. Cf. not. ad loc. ed. Linw.

through reverence for thee. It is, however, open to conjecture that περί, or rather πέρι, is, in these two last passages, an adverbial form equivalent to περισσῶς, and not a preposition governing φόβῳ and τάρβει. It appears so to be used in the expression πέρι κῆρι h.e. very heartily, used frequently by Homer, see Pass. Lex. in voc.—concerning, P.662.—3. with accus. around, P.V.138. S.c.T.108. 742. Here Blomf. reads περίβαλον, which Herm. approves, and which certainly is better than the middle voice. Both in this verse and the corresponding one in the antistrophe, there appears to be some uncertainty. For the hiatus before οἱ Dind. refers to his note on Soph. Περίοργως very vehemently, A. 209. (215. D.) Dind. thinks the words περίοργως ἐπιθυμεῖν should be expunged as a gloss upon the word οργῇ, leaving a lacuna in their place.

Περίπεμπτος sending, or sent about, adverbially in A. 87. περίπεμπτα θυοσκινεῖς h. e. sending round about, or it may, with Schütz, be taken as the acc. after the verb, sacrificia huc illuc missa, h. e. per omnia urbis altaria distributa, peragis.

correction of Turn. is adopted by

Brunck. Glasg. Schütz. The latter conj. νῦν μὲν Περσῶν. This Blomf.

adopts. Elmsley νῦν τῶν Περσῶν or νῦν αὐτῶν Περσῶν. Well. Περσάων. If anything is to be supplied, we may also suggest νῦν δὴ Περσῶν. In P. 697. (711. D.) βίοντον εὐαίωνα Πέρσαις ὡς θεὸς διήγαγε, the meaning is, being as a God to the Persians. See θεός. There should be no comma after Πέρσαις.

D) Περσίδες δ' ἀκροπενθεῖς, ἐκάστα... λείπεται μονόζυξ, ἐκάστα is (as Butler observes) put in apposition with Περσίδες, and the singular λείπεται referred to it. Hence Schütz needlessly wishes to insert the particle δὲ after ἐκάστα. For this constr. see Matth. Gr. Gr. 302. Obs. 319.

Περσονομεῖσθαι to live under the Persian laws, P. 277.

Περσονόμος ruling the Persians. Περσονόμου τιμῆς μεγάλης P. 883. (919. D.) This refers to the Persian nobility slain in the battle, the abstract being put for the concrete. Blomfield incorrectly refers it to the honour paid to the Persians by the nations whom they had conquered, which seems less consistent with the general meaning of the passage, deploring the losses sustained in war.

Πιθανός persuasive, A. 473.

Πικρόγλωσσος bitter-speaking, S.c.T. 769.

Πικρόκαρπος having bitter fruits, S.c.T. 675.

Πικρός bitter, A. 944.—Met. bitter, h. e. severe, cruel, harsh, P.V. 178. 741. S.c.T. 712. 844. 863. 923. 925. P. 465. A. 191. 725. S. 471.—severe, stern, indignant, S.c.T. 341. C. 78.—hostile, cruel, C. 232. E. 147. 796. In S. 853. (875. D.) the reading is corrupt. Possibly the true reading may be βόα καὶ πικρότερον, οἰζύος χέων νόμον sc. pouring forth a strain of woe. βόα καὶ having been transposed, ἱϋζε may have been added to make the verse resemble v. 851. βόα will thus be a monosyllable. See ἐπιβοᾶν. χέων and ἔχων seem a repetition of the same word, and νόμον seems to be concealed under ὄνομα.

Πικρῶς bitterly, severely, P.V. 135. 946. πικρῶς ἤκουσαν S. 962. they have heard with indignation.

Πιμπλάναι s. πιπλάναι to fill. πλήσας A. 1371. to fulfil, as an office. C. 356. (360. D.) Here Heath corr. πιπλάντων for πιμπλάντων. In this passage it is extremely harsh, and inconsistent with usage, to take πιπλάντων as εἰς τῶν πιπλάντων, neither will it answer to govern it by βασιλεύς, for Agamemnon was ἀναξ ἀνδρῶν, not a king of kings. It may be better to join it with τυράννων, placing a comma only after this latter word, and taking βασιλεὺς γὰρ ἦσθ' ὄφρ' ἔζη as a parenthesis. Cf. πεισίβροτος. pass. πίμπλαται P. 131.

Πινύσκειν to teach, P. 816.

Πιπράσκειν to sell. pass. ἐπράθην. C. 902. (915. D.) The meaning is correctly explained by Schütz, "primum nempe quasi vendiderat mater filium, ex ædibus eum paternis ejiciendo: iterum vero, patre occiso, bona ejus invadendo quorum hæres esse debebat."—πραθέντα A. 1011. In C. 130. (132. D.) Casaubon reads πεπραμένοι for πεπραγμένοι h. e. as Blomfield renders it, "bought and sold, h. e. traditi."

ground. ὕπνῳ πεσοῦσαι E. 68. fallen asleep. Here Wellauer, referring to Dorv. Char. p. 347. 624., supposes an ellipsis of εἰσί. Cf. annot. ad loc. ed. Linw. πεσοῦσαι may be also explained as in the nom. abs. by an anacoluthon, to which the words ὅμως δὲ φεῦγε v. 74. are referred: there should then be no full stop after Ὀλυμπίων.

In P. 2. τάδε Περσῶν ... πιστὰ καλεῖται, τάδε πιστὰ is equivalent to οἶδε πιστοί. Bl. cf. Eur. Andr. 168. Troad. 99. Cycl. 63. id. 203. The neuter is likewise so used in v. 667. (681. D.) ὧ πιστὰ πιστῶν, where πιστῶν is unnecessarily referred by Schütz to Xerxes or Darius, O fidi fidorum dominorum consiliarii. Butler more properly translates, O maxime fideles omnium, O spectatissimæ fidei. For instances of the neuter thus used, see Blomf. Gloss. P. 2.—with dat. Ζηνὶ πιστόν ἀγγελον P. V. 971.—sure, trustworthy, A. 263. 343. 888. 1186. S. 53. 456.—relying on, trusting to. with dat. P. V. 919. Πιτνεῖν to fall, A. 1514. E. 490. with εἰς C. 1052. with ἐν A. 1099. C. 36.—κακῶν δ' ὥσπερ θάλασσα κῦμ' ἄγει, τὸ μὲν πιτνόν, ἄλλο δ' αἰεῖρει τρέχαλον S. c. T. 740. (759. D.) There is an anacoluthon here, owing to the proximity of the verbs ἄγει and αἰεῖρει.

The regular construction would be θάλασσα κῦμ' ἄγει, καὶ τοῦ μὲν πιτνόντος, ἄλλο ἀείρει. τὸ μὲν πιτνὸν thus becomes a kind of accus. abs.—With respect to the forms πίτνω πιτνῶ, see Elmsley on Eur. Heracl. 77. and Hermann's review of the same in Class. Journ. xxxviii. 284. Elmsley considers πίτνω to be the true form, which is related to πίπτω (more properly to πέτω, as Hermann observes) as μίμνω is to μένω. He therefore considers πίτνω as a present, and ἔπιτνον as its imperfect, as in Soph. Œd. C. 1754. So πιτνόντων in Eur. Supp. 691. he regards as a present participle. Hermann endeavours to shew, that in both cases they are aorists, and considers πιτνέω πιτνῶ as the present form, of which ἔπιτνον is the aorist. Dindorf always writes πίτνω. Cf. not. ad Eum. 476. ed. Linw.

Πίτυλος any constant noise, as of the beating of the hands, S.c.T. 838. the quivering of the limbs, P. 937.

Πιφαύσκειν to display, P. 652. A. 22.—to announce, C. 277. (See δύσφρων, and on the expression πιφαύσκων εἶπε, see Lobeck on Soph. Aj. v. 757.)—to order, E. 590.

Πίων [i] rich, A. 794.

Πλαγκτός wandering, restless, P. 268. (see δίπλαξ and θαλασσόπληκτος)—deceived, A. 578.

Πλάζειν to cause to wander. pass. πλάζεσθαι to wander or lose one's way. Hence Met. κρεισσοτέκνων δ' ἀπ' ὀμμάτων ἐπλάγγθη S.c.T. 766. (784. D.) he lost (i.e. deprived himself of) his eyes, dearer than his children. So Casaub. Steph. and Butler, who well explains the passage, "Vult enim Chorus Œdipum insana mente duo mala perpetrasse, alterum quod se oculis privavit, qui vita vel liberis cariores sunt, alterum quod filiis diras imprecatus est." For the constr. πλάζεσθαι ἀπό τινος to lose anything, Blomfield compares Eur. Troad. 635. ψυχὴν ἀλᾶται τῆς πάροιθ' εὐπραξίας. Pind. Ol. i. 94. εὐφροσύνας ἀλᾶται. In the present passage one MS.

omits ἀπ'. So Brunck. Schütz. ἀπὸ is retained in M. Ald. Turn.

Πλάθεσθαι to approach, aor. 1. πλασθείην P.V. 899. So vulg. But πλαθείην M. Barocc.

Πλανᾶν to cause to wander, P.V. 573.—mid. v. πλανᾶσθαι to wander, P.V. 275. perf. πεπλάνημαι P.V. 564.—to wander in mind, P.V. 471.

Πλάνη wandering, P.V. 577. 588. 625. 740. 786. 790. 822. Cf. not. ad Soph. Œd. T. 67. ed. Linw.

Πλάσσειν to feign. pass. πεπλασμένος P.V. 1032.

Πλάστιγξ a scourge, C. 287.

Πλαστός that may be approached. οὐ πλαστοῖσι E. 53. Dind. wishes to restore the form πλατοῖσι with Elmsl. on Med. 149. Cf. πρόσπλαστος. Some, less appropriately, consider οὐ πλαστοῖσι here to mean unfeigned.

Πλάτη an oar, S. 127.—by synecdoche, a boat, A. 679. Dind. with Heath writes πλατᾶν unnecessarily, the acc. being governed by κελσάντων.

Πλατύρρους wide-flowing, P.V. 854.

Πλατύς broad, P. 854. (875. D.) Wood, in his description of the Troad, rightly observes, that Homer and Herodotus speak of the Hellespont as a river, in which sense the epithet of broad is perfectly applicable. Cf. Il. ἦ. 86. ἐπὶ πλατεῖ Ἑλλησπόντῳ. The meaning brackish, which πλατυτέροισι in Herod. ii. 109. bears, has nothing to do with the present passage.

πλέον, Pears. and Pauw conj. ἄχος, which Schütz, Pors. Blomf. Dind. follow. Butler and Well. retain the vulg. The former observes, that the Chorus is not wishing Darius to foretell any remaining misfortunes, but to point out a remedy for the present. He also observes, that ἄκος and πέρας are not tautological:

ἄκος being the remedy, πέρας the end brought about by that remedy. He refers πλέον to the remedies already devised by Atossa v. 514. seqq. Well. is probably right in thinking that πλέον here is put indefinitely without being referred to anything expressed, if he knows of any further remedy for our ills, sc. than we see at present. So in A. 1272. (1299. D.)
οὐκ ἔστ' ἄλυξις, οὐ, ξένοι, χρόνῳ πλέω, there is no escaping any the more by delaying, where πλέω is corrupt.
Pauw reads πλέον. Schütz, Blomf.
χρόνου πλέων, h.e. "non magis est auxilii ac salutis quam temporis ad elabendum copia." Dind. prefers χρόνῳ πλέων with Pearson. On the phrase οὐδὲν πλεῖόν ἐστι and the like, which are nearly similar to the present cases, see Valck. Diatrib. p. 150.

come frequently, to resort. Here the vulg. πολεύμεναι is probably an error of the copyists for πολούμεναι, which appears in one MS. Dindorf suspects, with much probability, that the mistake arose from the Homeric πωλεύμην.

Πολέμαρχος a leader in war, S.c.T. 810. C. 1068.

Πολέμιος hostile, P. 239. S.c.T. 492. A. 594.—belonging to an enemy, S.c.T. 198. 398. 541. 570. πολέμιον φόβον S.c.T. 252. (270.C.) dread of the enemy. Here, however, πολεμίωv should be restored from Schol. B.—πολέμιοι the enemy. πολεμίωv ἐσθήματα S.c.T. 259.

Πολεμιστρία (?) a female warrior. ἔκοψε κομμόν Ἀρειον, εἶτε Κισσίας | νόμοισι πολεμιστρίας C. 417. seqq. (423. D. seqq.) This is the vulg. reading here, from Turn. Steph., and ἔκοψε is usually referred to the stroke dealt by Clytæmnestra in murdering Agamemnon. An objection to this is, that we hear nothing from antiquity, as Blomf. observes, concerning female Cissian warriors. Moreover the word κομμός refers more appropriately to the smiting of the breast in grief than to a blow given in an assault. It is better to adopt the reading of Ald. and M. ἔκοψα, and refer it to Electra. If this be so, we can no longer translate Ἀρειον warlike, but must have recourse to the Scholiast's interpretation Ἀρειον. Περσικόν. This interpretation is confirmed by the subsequent mention of the Cissians, who are alluded to by Herodotus along with the Arians, being both Persian races, and (at least the Cissians) noted for their lamentations. Cf. Pers. 120. But if Ἀρειον and Κισσίας refer in this sense to ἔκοψα κομμόν, πολεμιστρίας is wholly unintelligible: and here we conceive no one can refuse to admit Ahrens' conj. ἡλεμιστρίας, who quotes from Hesych. Ἠλεμιστρίας. θρηνητρίας, the word being derived from ἡλεμος a lament. This correction is confirmed by the metre, which is restored by it, whereas it is violated by the vulg. It would seem as if H had been written incorrectly Π, and the O inserted to make up the word. For εἶτε, which is hardly admissible, Bothe and Herm. prefer ἔν τε, which is very probable. Blomf. Tyrwh. εἶτα. As regards the time of ἔκοψα, we must refer it to the period of Agamemnon's death, her grief on which occasion Electra now describes. The reading and meaning will therefore stand thus, ἔκοψα κομμόν Ἀρειον, ἔν τε Κισσίας | νόμοις ἡλεμιστρίας h.e. I smote myself with the Arian (or Persian) stroke, and after the manner of a Cissian mourner. Pors. præf. ad Hec. wishes to transpose the former verse, thus, ἔκοψ' Ἀρειον κομμόν, or κομμόν δ' ἔκοψ' Ἀρειον, to avoid the anapaest in the third place; but this, in a lyrical passage, is unnecessary. Πολύσινος very mischievous. μυχοῦ ἄφερκτος, πολυσίνου κυνὸς δίκην C. 440. (447.D.) Blomf. with Pors. and Dind. read πολυσινοῦς from πολυσινής. Well. and Klaus. (who refers to Lobeck on Phryn. p. 184.) retain the form in ος. the meaning is, driven from the interior of the house like a mischievous cur. Klaus. considers that μυχοῦ and πολυσίνου are to be joined, as referring to the bathing vessel in which Agamemnon was murdered, and which was placed in the interior of the house, from which, in order to conceal her purpose, Clytæmnestra on that occasion drove away all her domestics. This seems very forced and unnatural, as also does Schütz's interpretation of μυχοῦ to mean cella penuaria. See Butler's note, who remarks, "Queritur scil. Electra se non a cella penuaria, sed a penetralibus domesticis, laribus, sacrificiis, omnique adeo paternæ domus societate et solatio, tamquam canem, seu noxium et contemptum animal, exclusam esse."

Πορευτός travelling, A. 277.

Πορθεῖν to lay waste, to destroy or overthrow, S.c.T. 565. — pass. ib. 176. A. 269. 576. C. 680. S. 438.

Πορθήτωρ a destroyer or ravager, A. 881. (where Valck. on Phoen. 1548. conj. πορθήτορος, unnecessarily) C. 968.

Πορθμεύειν to convey, C. 674.

Πόρθμευμα a passage. πόρθμευμ' ἀχέων A. 1539. an epithet of the river Acheron.

Πορθμός a strait of the sea, signifying the Hellespont, P. 69. 708. 785. — Σαρωνικοῦ πορθμοῦ A. 298. the sinus Saronicus or gulf of Egina.

Πόριμος passing through, overcoming obstacles. πόλεμος ἄπορα πόριμος P.V. 906. (905. D.) i.e. as Butler translates it, per omnia ibit vel difficillima ut mihi omnino cedendum sit. Others translate it, and probably more correctly, supplying, causing, qu. d. πορίζων. The accusative is governed by the adj. πόριμος, as τλήμονες εὐνάν S.c.T. 346. (but in loc. dub.) πολλά ξυνίστορα αὐτόφωνα κακά A. 1061. τὸ πᾶν μῆχαρ οὐριος Ζεὺς S. 589. Cf. οἰκουρος A. 1608. (but see Lex.) πρόπομπος C. 21. Also Brunck and Erfurdt on Soph. Ant. 783. Matth. Gr. T. 499. πράξασαν ὥς ἔπραξε A. 1261. far- ing as it did fare. with comp. βέλτε- τερα τῶνδε πρᾶσσειν S. c. T. 319. fare better than this. πολλὰ δυστυχῇ τε πρᾶσσει ib. 321. undergoes many sufferings. τί δὴ πράξασιν αὐτοῖς ἐπιστεν- ἀζετε; P. 713. how having fared? ἄτιμα οὐκ ἐπράξατην A. 1418. they did not come off without punishment. ἰούσα πράξω, τλήσομαι τὸ κατθανεῖν A. 1263. (1289. D.) Here πράξω is generally explained as equivalent to πείσομαι, h. e. I will suffer. This is incorrect. It is put (if the reading be correct) generally, as in v. 1261. to which this refers, sc. πράξασαν ὥς ἔπραξε, and the meaning is, I will go and meet my fortune, i. e. be it what it may. It seems, however, most probable that πράξω is corrupt. κάγῳ conj. Heath. — ἅπαντ' ἐπράχθη πλὴν θεοῖσι κοιρανεῖν P. V. 49. Schütz joins ἐπράχθη with θεοῖσι, h. e. omnia sunt Diis acquisita præterquam imperare. This is very harsh. It is better to join θεοῖσι with κοιρανεῖν, which governs a dative, as ἀρχειν in v. 942. δαρὸν γὰρ οὐκ ἀρξει θεοῖς. The meaning is correctly given by Grotius, cuncta assequaris præter imperium in Deos, h. e. everything has been attained by you except to govern the gods. In C. 1040. the vulg. εὔτε πράξας is altered by Glasg. into εὐγε πράξας. Tyrwhitt conj. εὐ γ' ἔπραξας, which Well. and Dind. adopt.

Πραῦνεν [ῥ] to soothe, P. 186. 833.

See ἀρχή.—with acc. ὡς ἐπήλυδας πρέπει S. 192.—with acc. and infin. θραυστομεῖν οὐ πρέπει τοὺς ἡσσονας S. 200. Cf. id. 909. In A. 1368. (1395. D). εἰ δ' ἦν κρεπόντων ὥστ' ἐπισπένδειν νεκρῷ, τὰδ' ἂν δικαίως ἦν, the gen. κρεπόντων is supposed by some to be equivalent to ἐν τῶν κρεπόντων, h. e. πρέπον. In this well-known construction, however, the article is indispensable. (On the passage C. 355. see πιμπλάναι.) For κρεπόντων Voss. and Stanl. conj. κρέποντως. This is probably correct, ὥστε being used before the infin. after ἦν, as in Soph. Phil. 656. Cf. Matth. Gr. Gr. 531. obs. 2.

In the former passage from M. Rob. etc. Blomf. and Dind. prefer πρὶν γ'. In the latter Dind. adopts πλήν with Elmsl. from M. and four other MSS. reading οὐ δῆτα, πλήν ἔὰν ἐγὼ 'κ δεσμῶν λυθῶ, which is less probable than Elmsley's conj. πλήν ἔγωγ' ὅταν δεσμῶν λυθῶ. Blomfield reads οὐ δῆτα, πρὶν γ' ἔγωγ' ἂν ἐκ δεσμῶν λυθῶ.

Πρό with gen. before, in front of, S.c.T. 148. A. 356. 804. S. 470. 614. 855. — denoting superiority, C. 779. — in behalf of. τὸ μὲν πρὸ χρημάτων κτησίων ὅκνος βαλῶν A. 980. (1008. D.) h. e. to save the rest of the property. Here ὅκνος βαλῶν is the nom. absol. Cf. E. 799. — before, denoting time, A. 135. 1239. S. 785. πρὸ καιροῦ A. 956. too soon, before the right place. πρὸ τοῦ φανέντος A. 471. before direct evidence. πρὸ τοῦ aforetime. A. 1177. τὸν πρὸ τοῦ χρόνον E. 440. — before, h. e. more than, beyond, S.c.T. 910. 987. — γῆν πρὸ γῆς P.V. 685. (682. D.) from land to land. literally, to land in front of land, denoting the transition to another region lying beyond, and therefore in front of the land already passed. Matth. (Gr. Gr. 575.) however considers the phrase equivalent to εἰς γῆν ἐκ γῆς πόρρω.

Προβαίνειν to proceed, P.V. 274. A. 1492. See παρέχειν.

Προβάλλειν to cast out, read according to some by tmesis in A. 980. but see πρό.

Προμηθεῖσθαι v.l. in P.V.381. Cf. προθυμεῖσθαι.

Προμηθεύς adj. providing for, fore-counselling. Dor. προμαθεύς εὐκοινόμητις ἀρχά S.681.

Προμηθεύς proper name, P.V.66. 85. 144. 243. 278. 285. 307. 319. 377. 391. 398. 503. 543. 615. 617. 953. In v. 85. ψευδωνύμως σε δαίμονες Προμηθεά καλοῦσιν· αὐτὸν γάρ σε δεῖ Προμηθείως ὅτῳ τρόπῳ τῇσδ' ἐκκυλισθήσει τέχνης, the words ὅτῳ τρόπῳ κ.τ.λ. are governed by Προμηθείως, which is here equivalent to a participle, sc. τοῦ προμηθησομένου h.e. you have need of one who may contrive by what means, etc. For similar allusions see Elmsley on Eur. Bacch. 508. Cf. also under μῆτις.

Πρόμνος † a prince, S. 882. but here Stanl. πρόμοι, correctly.

Πρόμος a chief, A.193.398. E.377. Cf. prec.

Προναία dwelling before the temple. an epithet of Minerva, E.21. This is the vulg. reading: but Lennep on Phalaris, p.143. in a most learned dissertation, to which the reader is particularly referred, shews that the word should be written πρόνοια, an epithet sc. of Minerva the goddess of providence.

Πρόναος before the temple, S.488.

Πρόνοια foresight, A.669.—device, forethought. πυρδαῇ τινα πρόνοιαν C. 598. (607 D.) said of the resolution of Althæa by which she destroyed the life of her son.

Προσάμβασις a step, S.c.T. 448.
So Canter. Here the vulg. is πρὸς ἀμβάσεις, incorrectly.

Προσάπτειν to join to. κεκόλληται
γένος προσάψαι A. 1547. (1566. D.)
This is probably corrupt. Schütz conj. γένους προσάψει h.e. agglutinatur enim communi generis vel sanguinis vinculo. Blomf. conj. πρὸς ἄτα
h.e. the race is joined to woe. So Dind. Klausen suggests that γένος is the accus. governed by προσάψαι, and γονὴ ἀραῖος the nom. to κεκόλ-ληται, s. c. adhæret ita, ut etiam so-bolem sum adjungat cædibus. But this is very forced and improbable.

Προσικνεῖσθαι to penetrate, A. 766. — to attain. τόξῳ οὐτις πημάτων προσίξεται C. 1029. by conjecture no one will reach the misfortunes I allude to. — to approach as a suppliant, C. 1031.

Προσίκτωρ a suppliant, E. 419. On the passage E. 118. (119. D.) Müller (Dissert. on Eumen.) rightly observes, "as προστρόπαιος denotes both him who προστρέπεται, and him to whom a person προστρέπεται, the words formed from ἵκω have the same twofold signification. Not only the suppliants are ἰκέται, ἱκτορες, ἀφίκτορες, but Jupiter also is ἱκτωρ, or ἰκτήρ, ἀφίκτωρ. Æsch. Supp. 1. 474." Hence he explains E. 118. my enemies have found προσίκτορας, i. e. gods who protect them as προσίκτορας. See under ἐμός, and also under φίλος.

Προσμηχανᾶν to fasten by an instrument. pass. S. c. T. 523. 625.

Πρόσμορον†. In S. c. T. 558. (576. D.) the vulg. is καὶ τὸν σὸν αὐθις πρόσμορον ἀδελφεὸν | ἐξυπτιάζων ὄνομα ... καλεῖ, where πρόσμορον (which MSS. and Edd. give with no important variation) is evidently corrupt. The word ἀδελφεὸς likewise is a form unknown to the tragic senarius, and may very likely (if the supposition about to be stated be correct) have been introduced from a marginal gloss ἀδελφός (ἀδελφὸν Rob.) explaining ὁμόςμορον. Two MSS. (A. B.) appear to give πρόσμορον as a various reading, whence Brunck conjectures ὁμόςμορον to be the word lost. This seems to be indicated by the gloss τὸν ἐκ τοῦ αὐτοῦ σπόρον, ἐκ τῆς αὐτῆς σποράς γεννηθέντα. Possibly ὁμόςμορος may have been preceded by some word now lost, which began with πρ from προς, the termination of which being dropped, together with the beginning of ὁμόςμορον, the corrupt πρόσμορον, or πρόσμορον may have arisen, and ἀδελφεὸς been adopted from the margin to complete the verse. Dindorf approves Dobree's conj., καὶ τὸν σὸν αὐτ' ἀδελφὸν ἐς πατρὸς μόρον ἐξυπτιάζων ὄνομα, h. e. alta voce inclamans nomen ejus de patris morte; but this seems hardly satisfactory.

Προσνέμειν. (?) τοὺς μὲν καθαρὰς χεῖρας προσνέμοντας E. 303. (313. D.) This is shewn by the metre to be corrupt. Turn. has a various reading ἔχοντας for προσνέμοντας. Herm. conj. τὸν μὲν καθαρὰς χεῖρας προνέμοντ', h. e. the man who puts not forth his hand to impurity. Herm. afterwards conj. τοὺς μὲν καθαρῶς καθαρὰς χεῖρας προνέμοντας, which is perhaps better.

Πρόσπαιος new, A. 338.

Προσπασσαλεύειν to fasten with nails, P. V. 20.

Προσπιέζειν to oppress in addition, C. 299. Dind. with Abresch writes πρὸς πιέζει, divisim.

Προσπιτνεῖν to fall down before, to worship. βασίλεια δ' ἐμή, προσπιτνῶ P. 148. In this verse, on account of the spondee preceding the catalectic syllable of the paræmiac, where an anapaest usually occurs, Heath conj. τὴν προσπιτνῶ. So Brunck, Schütz. προσπιτνῶμεν Pors. προπίτνειν δ' ἡμᾶς Blomf. who otherwise would strike out the word altogether. Dind. thinks the passage interpolated. προσπίπτωμεν Well. Butler retains the vulgate, referring for instances of a spondee in this situation to P. 32. S. 7, on which latter passage he cites also other instances. qu. v. Cf. Gaisford. ad Heph. p. 313. ed. Lips. The penult. of προπιτνῶ is long, as in προπιτνῶ Soph. El. 1372. ed. Herm.—τοξικῆς ἀπὸ θώμιγος ἰοὶ προπιτνόντες (προσπίπτοντες vulg. προσπίτνοντες Cant. 2. Rob.) ὥλλυσαν P. 453. arrows, striking upon them, destroyed them. Herm. on Eur. Herc. fur. 1371. defends the aorist, but in Class. Journ. xxxviii. p. 286. retracts this opinion, and prefers the present, conjecturing προπιτνοῦντες. On the forms πίτνω or πιτνῶ see πιτνεῖν.

Προσσαίνειν to fawn upon or flatter, A. 1650. — to please. μέλλουσ' ἔσεσθ', εἰ τῶνδε προσσαίνει σέ τι P.V. 837. (835. D.) This is the reading of Turn. Many MSS. with Ald. have ἔσεσθαι τῶνδε, others τῶν δέ. Blomf. follows the latter. The elision of αι is very suspicious. Well. reads τῶν δὲ προσσαίνει σέ τι; interrogatively, which is perhaps the best. Dind. considers the verse spurious. Cf. κόμπος.

(370.D.) the constr. is unintelligible. Dind. (who for τέθαιψαι rightly adopts Ahrens' conj. τεθάφθαι) observes that a verb is lost before θανατηφόρον governing the preceding infinitives. So the Schol. correctly, δαμῆναι· λειπεί τὸ ὄφελον· πρὸ τοῦ ἀποθανεῖν τὸν πατέρα.

Προτίειν to prefer, to honour pre-eminently. τοκέων σέβας εὖ προτίων E. 516. τὸ δοκεῖν εἶναι προτίουσι A. 763. (788.D.) This is incorrectly explained by some to be for τὸ δοκεῖν προτίουσι τοῦ εἶναι. But in that case (cf. Herm. on Vig. p. 703.) the article must have been used. τὸ δοκεῖν εἶναι is esse videri, h. e. species sinceritatis.

Προῦπτος manifest, S.c.T. 830.

Προυσελεῖν to treat with ignominy, P.V. 436. The origin of this word is doubtful. The vulg. προσελούμενον was altered by Pors. into προυσελούμενον from a remark in the Etym. M. προυσελεῖν (vulg. προυσελλεῖν) λέγουσι τὸ ὑβρίζειν. This has been adopted by Blomfield and Dindorf, the latter of whom has restored προυσελουῖμεν in Ar. Ran. 730. from Cod. Rav. Dawes (Misc. Cr. 163.) conceiving that this word originally had the digamma, writes προς Wελούμενον, which he absurdly supposes to come from ἔλος a marsh, i. e. the mud of a marsh, and thus connects it with προπηλακίζειν in the sense of to bespatter with mud. Buttmann suggests another explanation, sc. to derive it from σφάλλω, to trip up the heels; and accordingly he assigns to προσφελεῖν the sense of kicking or trampling with the feet. Passow proposes as a derivation σιλλός, a contumelious poem. See the discussions upon this word in Buttm. Lexilog. and Pass. Lex. Gr.

Προφήτης a prophet or interpreter, S.c.T. 593. A. 1070. E. 19. On A. 397. (409.D.) Musgrave well observes, "vates hi sunt vates Trojani: dein sequitur vaticinium, quod Helena adveniente, ediderunt, usque ad v. 414." (419.D.)

Πρόχειρος ready to hand, P.V. 54.

Προχόη the mouth of a river, pl. S. 1005.

Πρύμνα the poop of a ship. Met. πρύμνα πόλεως S.c.T. 2. 742. the helm of the state. In S. 340. (344.D.) πρύμνα πόλεως alludes to the sacred hill on which the Danaïdæ were sitting, and which, being the residence of the tutelar gods, contained, as it were, the safety of the state. Schütz (qu. v.) likewise so explains it, but refers the expression πρύμνα to the situation of the hill in the extreme part of the city.

Πρύμνηθεν from the poop, S.c.T. 191. See πρῶρα.

Πρυμνήσια the cables of a ship, A. 956.

Πρυμνόθεν from the very bottom, S.c.T. 71. 1048. But here Blomfield

Πρύτανις a chief or ruler, P.V. 169. S. 366. On this word Dissen, Comm. in Pind. Nem. xi. 3. observes, "erant prytanes antiquiores, quales olim in civitatibus Ionum, Æolum, Dorien- sium multis summam rerum tenebant, insigni et fere regia dignitate, unde Charon Lampsacenus Spartanos reges πρύτανεις dixerat, similiterque Jupiter aud it πρύτανις θεῶν P.V. 169. Creabantur ex optimatibus, erantque vel duo vel unus in civitate, quemadmodum etiam in Tenedo, exigua insula, unus tantum fuit duodecim menses regens. Plane differunt Atheniensium prytanes."

Πρῶν any projection, generally a promontory or peak, A. 298. In P. 129. (130. D.) τὸν ἀμφίζευκτον ἑξα- μείψας ἀμφοτέρως ἄλιον πρῶνα κοινὸν αἶας. Schütz understands the Thracian Chersonesus, which runs out from Europe towards Asia, and may therefore be said to be common to both continents. With this, however, the epithet ἀμφίζευκτος can hardly be reconciled. Neither can the singular πρῶνα refer, as some suppose, to a promontory on each side of the strait. The Schol. understands πρῶνα ἄλιον by a very harsh metaphor to mean the Hellespont itself. Blomfield is probably correct in supposing πρῶνα ἄλιον to be a metaphorical expression for the bridge of boats, projected from one continent to the other, and fastened at each end. The metaphor πρῶνα is qualified by ἄλιον, according to the observation of Blomf. on A. 82. qu. v. Bl. cf. v. 69. λινοδέσμῳ σχεδία πορθ- μὸν ἀμείψας Ἀθαμαντίδος Ἑλλάς. In P. 858. (879.D.) νᾶσοι θ' αἱ κατὰ πρῶν' ἄλιον περικλυστοί, the Schol. likewise understands πρῶν ἄλιος of the Hellespont. This is clearly wrong. Schütz understands it of a promontory on the Asiatic coast,

Πρῶρα the prow of a ship, S. 697. Certain images of the gods were kept in this part of the vessel, hence the allusion in S.c.T. 191. ἐς πρῶραν φυγὼν πρύμνηθεν. — Met. πάροιθεν πρῶρας καρδίας C. 385. in front of my heart, an expression taken from a gale of wind blowing in front of a vessel.

Πτωσίμος fallen, A. 648. — sinking, dropping, falling, A. 1093. (1122. D.) Here for καὶ δορία, καὶ διρία, καὶ δωρία, which are manifest corruptions, Dind. has ingeniously restored καιρία, which suits both the sense and metre. The passage will then stand, ἄτε καιρία πτώσιμος ξυνανύτει (so Pors. Blomf. for ξυναντεῖ) βίου δυντὸς ἀνγαῖς h.e. the pallid drop rushes to my heart, which sinking at the fatal moment, stops in its course along with the rays of departing life. It is an allusion to the sudden arresting of the circulation by violent emotion. It is better to make ἄτε refer to καρδίαν than to σταγόν, as is usually done. There will then be no necessity to translate with Klausen πτώσιμος by affusa, in the same sense as περιπιτνεῖ in S.c.T. 816. κακὸν με καρδίαν τι περιπιτνεῖ κρίος, a meaning which the simple πτώσιμος will scarcely admit.

Πυργηρεῖσθαι to be besieged, S.c.T. 22. 166.

Πύργινος belonging to towers, and by synecd. belonging to a city, civil. ἡδὲ νομίσματα πύργινα πάντ' ἐπεύθυνον P. 844. (859. D.) (ἐπεύθυνεν Dind. with Bothe, rightly). For ἐπεύθυνον Pauw and Blomf. read εὐθυνον, to correspond with the vulg. εὐθ' ὁ γεραῖος in the strophe: but here γηραιὸς is restored by Brunck, Pors. Schütz, Herm. Pass. Dind. from A. So Ald. Rob. Turn. In this passage Well. incorrectly explains νομίσματα πύργινα to mean the laws which regulate the capture of towers or cities. There is nothing about capture in πύργινα. Schütz explains it, civilia instituta quibus urbes, muris et turribus munitæ, reguntur. This is possibly correct, unless πύργινα be corrupt, as Dind. supposes. πύργοι often by synecdoche denotes a city, cf. S.c.T. 408. 531. etc. The other interpretation entirely destroys the meaning of the passage. The Chorus contrasts the evil policy of Xerxes with the blessings enjoyed under Darius, in whose time the highest military glory (v. 843.) was united with the tranquil administration of the state at home (v. 844-5.), and attended by no such disastrous consequences as now (v. 846-7.). He then describes the conquests made by Darius, without, like Xerxes, leaving his home (v. 848. seqq.); and finally (v. 871.) contrasts with this the confusion which had now happened in consequence of the latter so doing. The passage means, the laws of the state continued to regulate everything (sc. in time of war, as before in peace). The plural after the neuter νόμιμα is explained by Herm. to be put as if νόμοι had preceded, but probably Bothe's conj. ἐπεύθυνεν mentioned above ought to be admitted.

Ῥάβδος a rod. τηρὸν ἱεροῦ ῥάβδον (so vulg.) S. 245. (248. D.) If this be correct, ῥάβδος seems to be used for ῥαβδοῦχος, ῥάβδος being a badge of office. But Schütz properly corrects ἱερόραβδον.

Ῥαδινός soft, P.V. 399.

Ῥαίνειν to bruise or afflict, pass. ῥαισθῇ P.V. 188..

Ῥαίνειν to sprinkle or wet, perf. pass. ἔρρανται P. 563. (571. D.) This word has been rightly introduced here by Hermann from v. 573. (580. D.) where it injures both the sense and the metre.

Ῥαιστήρ a hammer, P.V. 56.

Ῥάκος a rent, P.V. 1025.

Ῥαντήριος sprinkling. ἀνδρὸς σφαγεῖον καὶ πέδον Ῥαντήριον A. 1063. (1092. D.) This is usually translated a blood-besprinkled floor; but it is clear from the form Ῥαντήριος, that it must have an active signification. See under καθάρσιος. Hence Pears. conj. πέδον for πέδον, but this, as Blomfield remarks, does not suit with the copulative καί. This observation appears correct; though Dindorf approves Pearson's emendation. Dobree conj. ἀνδροσφαγεῖον for ἀνδρὸς σφαγεῖον, after which manner Dind. remarks πεδορραντήριον may also be conjectured. This is not at all improbable, when we consider the fondness of Æschylus for strange compounds, many of which, as Well. observes, have possibly disappeared from his writings. Ῥυθμός a regular step, order, succession, etc. C. 786. (797. D.) Here it is quite impossible that σωζόμενον ῥυθμόν can mean preserving moderation, h.e. becoming moderate, as some have attempted to render it. ῥυθμός and μέτρον have a distinct signification in this passage; ῥυθμός probably refers to the constant and regular series of woes in which Orestes was placed, coming one after another as the steps of a horse scouring the plain. Σῖγα in silence, A. 438. C. 94. In S.c.T. 232. (250.D.) Elmsley (on Med. 1120.) rightly places the interrog. after πτόλιν, the expression being, as Dind. observes, a shortened form for οὐ σῖγ' ἀνέξει μηδὲ ἐρεῖς μηδέν; coll. v. 234.—σῖγα A. 1317. silence!

Blomf. rightly observes on this passage, "Cum Attici dicerent ἀπαγε ἐς φθόρον et similia, Æschylus παρὰ προσδοκίαν dixit ἀνασχήσει σιγῶσ' ἐς φθόρον." Dind. observes that the expression is equivalent to οὐκ ἐς φθόρον εἰ καὶ σιγῶσ' ἀνασχήσει τάδε; coll. Soph. O.T. 1146.

τρέψειεν· εἰ δὲ δυστυχῇ, βολαῖς ὑγρῶσ-σων σπόγγος ὤλεσεν γραφήν· καὶ ταῦτ' ἐκείνων μᾶλλον οἰκτεῖρω πολὺ A. 1301.
(1329.D.). Heath absurdly explains this passage as alluding to a game of dice, and places the comma after βολαῖς, but confesses that he cannot understand what is meant by γραφή.
Butler translates, "Eheu res hominum: quas prosperas quidem vel umbra everterit, sin adversæ fuerint, madens spongia iis adhibita scriptu-ram delet, h. e. cum ex rebus prosperis in adversas quis inciderit, omnis prioris felicitatis tanquam spongia adhibita, memoria deletur. Atque hæc multum præ illis doleo. Multo magis deploro statum rerum humanarum, quam cædem mihi imminentem." Schütz, "Prosperitatem enim, si fuerit, vel umbra quælibet everterit; sin adversæ fuerint, madida quæ in-jecta fuerit, spongia scripturam delet,
h. e. adversitatis adeo facile oblivisci solent homines, ut ejus memoria tanquam spongia deleta prorsus evanescat. Atque hæc equidem multo magis quam illa misereor. Misera-bilior igitur Cassandræ videtur in hominibus cita malorum oblivio, quam bonæ fortunæ fragilitas." Blomfield appears more correctly to explain γραφή to mean a painting, which painters used to obliterate with a sponge. He translates, in adversis vero rebus, sicut spongia tabulæ lineas penitus delere solet, ita omnis

spes meliorum prorsus aboletur. Atque hunc rerum adversarum statum magis deploro quam instabilem prosperitatis conditionem.—The meaning is, according to Schütz's explanation, "such are human affairs, that when prosperous a mere shadow might overthrow them, yet, if misfortunes come, their impression is as easily effaced as a painting by a sponge, and this, sc. that men should so soon forget the lessons of adversity, I pity far more than the former case." It is simpler, however, to consider ἐκείνων, with Butler, as referring to the fate of Cassandra, who deplores the misery of human affairs more than her own individual misfortunes. See under οἰκτεῖρω. Perhaps also Butler may be correct in referring the two clauses of the former sentence (1) to the instability of human happiness, (2) to the entire destruction of that happiness by adversity, both of which Cassandra considers a greater subject for lamentation than her own particular case. For δυστυχῇ, h. e. ἐστὶ, Pors. reads δυστυχεῖ. Abresch suggests δυστυχῇ as equally good with δυστυχῇ, to which the chief objection is the less usual construction of εἰ with the subj. See εἰ. Dind. prefers Blomfield's conj. δυστυχοῖ.

Ita vulgatiores Lexica: nam apud Stephanum, quod mirum, neque in Indice nec alibi reperio. Est autem verbum Homero usitatissimum. Inter alios locus hic notabilis: ἴσχεσθ' Ἀργεῖοι, μὴ βάλλετε, κούροι Ἀχαιῶν στεῦνται γάρ τι ἔπος ἐρέειν κορυθαίολος Ἑκτωρ. Sunt Agamemnonis de Hectore Paridis ad Græcos mandata ferente verba. Longa opus est periphrasi, ut vis verbi στεῦνται exprimatur. Id enim vult, Hectorem præ se ferre speciem locuturi. Sed inest præterea huic verbo παραστήματος (ita vocant Græci quandam præfidentis animi orisque pro re nata præsentiam et audaciam: ex eodem quo στεύομαι illud fonte) et confidentiæ significatio: ut si uno verbo utendum sit, non aliud Latinum melius respondeat huic loco quam minatur: (quomodo Horatius, Sat. ii. 3. Atqui vultus erat pulchra et præclara minantis, alibique: unde et Gallicum mine pro vultu et exteriore specie). Hector minatur (id est, ipsa præfidentis oris specie promittit) se aliquid locuturum. In aliis locis Homericis ubi idem verbum occurrit, non eadem difficultas, quod manifestior in illis jactantiæ et confidentiæ indicatio: ut cum de eodem Hectore ait, στεῦνται γὰρ νηῶν ἀποκόψειν ἄκρα κόρυμβά κ.τ.λ. et Il. β'. στεῦτο γὰρ εὐχόμενος νικήσεμεν κ.τ.λ. et Il. φ'. στεῦτο δ' ὃ γ' ἀμφοτέρων ἀποκόψεμεν οὐατα χαλκῷ. insolentiore gloriatione verbum usurpatur. Hinc Angli finxerunt suum stout, quo hominem audacem et præfidentem indicant."

Σπράτευμα an army, S.c.T. 203. 565. 1010. P. 116. 327. 415. 461. 777. 784. — In P. 744. i. qu. στρατεία, an expedition. Cf. Herod. iii. 49. συνελάβοντο τοῦ στρατεύματος τοῦ ἐπὶ Σάμον. — In P. 706. (720. D.) the vulg. reading διπλοῦν μέτωπον ἣν δυοῖν στρατηλάτων, is corrupt, although Blomf. asserts that it refers to Xerxes, "qui quum et πεζὸς et ναύτης ἐστρατηλάτει, speciem præ se ferebat δυοῖν στρατηλάτοι." But μέτωπον cannot refer to the appearance of the man, but to the front presented by the army. The position of the accent also indicates that the vulg. is spurious. στρατευμάτοις is read by some MSS. So Brunck, Schütz, Well. Dind στρατεύματων Rob. v. l. ap. Steph.

Στρόμβος a whirlwind, P.V. 1086.

Στρουθός a bird, A. 143. In this passage στρουθῶν is absurdly referred by Pauw to the young of the hare, and by Heath with equal absurdity to the apparition of the sparrows mentioned by Homer in Il. β'. 300. seqq. Schütz refers them to the eagles mentioned above. So the Scholiast. Eustathius (quoted by Schütz) on the passage in the Iliad, observes that στρουθός is there put specifically for a sparrow, but that the term itself is a generic one. ἰστέον ὅτι ἡ μὲν τοιαύτη στρουθός εἰδικῶς οὕτω λέγεται. ἔστι δὲ ἄλλως γενικὴ ἡ λέξις. Porson rejects the word altogether, as an interpolation from the passage in the Iliad. So Blomf. Dind.

stood, or they may have an abstract reference to what has gone before, sc. τὸ ἀλῶναι and τὸ κρατῆσαι. In P. 463. τοιάνδε σοι πρὸς τῇ πάροικε συμφορὰν πάρα στένειν, for συμφορὰν several MSS. have συμφορᾶ, which, as regards the construction, is equally good. See Lobeck on Soph. Aj. 277. and cf. P. 430. quoted under τύχη.
Σύμφρων unanimous, A. 110. C. 791.

Σύμφυτος born with, growing up with, attached to anything. In A. 107. σύμφυτος αἰὼν is the period of time affixed by God to the fulfilment of the omen. The Scholiast wrongly explains it to mean old age. See the explanation of the whole passage under πειθῶ. In ib. 145. (152. D.) νεικέων τέκοντα σύμφυτον is generally said to be put by enallage for νεικέων τέκοντα συμφύτων h. e. a worker of family quarrels, but this is incorrect: τέκοντα σύμφυτον denotes that agent of discord which had ever attached to the family since the slaughter of the children of Thyestes, to which circumstance the words θυσίαν ἑτέραν allude. This first θυσία was the πρῶταρχος ἄτη or original cause of quarrels in the family, and Calchas fears lest another similar one may become such too. The words παλίνορτος and οἰκονόμος refer primarily to the same idea as τέκτων σύμφυτος. See under παλίνορτος and οἰκονόμος.

Συνδίκως in defence of a cause, or justly. λάκτισμα δείπνου ξυνδίκως τιθεῖς ἀρᾷ A. 1583. (1601. D.) The construction of this passage is obscure. For the meaning of λάκτισμα δείπνου see λάκτισμα. It appears clear that τιθεῖς ἀρᾷ cannot mean involving in a curse, h. e. cursing, even supposing the words λάκτισμα δείπνου to mean violation of the ban- quet. Neither, supposing, as is more probably the case, that λάκτισμα δείπνου τιθεῖς means simply overturning the table, can ἀρᾷ be taken without great awkwardness for μετ' ἀρᾷς h. e. with a curse. Peile suggests that the dative may be governed by the preposition in συνδίκως h. e. doing it in aid or support of his curse, suiting the action to the word. This seems likely to be correct, unless the reading is corrupt.

(797.D.) is commonly read τίς ἂν σωζόμενον ῥυθμόν τοῦτ' ἰδεῖν δάπεδον ἀνομένων βήματων ὄρεγμα; where σωζόμενον is by some supposed to be the mid. v. governing ῥυθμόν, h. e. keeping moderation. But this, as observed under ῥυθμός, is quite improbable. The words τίς ἂν ἰδεῖν are wholly unintelligible. It may be suggested as a conjecture to read the passage thus, τίς ἂν σώζοι νιν (sc. τὸν Ὀρέστην) ῥυθμοῦ τοῦδ', ἰδὼν διὰ πέδον ἀνομένων βημάτων ὄρεγμα; see the explanation assigned to ῥυθμοῦ under the word. διὰ πέδον is conjectured by Blomf. for δάπεδον, and avoids the necessity of an awkward ellipsis.

Τανύδρομος exerting the limbs in running. σφαλερὰ τανυδρόμοις κῶλα E.349. (371.D.) Here τανυδρόμοις seems to be used as a verbal adjective governing κῶλα in the accusative, exerting in running their stumbling limbs, h.e. stumbling in the attempt to run away from the fate which pursues them. Dind. with Herm, writes σφαλερὰ γὰρ — and considers σφαλερὰ . . κῶλα to be put parenthetically; but this is certainly very awkward. Perhaps we should read σφαλερὰ περ τανυδρόμοις κ. τ. λ. Cf. not. ad loc. ed. Linw.

Ταφεῖν (aor. 2. from pres. inus.) to be astonished. ἔταφον, ἔταφον P.961.(1000.D.). Here Dindorf is probably right in supposing ἔταφον to be the first person of the aorist from ταφεῖν, not the third person plural from θάπτειν. See the passage explained under θάπτειν, where it is suggested that ἐπομένοις or ἐπομένους may be the correct reading in the next line, as governed by ἔταφον.

P.675. E.451. S.749. see ἄλλως and πάντως.

The reverse construction sc. καί . . τε is very rare. It appears in S.c.T. 562. 563. (580. 581. D.) where Scholef. quotes Plat. Crit. 8. sub fin. Here Blomf. needlessly reads ἡ θεῖον from Rob. — 4. τε καὶ . . τε, e.g. Γῆ τε καὶ Ἑρμῇ βασιλεῦ τ' ἐνέρων P. 621. — 5. τε καὶ . . καί, e.g. ἔχθραι τε καὶ στέργηθρα καὶ συνεδρίαί P.V. 490. — 6. τε καὶ . . τε . . τε, e.g. πόλει τ' ἀρήγειν καὶ θεῶν ἐγχωρίων βωμοῖσι . . τέκνοις τε γῇ τε μητρί S.c.T. 14. — 7. τε καὶ . . καὶ . . τε, e.g. σοί τε καὶ τέκνοις σέθεν καὶ πόλει φίλοις τε πᾶσι S.c.T. 69. These passages are, however, emended, or differently explained by some. It is often placed before the word in the sentence to which it precisely refers, e.g. ἔς τ' ἐπάλλξεις καὶ πύλας S.c.T. 30. for ἔς ἐπάλλξεις τε καὶ πύλας. Cf. P.V. 681. etc. See Elmsley on the Heraclidæ, v. 622. Wellauer on Prom. 42. It is usually placed second or third in the sentence, but sometimes fourth, e.g. P.V. 138. Lachmann conj. τέλει, τέλει, sc. as the imperative agreeing with Ζεῦ, Ζεῦ. Well. τέλει τάδε. If τελεῖται be correct, the preceding words must be explained as an aposiopesis, ἀμπέμπων being the nom. abs. and the force of ὁμῶς depending on the word ὑστερόποινον sc. thou that sendest vengeance late — yet still (although late) will it be accomplished for my parent's (Agamemnon's) sake. Or if τέλει τέλει be read, the construction will apparently resemble that of the words βαρέα δ' οὖν ὁμῶς φράσον S.c.T. 792. see ὁμῶς. h. e. it is against a parent (sc. Clytæmnestra) indeed (that I invoke thy vengeance), yet still even against a parent accomplish this thing. Either way, however, involves much uncertainty, and the passage may be considered corrupt.

The α in τελεία if agreeing with ἀρά cannot be elided, and τέλεια, as the neuter plural, is without sense. In the absence of better authority from MSS. it is perhaps best to read τελεῖν from Turn. So Blomf. This will refer to τελεῖν in v. 657. and the infinitive will depend upon προσιζάνει. The hateful curse of my father rests upon my dry tearless eyes (see ξηρός) in order that I may accomplish (this murder). Τελευταῖος last, A. 305. (314. D.) This passage is one of some difficulty. The precise nature of the contest called λαμπαδηφορία, to which the beacon lights are here compared, is not distinctly ascertained. The suggestion given in the Dict. of Antiqu. (Lond. 1842.) appears very probable: viz. that there were several chains or parties of torch-bearers, each of which ran in succession, and this view seems rather confirmed by the wording of the present passage, although not noticed in the article alluded to. Be this as it may, however, the comparison is clear, viz., that the succession of beacon fires is compared to the successive persons, or sets of persons, who carried the lighted torch in this contest. In the present verse, νικᾷ δ' ὁ πρῶτος καὶ τελευταῖος δραμών, the meaning generally assigned is, that the first and last were esteemed victorious, because the one transmitted the tidings first from Troy, the latter brought these tidings to Clytæmnestra. But it is surely strange to speak of two victors in one contest, to say nothing of the absence of the article before τελευταῖος. [There are, however, instances of such an omission to be found, e. g. Soph. Aj. 1250.] It may be suggested to take both πρῶτος and τελευταῖος as referring to one and the same: the light here transmitted is regarded as one and the same light, all coming from the same source, φάος οὐκ ἀπαππον Ἰδαίου πυρός. Hence (whereas in other contests of this kind, one person, or set of persons, from among many gained the prize), in this metaphorical contest on the other hand, the same light, ὁ πρῶτος καὶ τελευταῖος δραμών, h. e. that which ran from first to last, or unintermittingly, is declared the conqueror, as having successfully performed its duty.

Τερπνός pleasing, A.478.528. C.236. In A.142. (143.D.) τερπνὰ τούτων αἰτεῖ ξύμβολα κρᾶναι, Schütz reads αἰτῶ, which is unnecessary. αἰτεῖ refers to Diana, who is represented as entreating Jupiter to bring to a favourable issue the omens given by the birds. The construction is αἰτεῖ (sc. τὸν πατέρα, understood from v.134.) κρᾶναι τερπνὰ (sc. ὥστε τερπνὰ εἶναι) σύμβολα τούτων. Well. translates, Diana postulat, ut tanquam faustum omen interpreter avium apparitionem. αἰτεῖ, however, would scarcely be suitable in this case, and Well. therefore prefers αἰνεῖ. But κρᾶναι σύμβολα is not to interpret omens, but to bring them to an issue. A gloss. indeed has με after αἰτεῖ, and so Schol. τὰ σύμβολα αἰτεῖ με φᾶναι, whence Steph. φάναι. With respect to Diana's entreating Jupiter upon such a subject, Klausen compares the Oracle in Herod. vii. 141. and also Ag.648. — The v. A.878. τερπνὸν δὲ τἀναγκαῖον ἐκφυγεῖν ἅπαν is by Schütz placed after v.877. and by Blomfield considered as spurious, but without sufficient cause. See ἀναγκαῖος.

D.) celebrating the marriage hymn. Here Schütz proposes τίοντος, h. e. punientis, referring it to Διός. This certainly agrees better with the construction (see ἐκφάτως), but it does not appear that the active form τίειν is used in this sense.—From its meaning (if correctly given) in this last passage, we may deduce its signification in C. 620. (629. D.) τίων δ' (so vulg.) ἀθέρμαντον ἐστὶαν δόμων κ. τ. λ. where it appears to mean to commemorate, to make notorious. Cf. the use of σεβίζειν in P. 907. This whole passage from v. 614. to v. 621. is corrupt and unintelligible. We may safely assert that the words ἀκαίρως δὲ and δῆροισιν ἐπικότῳ σέβας are corrupt. The rest appears sound. The latter words cannot possibly mean, as Well. thinks, viro hostibus ob maiestatem in viso (cf. ἐπίκοτος): nor is there the slightest sense in attaching the meaning intempestive veneror to ἀκαίρως [τίω]. It may be suggested to read ὁ καιρὸς δὲ for ἀκαίρως δὲ and for τίων δ' in v. 620. to read τίειν δ'. The former δὲ will then (as Well. so far correctly observes) introduce the apodosis, and ὁ καιρὸς will govern the infinitive τίειν, as it does in v. 699. h. e. since I am on the subject of cruel sufferings, so is it a fitting occasion to record a horrid marriage, etc. and to record also, etc. τίειν in v. 620. would thus govern γαμήλευμα and the following words by anticipation. Scholefield records an anonymous conjecture for the words ἐπικότῳ σέβας, sc. ἐπικότῳ ἔβαν, but neither this nor any other conjecture which has been proposed, appears to meet the corruption of the passage.

See ἄγαλμα. στόματος τίμας S. 623. words of respect. ἐν τιμῇ σέβειν P. 162. to hold in esteem. See σέβειν. χωρὶς ἡ τιμὴ θεῶν A. 623. (637. D.) here the meaning is correctly given by Scholefield, "Deorum sc. quibus bona, et quibus mala nunciare curæ est," h. e. let the several gods have their worship kept apart. So Stanl. Cf. Blomf. Gloss.—In S. 679. φυλάσσοι δ' ἀτιμίας τιμάς τὸ δῆμιον, which the Schol. explains ἀμετακίνητοι εἶεν αὐτοῖς αἱ τιμαί, both the sense and metre indicate some corruption. Cf. ἀτιμία.

Τίμημα price, penalty. καὶ μὴν ἀμεμφῇ τὸνδ' ἐτεινάτην λόγον, τίμημα τύμβου τῆς ἀνοιμώκτου τύχης C. 504. (511. D.) The chorus express herein their sense of the justice and propriety of the words of Orestes and Electra, by which sc. they demand the assistance of Agamemnon in the prosecution of their work of vengeance, by way of punishment or requital for the absence of proper respect to his memory on the part of Clytæmnestra. τίμημα is in apposition with λόγον, and the gen. τύμβου depends on the other gen. τῆς ἀνοιμώκτου τύχης, for which (sc. for not honouring him departed with due respect, cf. C. 427.) the vengeance demanded is regarded as a proper penalty, sc. τίμημα. This construction has not been properly perceived, hence τῆς τ' has been conjectured for τῆς, which destroys the sense. So Blomf. Moreover, τίμημα is generally taken as if it were identical with τιμή sc. honour, a meaning which τίμημα never bears in any case, but only that of price, payment, punishment. See Thom. Magist. etc. Hence the explanation of Wellauer and some others becomes nugatory. Perhaps on the whole it is best to adopt Hermann's conjecture ἀμεμφῇ τὸνδ' ἐτεινάτην λόγον in v. 503. and to refer these last four verses to the chorus, and not to Electra, as is commonly done. Cf. ἀμόμφητος.

Τρίβειν [i] to rub. Met. to wear out, A. 1554. — οὔτοι θυράϊαν τήνδ' ἐμοὶ σχολή πάρα τρίβειν A. 1025. (1055. D.) Here θυράϊαν τήνδε refers to Clytæmnestra, πάρα being for πάρ-εστι and τήνδε equivalent to τῇδε, which Musgrave proposes to read. For the change from the dative to the accusative, cf. P.V. 217. A. 1592. Cf. also Eur. Med. 814. and see other instances adduced by Elmsl. on Heracl. 693. Blomfield observes, that in all these cases the accusative follows the verb, and therefore rather inclines to refer it to Cassandra. In this case παρὰ must govern θυράϊαν τήνδε, and τρίβειν be put absolutely: but it is much better to explain it as above. Dind. adopts Musgrave's conj. mid. v. οὐ χρηστηρίοις ἐν τοῖσδε πλῆστοισι τρίβεσθαι μύσος E. 186. (195. D.) Here Schütz correctly remarks that it is equivalent to ἐν-τρίβεσθαι χρή μύσος h. e. be inflicted on, made to enter, E. 186.

Τριπάχιος very great or severe, A. 1455. from τρίς and παχύς, as Blomf. supposes. It is absurd to derive it from πῆχυς a cubit, and in this case too the α would be long: hence Pauw and Butl. suggest τρίς-παχυν. Blomfield conj. τριπάλαιον i. e. very ancient. This Klausen adopts.

D.) understood from παίω. Cf. Herm. App. to Vig. ii.—by τρίτην πόσιν in C.571. (578. D.) we may understand with Schütz, the three murders of Iphigenia, Agamemnon, and Ægisthus, or, if we suppose the murder of Clytæmnestra to be regarded as closely following that of Ægisthus, the third goblet may refer to her. So the Schol. and Blomf. Klausen, however, seems more correct in explaining the first murder to be that of the children of Thyestes (cf. Ag. 1161. and C.1064.), the second will then be that of Agamemnon, the third the present one of Ægisthus and Clytæmnestra. τρίτη πόσις is (as Klausen observes) used with a peculiar force by Orestes, as the one which was to be the last, and which would bring safety to his house. The third in order of anything was accounted under the protection of Ζεὺς σωτήρ, to whom the third libation in feasts was offered. Hence in S.26. he is invoked in the third place as Ζεὺς σωτήρ τρίτος. Cf. E.729. (759. D.) τοῦ πάντα κραίνοντος τρίτου σωτήρος. So in C.242. (244. D.) Κράτος and Δίκη are invoked σὺν τῷ τρίτῳ πάντων μεγίστῳ Ζηνί. In A.1359. (1386. D.) in allusion to this, the third blow is struck in honour of Ἄδης νεκρῶν σωτήρ. So likewise in C.1062. (1073. D.) the third and final calamity which was to terminate the sufferings of the house is called τρίτος χειμῶν 1062. and in v.1069. Orestes, as the agent in this, is called τρίτος σωτήρ. Cf. σωτήρ.

Ἵπέρομπος exceedingly arrogant, S.c.T. 373.386. P. 813.817. — excelling, superior. ὑπέρομποι τάχει P. 334. In P. 780. (794.D.) the vulg. is κτείνουσα λιμῷ τοὺς ὑπερκόμπους ἄγαν h.e. killing by famine those who make too vast a display (sc. of force). In M. and four other MSS. ὑπερπώλους is read. Such also was the reading of the Schol. who explains it τοὺς πολυίππους Πέρσας. So Blomf. From this Hermann conj. ὑπερπολλούς, which Well. adopts. There can be no doubt that Æschylus must have employed some epithet here, expressing or implying the vastness of the Persian forces, which rendered them obnoxious to famine: this is clear from the following verse. Hence the epithet ὑπερπώλους as explained by the Schol. (which, moreover, as Well. observes, should be πολυπώλους) is unsuitable: ὑπερπολλούς suits the meaning exactly. Nevertheless the vulg. may in effect convey the same idea, as denoting an army inflated with pride at the vastness of its numbers. Certainly, however, the addition of πλήθει, as of τάχει in v. 334. would seem almost necessary to define the idea. If ὑπερπολλούς be correct, this must have been corrupted into ὑπερπώλους, and some one understanding this epithet with reference to the high spirit proverbial in young horses (cf. P.V. 1012. A. 1625.) may have written as a gloss ὑπερκόμπους, which thus crept into the text; otherwise it is difficult to imagine how ὑπέρομπους could have become thus corrupted by the copyist. — Wherever this word occurs, Blomfield corrects ὑπέρομπος, against MSS. and Edd. because in all these passages the metre admits of ὑπέρομπος, but some, as S.c.T. 437. C. 134. Soph. Aj. 127. do not admit of ὑπέρομπος. He adds, however, at the end of his note on S.c.T. 387. that they may possibly be different words. That such is the case is shewn by Lobeck on Soph. Aj. 127. who compares the three adjectives ὑπέρομπος, ὑπέρομπος, and ὑπέροτος. He observes that in ὑπέρομπος each part of the compound is of equal force, but that in ὑπέροτος (from κόπτω) the force of the verb is somewhat lost, and the meaning is merely excessive, enormous, so that the latter may be predicated of the former, but not vice versa. ὑπέροτος he rightly derives from κότος in the same sense as it appears in ἀλλόκοτος, παλίγκοτος, νεόκοτος, and concludes, “ὑπέρομπος propriam habet gloriationis significationem, unde transfertur ad res splendide exaggeratas, ὑπέροτος vero et ὑπέροτος immodicum et vehemens denotat.” Cf. παλίγκοτος.

Here either there is some verb lost, or ἐγένετο must be understood with ἑπετελής. So Blomf. who also conj. ἑπετελεῖ. But such an ellipsis is very harsh. Moreover, the construction πορευτοῦ λαμπάδος πρὸς ἡδονήν, h. e. λαμπάδος πορευομένης πρὸς ἡδονήν, is awkward in the extreme, and the apposition of πύκη to ἰσχύς, as it is commonly understood, is no less so. Schütz's conj. sc. πύκης, is better. For πρὸς ἡδονήν Symmonds (not. on transl. of Ag.) conj. προσήνυεν, h. e. travelled on, but we are almost inclined to suppose that the corruption lies in πύκη, for which we venture to suggest πέμπει. This verb is properly used in describing such a circumstance, cf. νν. 274. 296. πομποῦ πυρός 290. No actual mention is made of the pine, as the means of kindling a blaze, indeed from νν. 286. 292. it would almost appear to have been made throughout with other materials.

ὑποστενάζειν to groan beneath. οὐράνιον πόλον νώτοις ὑποστενάζει P.V.428. (490. D.) Here Rob. Steph. Cant. Stanl. Pors. read ὑποβαστάζει against the majority of MSS. The construction is rightly explained by Scholef. "subtus gemit, i.e. gerens gemit." He groans under it, supporting it with his back. It is equivalent to νώτοις (βαστάζων) ὑποστενάζει, which Butler needlessly proposes to insert in the text. with part. to be shown to be, to be evidently, P. 772. A. 579. — perf. part. τοῦ πεφασμένου P.V. 845. that which appears. The passage in A. 364. (374. D.) πέφανται δ' ἐγγόνους | ἀτολμήτων "Αρη | πνεόντων μεῖζον ἢ δικαίως is very obscure. Πέφανται, if correct, must either be the third pers. sing. perf. of φαίνεσθαι, or the third pl. of φάω to kill. Scholefield prefers the latter, and translates it actively, occiderunt. This seems very harsh, especially since in the passage from the Odyssey, where the word occurs, it is used with a passive signification. It may be better, therefore, with Schütz, to adopt Stanley's conj. ἐγγόνους (rather ἐκγόνοις, cf. ἔγγονος), and to translate, and it (viz. the existence of the gods) is made manifest to the descendants, etc. In the next line the words ἀτολμήτων "Αρη are very difficult. Blomf. translates, martem rerum nefastarum, which is certainly extremely awkward. Nor is Klausen more felicitous in thinking that ἀτόλμητος means intolerabilis, which ἀτλητος might mean, but certainly not the other. If conjecture may be indulged, we should suggest ἀτολμήτως and join it with "Αρη πνεόντων h.e. impiously breathing war. Cf. ἀτόλμητος.

I have no objection, I do not wish to refuse you. φθόνον ἔχειν to begrudge. φθόνον δὲ σωμάτων ἔξει θεός P.V. 861. (859. D.) i. e. as Siebelis and Herm. on Vig. 143. explain it, prohibebit Danai filios Deos, quo minus virginibus cognatis potiantur. In his Obs. Critt. however, and on Vig. 252. he proposes a different interpretation, and translates φθόνον ἔχειν facere invidiam, in the same sense as μομφὰν ἔχει in Pind. Isthm. iv. 53. faciet Deus invidiam filiabus Danai propter caesa sponsorum corpora, eaque invidia Pelasga terra laborabit. He then comp. Hor. ii. 14. Danai genus infame. The other interpretation seems the simplest and best. — φθόνος is used in a peculiar sense to express the jealous feeling of the gods towards the human race, on account of excess of prosperity, or otherwise; to avert which feeling was, with the Greeks, an object of especial care. Hence we find such forms as τὸν φθόνον δὲ πρόσκυσον Soph. Phil. 776. Of similar import were the forms προσκυνῶ τὴν Νέμεσιν, προσκυνῶ τὴν Ἀδράστειαν P.V. 938. σὺν δ' Ἀδραστεία λέγω Inc. Rhés. 468. See Blomf. Gloss. on the former passage. Thus we find Clytæmnestra, after indulging in extravagant encomiums on her husband, saying, φθόνος δ' ἀπέστω A.878. (904. D.) to avert the jealousy of the gods. So Agamemnon, referring to the magnificent reception Clytæmnestra is giving him, declines it, saying, A. 921. θεῶν μή τις πρόσωθεν ὀμμάτων βάλοι φθόνος. In the same sense he calls the path strewn with costly carpets ἐπίφθονον πόρον v. 895. Cf. P. 354. οὐ ξυνεῖς δόλον Ἕλληνας ἀνδρός, οὐδὲ τὸν θεῶν φθόνον.

Φονεύς a murderer, A. 1632. E. 120. 403. a murderess, A. 1204. The passage A. 1298. (1325.D.) ἡλίψ τ' ἐπέυχομαι ... δούλης θανούσης is corrupt. Pauw's conjecture may amuse the reader, τίνειν δ μου, h. e. solvant quod mihi debetur. Blomf. conj. τοῖ ἐμοῦ τιμαόρους ἐχθροῖς φονεῦσι τοῖς ἐμοῖς τίνειν ὁμοῦ, but this is inadmissible, because τίνειν is said of those who pay a penalty, not of those who inflict it. It appears that some substantive is wanting with τίνειν, which would hardly be thus used by itself, and this can scarcely be sought elsewhere than in όμοῦ, which, as it stands at present, is very awkward. Possibly for όμοῦ we should read μόρον. We may also adopt Jacobs' conj. ήλίον for ήλίψ; this, however, is not absolutely necessary. For φονεῦσι we would also suggest φοναῖσι, and in the preceding line τῶς for τοῖς. The datives έχθροῖς, τοῖς, έμοῖς, being now, by a slight alteration, changed into the accusative, we may read the passage thus: — ήλίψ (or ήλίον) τ' έπέύχομαι πρὸς ὕστατον φῶς. τῶς έμοῖς τιμάρους έχθρούς φοναῖσι τοὺς έμούς τίνειν μόρον δούλης θανούσης κ.τ.λ. The sense would then be, and at my last sunlight (h.e. in these my last moments) I pray that my enemies may by their murder pay to my avengers the penalty of my death. This may be offered as a conjecture: of the passage as it is commonly read, any explanation is impossible.

Χαρίζεσθαι to gratify, P. 686. In A. 295. (304. D.) ὥτρυνε θεσμόν μὴ χαρίζεσθαι πυρός, the vulg. is evidently corrupt. Casaub. conj. μοι χαρίζεσθαι. So Stanley, who afterwards conj. μῆχαρ ἵζεσθαι. This is adopted by Klausen, who translates, exhortata est constitutam catervam ut ignis paratio locum haberet. ἵζεσθαι sc. collocari. This is very improbable. Heath conj. μὴ χαρίζεσθαι h.e. not to be wanting. So Schütz 1. and Pors. but in his second ed. Schütz adopts μοι χαρίζεσθαι. Wellauer has introduced an extraordinary word sc. μηχαρίζεσθαι, which in his Lex. he translates perficere. This Scholefield has adopted. Blomf. follows Heath's conj. In so doubtful a case, it is perhaps best to read μοι χαρίζεσθαι. Butler observes that this is peculiarly applicable, if we consider, as is evident from the passage, that there was no beacon between Ægiplanctus and that of Arachnæus adjoining the city, so that Ægiplanctus may thus be said to have conveyed the message straight to Clytæmnestra.

Elmsley on Eur. Med. 1334. prefers χεροῖν. The Schol. explains it διὰ τῶν χειρῶν. Wellauer supposes the corruption to be in αὐτοῖς (which Rob. omits), and proposes σφισίν, of which αὐτοῖς might have been an interpretation.

D.) ἐμοὶ δ’ ἐπήγαγεν εὐνῆς παροψώνημα τῆς ἐμῆς χλιδῆς, the constr. is not, as Butler supposes, ἐμοὶ δ’ ἐπήγαγεν παροψώνημα χλιδῆς τῆς ἐμῆς εὐνῆς, but εὐνῆς παροψώνημα is to be taken strictly together, as forming one idea, sc. she has brought to me (by her death) a nuptial addition (h. e. one which I feel as a married woman) to my luxury. Cf. ἀνθος. Heath refers ἐπήγαγε to Agamemnon, and considers it to mean that Agamemnon, not satisfied with the charms of Clytæmnestra, had brought Cassandra as an additional luxury for his bed. As, however, κεῖται refers to Cassandra, this interpretation is clearly wrong.

λευσμόν τε καὶ μύζουσιν οἰκτισμόν πολὺν ὑπὸ ῥάχιν παγέντες E. 177.
(188. D.) seqq. Two difficulties meet us here. One, the accusative λευσ-μόν, where λευσμός seems to be required, and is read by Casaub. Herm.
Schütz. The other is κακοῦ τε χλοῦ-νις, which is unintelligible. Herm.
and Stanl. conj. κακή τε χλοῦνις.
Some MSS. have κακοῦται χλοῦνις, whence Erfurdt conj. σπέρματός τ' ἀποφθορᾷ παίδων κακοῦται χλοῦνις
h. e. ubi viridis puerorum ætas seminis corruptione læditur. But this, as Well. observes, besides the awkward introduction of the verb κακοῦ-ται, is rendered doubtful by the interpretation given to χλοῦνις, which is without authority. The word ἀκρωνία also, if it be correctly explained by the Schol. ἀθροισμόν, πλῆθος, renders the passage doubtful. Dind. thinks a verse is lost after ἀκρωνία. Cf. not. ad loc. ed. Linw.

— distress, necessity, P. 139. πρὶν
ἀγγέλους φλέγειν χρείας ὑπο S.c.T.
268. (286. D.) ere rumours are kindled by our distress. φλέγειν in this passage refers to λόγους only, not to ἀγγέλους, which is referred in sense to ἰκέσθαι alone. Stanl. less properly understands ἡμᾶς after φλέγειν.—ἐξιστορῆσαι μοῖραν ἐν χρείᾳ τύχης S.c.T. 488. (506. D.) wishing to enquire his fate in the distress of fortune, i. e. in circumstances of peril.
The Scholiast well explains it, χρεία γὰρ καιρός ἐστὶ μαθεῖν τὴν αὐτοῦ τύχην. ὁ γὰρ πόλεμος τοὺς ἐντυχεῖς καὶ τοὺς δυστυχεῖς κρίνει.

καὶ χρήμασιν μὲν ἐκ δόμων πορθομ-ένων . . γένοιτ' ἂν ἄλλα, there is probably some corruption. χρήμασι might be governed by ἄλλα sc. others in addition to or in place of, but this would imply a very harsh change to the gen. absolute in πορθουμένων. Perhaps χρημάτων (so Aurat.) is better: v. 439. seems more naturally to come after 440, but it is probably an interpolation. See γόμος.

Χρηματοδαίρας Dor. a divider of property, S.c.T. 711.

Χρησθαι (mid. v. of χρᾶν qu. v.) to use, P.V. 322. E. 625. δουλίῳ χρηται ζυγῷ A. 927. suffers the yoke. — perf. σωφρονεῖν κεχρημένον P. 815. (829. D.) So the Schol. correctly, for the vulg. κεχρημένοι. It is, however, impossible that it can here govern σωφρονεῖν in the sense of wanting: (on this meaning cf. Elmsl. on Heracl. 801.) this would require τοῦ σωφρονεῖν. As little can the other reading κεχρημένοι govern σωφρονεῖν in the sense of using, which would require τῷ σωφρονεῖν. The meaning of the word has apparently been mistaken. It is the perf. pass. of χρᾶν, sc. warned of God, instructed as by an oracle. That the word may be used in this sense is clear from the compound πυθοχρήστης in C. 928. which the Schol. explains ὁ ὑπὸ θεοῦ χρησθείς.

Χρησμός an oracle or prediction P.V. 665. 875. P. 725. A. 1151. 1225. 1549. C. 268. 295. E. 592. 683.

Χρονίζειν to last, continue, A. 821. — to delay, A. 1329. τὰ δ' ἐν μεταίχμιῳ σκότῳ μένει χρονίζοντα βρῦει C. 62. (64. D.) after being delayed burst forth with violence. μένει is the dative of μένος. Cf. μένος. Or τὰ may be the relative agreeing with μένει or its verb, sc. ἃ δὲ μένει, (ταῦτα) χρονίζοντα βρῦει. But the former method is best. pass. to be delayed, S.c.T. 54. χρονισθείς A. 709. grown up. In C. 941. seqq. (953. seqq.) occurs a very corrupt passage, τάπερ ὁ Λοξίας ὁ Παρνάσιος (corr. Παρνάσιος) μέγαν ἔχων μυχὸν χθονὸς ἐπ' ὄχθει ἄξεν ἀδόλως δολίαν βλαπτομένην ἐν χρόνοις θεῖσαν ἐποίχεται. Various emendations have been proposed. Herm. and Wellauer suppose a lacuna after χθονός. For ἐπ' ὄχθει ἄξεν which is manifestly corrupt, Herm. suggests ἐπ' ἐχθροζένοισι. Klaus. conj. ἐπ' ἔχθροιοις. h.e. on mountains, referring to Παρνάσιος. For ἐν χρόνοις θεῖσαν

Herm. corrects χρονισθεῖσαν h.e. delayed, which, if correct, must be an epexegetis of βλαπτομένην. For τάπερ also he reads τάνπερ, an obvious correction, agreeing with Δίκαν. Without attempting to settle anything with respect to ἐπ' ὅχθει ἄξεν, we may translate the rest of the sentence, whom (sc. Justice) Apollo who dwells on Parnassus in the great shrine of the earth, goes for (h.e. fetches, brings up against criminals) stealthy, yet stealthy in a righteous cause [the meaning of ἀδόλως δολίαν is, however, very obscure], halting, delayed. The idea seems the same as that of Horace, Raro antecedentem scelestum deseruit pede Pæna claudo.

Χρῦσεύς a native of Chrysa, P. 306. Brunck and Schütz incorrectly suppose this word to be a proper name.

Χρυσήτης Chryseis, A. 1414.

Χρυσήλατος wrought in gold, S.c.T. 626. E. 173.

Χρυσόγονος born of gold. χρυσογόνου γενεᾶς P. 79. (80. D.) a race born of the golden shower, sc. of that golden shower into which Jupiter transformed himself when he came to Danae. From this connexion sprung Perseus, from him and Andromeda Perses, whence the Persians were derived. So Herod. vii. 150. In this passage several MSS. and Edd. have χρυσονόμου, which the Schol. A. explains πλουσίας, but prefers the reading χρυσόγονος. Schol. B. likewise has χρυσονόμου with the explanation πλουσιωτάτης· τοιοῦτοι γὰρ οἱ Πέρσαι. Blomfield adopts this reading. The vulg., however, appears in every way preferable.

This is explained by Victor, “liberum remotumque esse debere ab omni hujusmodi re, quicquid ad Deos colendos honoreque afficiendos pertinet.” Butler much the same; alia (quam infausta sc.) poscit honos Diis debitus. Abresch's explanation is absurd. Stanley explains it, “quod alius sit honor eorum Deorum qui bona mittant: alius eorum qui mala, ut Erinnyes.” So Heath and Blomf. Scholfield compares Arist. Thesm. 11. χωρὶς γὰρ αὐτοῖν ἑκατέρου ὅστιν ἡ φύσις. The explanation of the Scholiast, ταῦτα λέγοντες ἀτιμάζομεν τοὺς θεούς, rather favours the former interpretation, but the latter appears on the whole to be preferable. Cf. τιμή.

Works

PRINTED FOR TAYLOR & WALTON.

New Works and New Editions.

Liebig—Gregory.—Turner's Chemistry.

Eighth Edition. Edited by JUSTUS LIEBIG, M.D., Professor of Chemistry in the University of Giessen, and WILLIAM GREGORY, M.D., Professor of Chemistry in the University of Edinburgh. Complete in 1 volume, 8vo. 1*l.* 10*s.*

The Work may also be had in Two Parts.

PART I.—INORGANIC CHEMISTRY. 15*s.* cloth.

II.—ORGANIC CHEMISTRY. 15*s.* cloth.

Guesses at Truth.

By TWO BROTHERS. First Series. Third Edition. Fcap. 8vo. 6*s.* cloth.

Mohr—Redwood.—Practical Pharmacy.

Comprising the Arrangements, Apparatus, and Manipulations of the Pharmaceutical Shop and Laboratory. By FRANCIS MOHR, Ph.D., Assessor Pharmacie of the Royal Prussian College of Medicine, Coblenz. Edited, with numerous Additions and Alterations, adapting it for the use of English Chemists, by THEOPHILUS REDWOOD, Professor of Pharmacy to the Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain. One volume, 8vo, illustrated by several hundred Engravings on Wood. (In the Press.)

De Morgan.—Formal Logic ;

Or, the Calculus of Inference, Necessary and Probable. By AUGUSTUS DE MORGAN, Professor of Mathematics in University College, London. 8vo. 12*s.*

Schmitz.—Niebuhr's Lectures on the History of Rome from the Earliest Times to the First Punic War.

Edited by Dr. M. Isler. Translated with numerous Additions from MSS. in the exclusive possession of the Translator. By DR. L. SCHMITZ, Rector of the High School of Edinburgh. 1 volume, 8vo. 14s. cloth.

The above, with the two volumes of Lectures already published, complete Niebuhr's History of Rome in the Lecture form.

Thirlwall—Hare.—Niebuhr's History of Rome.

Translated by BISHOP THIRLWALL and ARCHDEACON HARE. A New Edition of Volume I. 8vo, with Map, 16s.

Sharpey—Quain.—Dr. Quain's Anatomy.

Fifth Edition. Edited by DR. SHARPEY and MR. QUAIN, Professors of Anatomy and Physiology in University College, London. Complete in 2 vols. 8vo. Illustrated by several hundred Engravings on Wood.

. The Work may also be had for a short time in Three Parts.

PART I., 13s. | PART II., 14s. | PART III., s.

(Early in 1848.)

Linwood.—Lexicon to Æschylus.

Containing a Critical Explanation of the more difficult Passages in the Seven Tragedies. By the REV. W. LINWOOD, A.M., M.R.A.S. Second Edition, revised throughout. 8vo. 12s.

"We have much pleasure in recommending the work to the notice of students, who will derive very great assistance from it in the study of Æschylus."

Classical Museum, No. I.

Dictionary of Greek and Roman Biography and Mythology.

By various Writers. Edited by DR. WILLIAM SMITH. Part XXIII. (Part V. of Vol. III.), price 4s.

. Volume III. (in course of publication) will complete the Work.

Latham on the English Language.

Second Edition. Revised, with Additions. 8vo.

Schmitz.—A History of Rome;

From the Earliest Times to the Death of Commodus, A.D. 192. By DR. L. SCHMITZ, Rector of the High School of Edinburgh, Editor of Niebuhr's Lectures. One thick volume, 12mo, 7s. 6d. cloth, or 8s. 6d. strongly bound in leather.

•• This work presents, in a popular form, the results of the investigations of the most distinguished scholars, especially those of Niebuhr, Arnold, Goettling, Rubino, and Becker. The whole is based upon a careful examination of the original sources.

Gregory.—Outlines of Chemistry, for the Use of Students.

By WILLIAM GREGORY, M.D., Professor of Chemistry in the University of Edinburgh. Second Edition, revised and enlarged. Complete in 1 vol. foolscap 8vo, 12s. cloth. Part I.—(INORGANIC CHEMISTRY), 5s. cloth. Part II.—(ORGANIC CHEMISTRY), 7s. cloth.

"This is beyond comparison the best introduction to Chemistry which has yet appeared. The directions for preparing substances are usually confined to the best method, so that brevity and selectness are combined. The size and price of this little work, as well as its intrinsic merits, commend it to every student of Chemistry.—Lancet.

Liebig—Gregory.—Researches on the Chemistry of Food.

By JUSTUS LIEBIG, M.D., Professor of Chemistry in the University of Giessen. Edited from the Author's Manuscript, by WILLIAM GREGORY, M.D., Professor of Chemistry in the University of Edinburgh. 8vo, 5s. 6d. cloth.

"The medical man will find in these researches a prospect of many and great improvements in practice, whether as regards dietetics or the action of acids, alkalies, and salts on the digestive and respiratory processes; and with respect to both it is to Chemistry he must look for assistance in his efforts to advance. Lastly, the present work contains some most valuable practical applications of the chemical discoveries therein detailed, to an art which immediately concerns the whole of mankind, namely, the culinary art."—Editor's Preface.

MacLise.—Comparative Osteology,

Being Morphological Studies to demonstrate the Archetype Skeleton of Vertebrated Animals. By JOSEPH MACLISE, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons. Illustrated by 54 Plates. Small folio, 2l. 12s. 6d. cloth.

"Suffice it to say that the Book ought to be in the hands of every scientific anatomist."—Morning Chronicle.

Liebig—Playfair and Gregory.—Chemistry in its Applications to Agriculture and Physiology.

By JUSTUS LIEBIG, M.D., Ph.D., F.R.S., Professor of Chemistry in the University of Giessen. Edited from the Manuscript of the Author, by LYON PLAYFAIR, Ph.D., and WILLIAM GREGORY, M.D. Fourth Edition, revised. 8vo, 10s. 6d. cloth.

"It is not too much to say, that the publication of Professor Liebig's Organic Chemistry of Agriculture constitutes an era of great importance in the history of Agricultural Science. Its acceptance as a standard is unavoidable; for following closely in the straight path of inductive Philosophy, the conclusions which are drawn from its data are incontrovertible. We can truly say, that we have never risen from the perusal of a book with a more thorough conviction of the profound knowledge, extensive reading, and practical research of its author, and of the invincible power and importance of its reasonings and conclusions, than we have gained from the present volume."—Sullivan's Journal.

Liebig—Gregory.—Animal Chemistry ;

Or, Chemistry in its Applications to Physiology and Pathology. By JUSTUS LIEBIG, M.D., Ph.D., Professor of Chemistry in the University of Giessen. Edited, from the Author's Manuscript, by WILLIAM GREGORY, M.D., Professor of Chemistry in the University of Edinburgh. Third Edition, almost wholly re-written. 8vo. Part I. (the first half of the work) 6s. 6d. cloth, just published.

"Under the heads of animal heat; of the nutrition of the carnivora and herbivora; of the origin and use of the bile; of the relation between the change of matter and the consumption of oxygen; of the origin and use of the non-nitrogenised elements of food, and particularly of fat, and their relative value as sources of heat; of the effects of alcohol and fermented liquors; of the effects produced on the volume of the inspired air by the different articles of food; and lastly, of the true functions of the intestinal canal, and the origin, nature, and composition of the fæces, with their relation to the food, and to the supply of oxygen;—under all these heads, the reader will find such an amount of new and interesting matter as must satisfy him that we have entered on the true path of discovery, and that the industry of modern chemists has been most profitably employed during the period which has elapsed since the first edition of this work appeared."—From the Editor's Advertisement.

Part II., completing the Work, will be ready very soon. It has been delayed for the results of important investigations, some of which are still in progress.

De Morgan.—Arithmetical Books,

From the Invention of Printing to the Present Time; being Brief Notices of a large Number of Works drawn up from Actual Inspection. By AUGUSTUS DE MORGAN, Professor of Mathematics in University College, London. Royal 12mo, 6s. cloth.

"A great number of persons are employed in teaching Arithmetic in the United Kingdom. In publishing this work, I have the hope of placing before many of them more materials for the prevention of inaccurate knowledge of the literature of their science than they have hitherto been able to command, without both expense and research."—Preface.

Latham.—First Outlines of Logic applied to Grammar and Etymology.

By R. G. LATHAM, A.M., Fellow of King's College, Cambridge. 12mo, 1s. 6d.

Latham.—An English Grammar for the Use of Schools.

By R. G. LATHAM, A.M., Fellow of King's College, Cambridge. Second Edition. 12mo, 4s. 6d. cloth.

The Classical Museum ;

A Journal of Philology and of Ancient History and Literature. 8vo. Vol. II. 12s. 6d. cloth. Vols. III., IV., and V., each 14s. 6d. cloth.

The work is continued Quarterly. Price of each Part, 3s. 6d. Part XVIII. completing Vol. V. is just published.

Histories of Greece and England,

Upon the same Plan as DR. SCHMITZ'S History of Rome.

Classical Antiquities, Biography, History, &c.

DICTIONARY OF GREEK AND ROMAN ANTIQUITIES.

AND MYTHOLOGY. Edited by WILLIAM SMITH, LL.D. Medium 8vo. Illustrated by numerous Engravings on Wood. To be continued in Quarterly Parts, and to form Three Volumes.

Vol. I. (1100 pages), 1*l.* 16*s.* cloth lettered.

II. (1200 pages), 1*l.* 16*s.* ditto.

••• Parts 19 to 23 (commencing Vol. III.) are also published, each 4*s.*

"There is no need of pronouncing any formal eulogium on this new Classical Dictionary, for in fact it is the only one with any pretensions to the name in our language; and as such it must form part of the library of every student who desires to become acquainted with the mind of antiquity."—Athenæum.

EXERCISES IN LOGIC; designed for the Use of Students in Colleges. By J. T. GRAY, Ph.D. 12mo. Price 3*s.* 6*d.* cloth.

Natural Philosophy.

POTTER'S ELEMENTARY TREATISE ON MECHANICS,
for the use of the Junior University Students. By RICHARD POTTER, A.M., late Fellow of Queen's College, Cambridge, Professor of Natural Philosophy in University College, London. 8vo, with numerous Diagrams. 8s. 6d. cloth.

POTTER'S ELEMENTARY TREATISE ON OPTICS. 8vo, with numerous Diagrams. 9s. 6d. cloth.

This volume contains all the requisite propositions carried to first approximations; and the construction of Reflecting and Refracting Telescopes and Microscopes, the Solar, Oxyhydrogen and Lucernal Microscopes; the Magic and Phantasmagoria Lantern; the Daguerreotype; Camera Obscura; Hadley's Sextant and Reflecting Circles; the Optical Square; the Screw Micrometer; the Goniometer, &c.

YOUNG'S LECTURES ON NATURAL PHILOSOPHY AND
THE MECHANICAL ARTS. A New Edition, with References and Notes, by the Rev. P. KELLAND, M.A., F.R.S. London and Edinburgh, late Fellow of Queen's College, Cambridge, Professor of Mathematics, &c. in the University of Edinburgh. 2 vols. 8vo, with 43 Copper Plates. 1l. 4s. cloth.

"All who seek information should know that Young is not merely a popular writer, but by far the most popular of those whose accuracy can be relied on in a vast range of subjects, and who have actually written through that range."—Athenæum.

TWELVE PLANISPHERES, forming a Guide to the Stars for every Night in the Year, with an Introduction. 8vo. 6s. 6d. cloth.

Mathematics.

DE MORGAN'S ELEMENTS OF ARITHMETIC. By AUGUSTUS
DE MORGAN, Professor of Mathematics in University College, London. Fifth Edition, with Eleven new Appendixes. Royal 12mo. 5s. cloth.

"At the time when this work was first published, the importance of establishing arithmetic in the young mind, upon reason and demonstration, was not admitted by many. The case is now altered: schools exist in which rational arithmetic is taught, and mere rules are made to do no more than their proper duty. There is no necessity to advocate a change which is actually in progress, as the works which are published every day sufficiently show. And my principal reason for alluding to the subject here is merely to warn those who want nothing but routine, that this is not the book for their purpose."—Author's Preface.

DE MORGAN'S ARITHMETICAL BOOKS AND AUTHORS.
Royal 12mo. 6s. (See page 4).

DE MORGAN'S ELEMENTS OF ALGEBRA, preliminary to the Differential Calculus. Second Edition. Royal 12mo. 9s. cloth.

DE MORGAN'S ELEMENTS OF TRIGONOMETRY AND TRIGONOMETRICAL ANALYSIS, preliminary to the Differential Calculus.
Royal 12mo. 9s. cloth.

METRICAL, TO FIVE PLACES. Under the Superintendence of the Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge. Foolscap 8vo. 3s. sewed.

REINER'S LESSONS ON FORM; or, AN INTRODUCTION TO GEOMETRY, as given in a Pestalozzian School, Cheam, Surrey. 12mo, with numerous Diagrams. 3s. 6d. cloth.

"It has been found in the actual use of these lessons, for a considerable period, that a larger average number of pupils are brought to study the Mathematics with decided success, and that all pursue them in a superior manner."—Rev. Dr. Mayo.

REINER'S LESSONS ON NUMBER, as given at a Pestalozzian School, at Cheam, Surrey. Second Edition. Consisting of

THE MASTER'S MANUAL. 12mo. 4s. 6d. cloth.

THE SCHOLAR'S PRAXIS. 12mo. 2s. bound.

RITCHIE'S PRINCIPLES OF GEOMETRY, familiarly Illustrated, and applied to a variety of useful purposes. Designed for the Instruction of Young Persons. Second Edition, revised and enlarged. 12mo, with 150 Woodcuts. 3s. 6d. cloth.

RITCHIE'S PRINCIPLES OF THE DIFFERENTIAL AND INTEGRAL CALCULUS, familiarly Illustrated and applied to a variety of useful purposes. Second Edition. Revised by J. A. SPENCER, B.A., Assistant Mathematical Master in University College School. 12mo, with Diagrams. 4s. 6d. cloth.

"Dr. Ritchie was a man of clear head, apt at illustration and fond of elements. We have heard that he wrote this work when, late in life, he began to learn the subject. We believe our readers would find it a useful first book."—Athenæum.

BARLOW'S TABLES OF SQUARES, CUBES, SQUARE ROOTS, CUBE ROOTS, and RECIPROCALs, up to 10,000. Stereotype Edition, examined and corrected. Under the Superintendence of the Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge. Royal 12mo. 8s.

"They will be found useful to the more scientific class of Engineers and Surveyors, for immediately obtaining results which are now usually got by logarithmic calculation, or the sliding rule; to actuaries (in the table of reciprocals); to schoolmasters, for obtaining examples of the ordinary rules of Arithmetic; to all, in fact, who are calculators by choice or necessity, though of course to some more than to others."—Preface.

New Latin Reading Book; consisting of short Sentences, easy Narrations, and Descriptions, selected from Caesar's Gallic War; arranged in systematic progression. With a Dictionary. 12mo. 3s. 6d. cloth.

"The plan of this work differs in one important point from other works of a similar kind. The sentences have been selected exclusively from Caesar's Commentary on the Gallic War, instead of being taken from different authors, as has usually been the case. There is an obvious advantage in this plan; the same words are continually repeated by the same author in a simple narrative; and the pupil thus becomes accustomed to his style, and finds the work of translation grow easier every day, which cannot be the case when the extracts are taken from many different authors, whose style must of course vary exceedingly."—Preface.

Tacitus. Germania, Agricola, and First Book of the Annals. With Notes translated into English, from Ruperti, Passow, Walch, and Bötticher's remarks on the style of Tacitus. 12mo. 5s. cloth.

Drawing Chalk, 9d. per dozen sticks, in a Box. Port-crayons for holding the Chalk, 4d. each.

EDUCATIONAL MODELS

FOR THE USE OF SCHOOLS, MECHANICS' INSTITUTIONS, AND FOR PRIVATE INSTRUCTION.

A Set of Apparatus for Hydrostatics, Hydraulics, and Pneumatics; with a Pamphlet containing full Descriptions and Directions for Performing many Experiments. Price 6l. 6s. in a box.

Apparatus for Cohesion, Capillary Attraction, Electric and Magnetic Attraction, Impenetrability and Inertia; with Descriptions and Diagrams. Price 2l. in a box.

A Machine for Illustrating Centrifugal Motion; including a representation of the Governor of a Steam Engine. In a box, 10s.

Attwood's Machine for Explaining the Laws of Falling Bodies: with Apparatus attached for Illustrating the Theory of the Pendulum. Price of Attwood's Machine, with a "Companion," 2l. 2s.; additional Apparatus, for the Pendulum, 1l. 1s.

Sets of Mechanical Powers; containing the Lever—Wheel and Axle—A Series of Pulleys—The Inclined Plane—Wedge—Screw; with Examples of the Parallelogram of Forces—Centre of Gravity—Friction—Collision of Elastic Bodies—Compound Lever. £ s. d.

1. For large Lecture-rooms (size of the frame: height 3 feet 1 inch; width 3 feet) 8 8 0

2. For Schools and smaller Lecture-rooms (height of the frame, 2 feet 6 inches; width 2 feet 3 inches) 5 5 0

3. A Smaller set, omitting the Parallelogram of Forces and Collision of Elastic Bodies (height of the frame, 2 feet 1 inch; width, 1 foot 11½ inches) . . . 2 12 6

4. A Commoner Set (height of the frame, 2 feet; width, 19 inches) 1 6 3

The Bent Lever. Convertible into a Bent Lever or Toggle Joint Press. With weights, and a description. Price 10s.

Apparatus for Magnetism. Price 18s. in a box.

A Train of Spur Wheels, mounted on a mahogany stand, with weights. Price 21s. in a box.

A Double Inclined Plane, with an Application of the Composition and Resolution of Forces. In a box, 10s.

A Portable Hydrostatic Bellows; with Description and Diagram, including a weight. Price 21s. in a box.

A Sectional Model of the Steam Engine; by which the motions of the several parts, its internal structure, and the high and low pressure principles, can be easily explained. Price 2l. 2s. in a box.

A Pyrometer, for Showing the Expansion of Metals. Price 15s.

Diagrams in Wood, to Illustrate Dr. Lardner's Euclid. Solid Geometry, Book I. Price 7s. 6d.

Geometrical Solids. The Five

Regular Solids—1. Tetrahedron; 2. Octahedron; 3. Icosahedron; 4. Hexahedron; 5. Pentagonal Dodecahedron; 6. Rhomboidal Dodecahedron; 7. Bipyramidal Dodecahedron; 8. Trapezohedron. PYRAMIDS.—9. Triangular; 10. Quadrilateral; 11. Hexagonal; 12. Octagonal. PRISMS.—13. Triangular; 14. Quadrilateral; 15. Hexagonal; 16. Octagonal.—17. Sphere; 18. Cylinder; 19. Cone. The Set in a box, 9s.

Another Set, containing the Conic Sections. Price 16s.

A Larger Set. Price 1l. 11s. 6d.

An Instrument for Teaching Geometry; convertible into a Theodolite, Spirit Level, Hadley's Sextant, and Wollaston's Goniometer. Price 2l. 12s. 6d. in a box.

A Pair of Large Dividers, for making Diagrams on a black board. Price 4s.

MINASI'S MECHANICAL DIAGRAMS.

For the Use of Lecturers, and Schools. Complete in Five Numbers, each containing Three Sheets of Diagrams, price 3s. each Number, coloured, illustrating the following subjects:—1 & 2. Composition of Forces.—3. Equilibrium.—4 & 5. Levers.—6. Steelyard, Brady Balance, and Danish Balance.—7. Wheel and Axle.—8. Inclined plane.—9, 10, 11. Pulleys.—12. Hunter's Screw.—13 & 14. Toothed Wheels.—15. Combination of the Mechanical Powers.

The Diagrams are printed on large sheets of paper, measuring 2 feet 11 inches by 2 feet. This size will be found suited for large lecture rooms.

CHEMISTRY.TURNER'S ELEMENTS OF CHEMISTRY. Eighth Edition.

Edited by JUSTUS LIEBIG, M.D., Professor of Chemistry in the University of Giessen, and WILLIAM GREGORY, M.D., Professor of Chemistry in the University of Edinburgh. 1 vol. 8vo. 1l. 10s. (See page 1.)

Also, in Two Parts.

PART I.—INORGANIC CHEMISTRY. 15s.

II.—ORGANIC CHEMISTRY. 15s.

GREGORY'S OUTLINES OF CHEMISTRY, for the use of Students. By WILLIAM GREGORY, M.D., Professor of Chemistry in the University of Edinburgh. Second Edition, revised and enlarged. Complete in 1 vol. foolscap 8vo, 12s. cloth. Part I.—(INORGANIC CHEMISTRY), 5s. cloth. Part II.—(ORGANIC CHEMISTRY), 7s. cloth.

"This is beyond comparison the best introduction to Chemistry which has yet appeared. The directions for preparing substances are usually confined to the best method, so that brevity and selectness are combined. The size and price of this little work, as well as its intrinsic merits, commend it to every student of Chemistry."—Lancet.

WILL'S OUTLINES OF THE COURSE OF QUALITATIVE ANALYSIS FOLLOWED IN THE GIESSEN LABORATORY. By HENRY WILL, Ph.D., Professor Extraordinary of Chemistry in the University of Giessen. With a Preface, by BARON LIEBIG, 8vo, 6s.; or with the Tables mounted on linen, 7s.

"The present work contains an accurate description of the course I have followed in my laboratory, with great advantage, for twenty-five years."—BARON LIEBIG.

PARNELL'S ELEMENTS OF CHEMICAL ANALYSIS, QUALITATIVE AND QUANTITATIVE. By EDWARD ANDREW PARNELL, Author of "APPLIED CHEMISTRY; IN ARTS, MANUFACTURES, AND DOMESTIC ECONOMY." Second Edition, revised throughout, and enlarged by the addition of 200 pages 8vo, 14s. cloth.

PARNELL'S APPLIED CHEMISTRY; IN MANUFACTURES, ARTS, AND DOMESTIC ECONOMY. With numerous Wood Engravings and Illustrations.

Vol. I., 13s. cloth lettered, contains:—

PRELIMINARY OBSERVATIONS—GAS ILLUMINATION—PRESERVATION OF WOOD—DYEING AND CALICO PRINTING.

Vol. II., 13s., cloth lettered, contains:—

GLASS—STARCH—TANNING—CAOUTCHOUC—BORAX AND THE BORACIC LAGOONS—SOAP—SULPHUR AND SULPHURIC ACID, AND SODA.

PETZOLDT'S LECTURES TO FARMERS ON AGRICULTURAL CHEMISTRY. People's Edition. 1 vol. small 8vo., 4s. 6d. sewed; 5s. cloth.

"The author does not overload his subject with needless details, which is the vice of some such books, but he confines the reader to those points only which he ought to be well acquainted with, and these he explains in a clear and simple way.—Gardener's Chronicle.

LIEBIG'S RESEARCHES ON THE CHEMISTRY OF FOOD. 8vo, 5s. 6d. cloth. (See page 3.)

LIEBIG'S FAMILIAR LETTERS ON CHEMISTRY, AND ITS RELATIONS TO COMMERCE, PHYSIOLOGY, AND AGRICULTURE. Third Edition. Foolsap 8vo, 4s. 6d.

LIEBIG'S FAMILIAR LETTERS ON CHEMISTRY, SECOND SERIES. THE PHILOSOPHICAL PRINCIPLES AND GENERAL LAWS OF THE SCIENCE. Foolsap 8vo, 5s.

"The plan of the Letters is as simple and intelligible as their style. The author sets out with a general consideration of Chemistry; and of the rank to which it is entitled among the other sciences; treats shortly of chemical affinity and chemical equivalents, illustrating the symbols and formulæ by which these affinities are expressed; explains the atomic theory; considers the relation of heat, light, electricity, and gravity to chemical force, and shows wherein these forces differ from what has been called the vital principle; and lastly discusses the transformations—fermentation, putrefaction, and decay—which take place in organic bodies when removed from the influence of vitality."—Chambers' Journal. Notice of Second Series.

LIEBIG'S ANIMAL CHEMISTRY; OR, CHEMISTRY IN ITS APPLICATIONS TO PHYSIOLOGY AND PATHOLOGY. Third Edition, almost wholly re-written. Part I., 6s. 6d. cloth. (See page 4.)

PLATTNER ON THE USE OF THE BLOWPIPE IN THE EXAMINATION OF MINERALS, ORES, FURNACE PRODUCTS, AND OTHER METALLIC COMBINATIONS. Translated, with Notes, by DR. J. S. MUSPRATT. With a Preface by PROFESSOR LIEBIG. Illustrated by numerous Wood Engravings. 1 vol. 8vo, 10s. 6d.

FRESENIUS AND WILL'S NEW METHODS OF ALKALIMETRY, AND OF DETERMINING THE COMMERCIAL VALUE OF ACIDS, AND MANGANESE. 12mo, 4s. cloth.

"This little work will prove of the highest importance to Calico Printers, Bleachers, Dyers, Manufacturers of Soap, Paper, and Prussiate of Potash; also to Chemists, and to dealers in Alkalies, Acids, &c."

INSTRUCTIONS FOR MAKING UNFERMENTED BREAD; with Observations on its Properties, Medicinal and Economic. By a PHYSICIAN. Thirteenth Edition, containing the New Formulae. 8vo, 3d.; or, Postage free, 5d.

"The author, by directing attention to a subject of the highest importance in a social and economical, as well as a medical point of view, has rendered a great service to the public."—Edinburgh Medical and Surgical Journal.

"We recommend this Pamphlet to the serious attention of the public."—Times.

SURGICAL ANATOMY.

MORTON'S SURGICAL ANATOMY OF THE PRINCIPAL REGIONS. Royal 8vo. Plates and Woodcuts.

PERINÆUM. Four Plates and Three Woodcuts. 6s. plain, 7s. 6d. coloured.

GROIN, FEMORAL AND POPLITEAL REGIONS. Eight Plates and Eleven Wood Engravings. 9s. plain, 13s. coloured.

EIGHT PLATES OF THE HEAD AND NECK, THE AXILLA, AND BEND OF THE ELBOW. 13s. coloured, 7s. 6d. plain.

"The production (volume on the Groin) is altogether one which we can conscientiously recommend to the working student. . . . The work will constitute a complete and elaborate treatise, that cannot fail to be highly useful to surgeons in general."—British and Foreign Medical Review.

"The present work (Inguinal Hernia) is a worthy successor to those on the Groin and Perinæum, and will prove, we do not doubt, as great a favourite with students."—Med.-Chir. Rev., April, 1841.

CUTLER'S SURGEON'S PRACTICAL GUIDE IN DRESSING AND IN THE METHODIC APPLICATION OF BANDAGES. Second Edition. 100 Engravings on Wood. Foolscep 8vo, 6s. 6d.

"This appears to be a valuable little treatise. The author seems to have spared no pains in procuring correct descriptions of all the surgical apparatus at present employed in bandaging and dressing, both at home and abroad. He has given numerous illustrations in the form of well-executed Woodcuts, and has altogether produced what we conceive to be a very useful, and by no means an expensive publication."—Medical Gazette, Nov. 10, 1834.

HIND'S TWENTY PLATES OF FRACTURES OF THE EXTREMITIES. Second Edition. Folio, 1l. 4s. cloth.

PORTRAIT OF ROBERT LISTON, ESQ. 2s. 6d.

MATERIA MEDICA.

BALLARD AND GARROD'S ELEMENTS OF MATERIA
MEDICA AND THERAPEUTICS. One volume 8vo, with Diagrams on Wood. 12*s.* cloth.

"As a manual for students, it is the best that has yet appeared, and will be found to contain much matter well worthy of perusal by the practitioner."—Ranking's Report.

PHYSIOLOGY.

MULLER'S ELEMENTS OF PHYSIOLOGY. Translated, with Notes, by WILLIAM BALY, M.D. Steel Plates and very numerous Engravings on Wood. 2 thick vols. 8vo. 20s. each.

"We do, however, recommend it very strongly, and we have no hesitation in saying that it will supersede all other works as a Text Book for Lectures, and one of reference for students. It steers a middle course between the superficial brevity of many of our modern works, and the pleonastic and metaphysical jargon of Burdach."—Med. Char. Review, April, 1838.

. A Supplement to Volume II. will be published shortly.

MURPHY'S (PROFESSOR) LECTURES ON NATURAL AND DIFFICULT PARTURITION. One volume 8vo, with numerous Engravings on Wood. 9s. cloth.

"The whole of these Lectures, which refer to difficult and laborious labours, and to the application of instruments, will be found of the very greatest value."—Lancet.
